ORCHIDS

COMMERCIAL ORCHIDS.

[A paper by J. A. Newsham, New Orleans, read before the Society of Southern Florists, at the New Orleans convention, February 14 to 16, 1907.]

In presenting a paper on this subject I do so with a full understanding that it must be done in as few words as is possible. With a class of plants so large and varied as the orchid family, comprising, as it does, many thousand varieties, some, both beautiful and curious, are not available for florists' use. Many are not available because of their scarcity and high price; others, from the fact of their shyness to bloom under the treatment the ordinary florist has time and facility to give them; so that at the present time the number of varieties grown for cut flowers is limited to a few that are easily managed and not too expensive to buy in quantity. But I am sure the time will come, and before long, when there will be many more varieties added to the orchid family, or the present list of orchids for florists' use, especially when their requirements become better understood by the general run of florists, without, necessarily, being expert orchid growers.

When we look back over a few years of the cultivation of the rose and carnation, we can count the few men who, then, really made a success of their cultivation, while today they are being grown in every part of the country by the thousands, by men who have not spent a lifetime in learning how to grow them successfully. So it will be with the orchid, which is a plant that will stand rougher treatment than either of them without showing the immediate effect of it or ruining the season's crop of flowers, as is often done by a little mismanagement of either the carnation or the rose. At the same time, when once an orchid gets in a bad condition, it is often better to throw it away than try and bring it around again; and this is one reason why so many have failed to make orchid growing pay, one-half of the space being filled with plants which bring no returns, and, in most cases, only make a breeding place for all kinds of insects and fungus diseases to ruin the balance. Of course there may be exceptions, in which a plant may be of some special value, and may pay for time and attention necessary to restore it to a healthy condition.

A Word to the Beginner.

The first question for the beginner to ask is, "What kinds of plants should I start with?" My advice to him is to start with what is generally termed semi-established plants; that is, plants which have been recently imported and have already commenced to grow; and get them from a first-class house, that makes a specialty of this part of the business. By doing so, one not only learns how they are potted, but will also stand the chance of securing special varieties among them, as they are not all collected while in bloom, and many of the finest and most valuable varieties have turned up among imported plants. For this reason, one may often buy old established plants cheaper than newly imported ones; but he may be sure, all the good varieties have been picked out of them. While I have made a list of varieties to grow especially for cut flowers, I am sure it will pay anyone who runs a store to grow a nice collection of other varieties as an advertisement, using them when in bloom for the decoration of his

I have seen them do well under many conditions. I prefer pots or hanging pans, mostly for their lasting quality, for, although they will grow as well in wooden baskets, there is always the drawback that they commence to rot and get full of fungus, and it is not an easy matter to take them out, as the roots become grown around them, and to put them in a larger basket without taking the old ones away is sure, sooner or later, to end badly on account of the fungus from the rotten wood. With pots there is not so much danger, as they last much longer and are cheaper. For potting material peat is good where it can be easily procured; if not, fern roots and live sphagnum moss is all right. The pots ought to be more than half full of broken pots and charcoal and the plants must be firmly potted and staked until they have become established. This is important, for if they are loose and shaky they seldom do well; and, by all means, use as small pots as possible, especially with newly imported plants, or any that have gotten in bad condition at the roots from overwatering or any other cause.

Watering.

Watering is one of the most important things in orchid culture. Too much store, window or any other purpose, as they always command attention and are talked about wherever rare flowers are mentioned.

Potting.

Orchids are grown in many ways; in ordinary pots and pans, baskets made from wood, in earthenware, and the small growing kinds do well on blocks of wood.

water at certain seasons is the cause of many failures, especially in winter, during their resting period. In our climate, where we do not have to fire very hard, little water is necessary; perhaps a little twice a week is sufficient; just enough to keep them from shriveling. I make a rule in the winter, when I have any doubts as to a plant's wanting water, to pass it by until the next time; and in the summer, under the same conditions, I water it then. I have found it a good rule, not only with orchids, but also with the other plants. Of course, weather conditions have a great deal to do with the amount of water needed. In the summertime with outdoor plants and good drainage there is not much fear of overwatering, twice a day not being too much for established plants or plants in baskets or blocks. Of course newly potted or imported plants would not require it so heavy until they commence to grow freely.

Resting.

Resting is also important with many varieties, especially cattleyas, laelias and dendrobiums, also some varieties of the oncidium. When a plant has about finished its growth is the time to reduce the watering by degrees until you give just enough to keep the bulbs plump. Keep them in that condition until they commence to show flower, when they require a little more water; but never get them soaked or the buds are liable to turn yellow and fall before opening. Especially with a low temperature after flowering they generally commence to grow, and this is a good time to pot them or change them in any way needed.

General Management.

As we cannot grow any of the cool orchids in the southern climate, we need should be much moister and needs less ventilation. This class, most of them not having bulbs, cannot be allowed to become dry or they will lose their foliage, except dendrobiums, which may be wintered in the same house as cattleyas, as they require about the same treatment while resting.

The American varieties do better outdoors under slat shades from the first part of April until they have completed their growth, when they must be brought under cover, as a wet season would start them into growth again. I have not given the East Indian varieties a thorough trial outdoors during the summer months; but with most of the varieties we can make more growth in one year than they can in the north in two without interfering with their blooming.

List of Varieties.

Cattleya Trianae, from Colombia, is considered one of the best varieties for florists' use, being one of the easiest to grow, varies in color from pure white to deep rose, and blooms here from November to April and sometimes twice.

Cattleya Mendelli, from Colombia, about the same color, somewhat larger, and blooms a little later than C. Trianae.

Cattleya Mossiae, Venezuela, varies much in size and color, some varieties being almost double the size of others.

is not often seen in this condition. By growing it in pans or baskets hung close to the glass and given a little more heat, it will bloom quite freely during July and August.

Cattleya labiata, Brazil, is the best for autumn flowers and an easy one to manage; while not so fine a variety as some, it comes in when flowers are scarce, and should be grown on that account.

Cattleya Percivaliana is considered a small variety of C. Mossiae, with a shade darker lip, and is the latest of the large-flowering cattleyas to bloom.

Cattleya Skinneri, Central America, is the best of the smaller flowering cattleyas; blooms in the spring, is of a deep rose color, and bears as many as eighteen flowers on a spike.

Laelia purpurata, Brazil, is a fine variety, blooming in the summer months, but is becoming scarce.

Laelia anceps, Mexico, and its many varieties, is easy to grow; blooms in the fall with long spikes, which makes it always useful in any kind of work or decorations; in color from pure white to deep rose.

Phalaenopsis amabilis, Philippine islands, is one of the finest orchids to grow in this section, bearing large spikes of almost pure white flowers in the spring months, when they are always in demand. It is considered rather hard to manage, and, as it comes from a hot climate, is grown too close and confined in the attempt to keep up the temperature, especially in the winter time, where much fire heat is required. But here we have plants which only receive fire heat a few times during the winter, the temperature often going below 45 degrees, and still these plants do not seem to suffer in the least. They are grown in an open house all the time, where everything is left open night and day, except when there is fear of a frost; and they have been grown that way for years.

Phalaenopsis Schilleriana, from the same country as the last, is a stronger grower, bearing a spike with as high as 100 flowers at one time; color, from pale to dark pink.

Vanda caerulea, northern India, is one of the few blue orchids, varying from light to dark blue. It is always salable.

Dendrobium nobile, India, is one of the oldest varieties, easy to grow and flower.

Dendrobium Wardianum, Burmah, is also an old favorite.

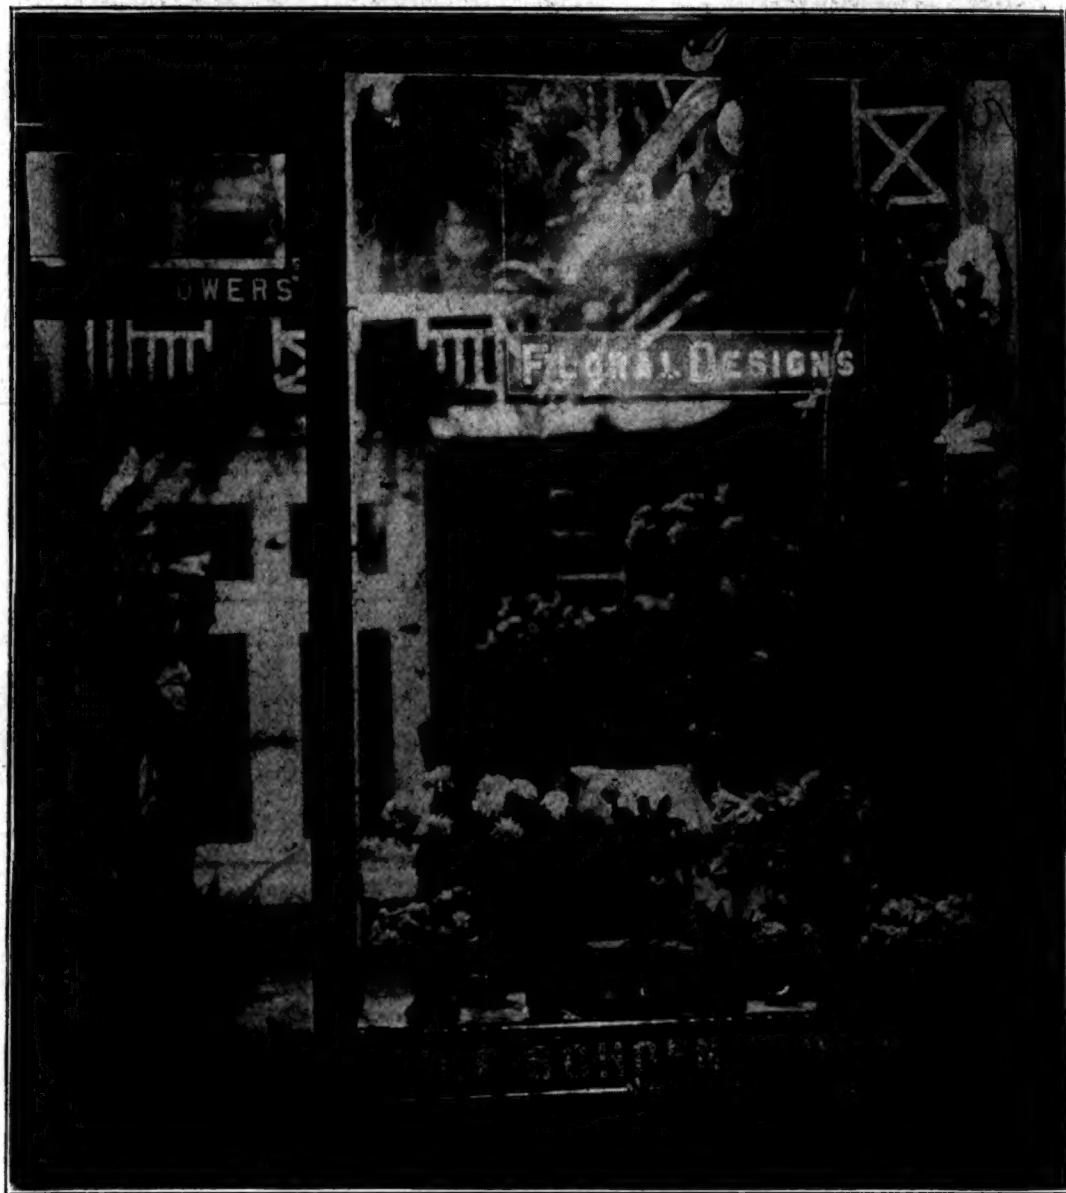

Dendrobium Phalaenopsis, New Guinea, is one of the best for cut flowers, giving spikes sometimes two feet long, with from twenty to twenty-four flowers of various shades of pink, and lasts a long time in bloom.

Dendrobium formosum, Burmah, is a good one to grow, bearing white flowers which are much used for bridal bouquets.

Odontoglossum citrosum, Mexico, is about the only one of this class we can manage here; should be given the same treatment as Laelia anceps, and gives long spikes of light pink flowers.

Oncidium crispum, O. spendidum and O. varicosum are three good varieties to grow, bearing long spikes of yellow or spotted flowers which are fine in decorations.

There are, of course, many others which may be grown, but I think this list will give as good results as a larger one.

DONLAN ON EXHIBITIONS.

In an address before the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, Tarrytown, N. Y., February 26, J. I. Donlan spoke in part as follows:

To our mind the vast majority of public flower shows display mostly, and merely, the egotism or conceit of the flower grower. To be sure, the very highest cultural art is shown at these exhibitions, but that is all; and, as a climax to this self-satisfactory sufficiency, no attempt whatever is made to satisfy the hungry ambitions of the great multitude. The grower naturally stands exultingly, admiring his symmetrically arranged rows of vases of flowers or mounds of plants over which he has labored day and night all the year to have them reach their perfection; but his extreme monotony in arranging these pets compels the average visitor to sniff with a casual glance, pass along to see all that is of interest to them in a few moments and go out to spread the news that, "It is just the same or not even as good as last year." There is something radically wrong in all this and we are glad of this opportunity of submitting it to the attention of schedule compilers and the society in general.

Every plant or flower has attractive beauty about it. The aim of every grower or dealer in them should be to show that attractiveness to best advantage, and in doing so he accomplishes an inestimable benefit, for he not only educates, but creates a desire. If the growers must have their crudely formal displays, in order to satisfy a mistaken idea of the best methods of showing superiority of culture, then a day should be set apart where the whole, or as much as possible, of the exhibits should be rearranged, in competition, from a utility or artistic standpoint. We contend that inasmuch as the majority of stock is grown and exhibited with a view to its adaptability to certain decorative purposes, that that adaptability should be exemplified or portrayed.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Petunias.

If you are propagating petunias from cuttings be careful not to leave them in the sand too long or until they become hard. Place in 2½-inch pots in light, rather sandy compost and give them a light bench. In the case of seedlings, a portion may be put in pots for special orders, but they do equally as well in flats and grow like weeds when transplanted from them. It saves a great amount of labor and watering to use the flats. They may also be pricked out in frames with a gentle bottom heat after the middle of April. Many other plants may be treated in the same way, including asters, stocks, verbenas, Phlox Drummondii, salvias and many others. The flats have the advantage of being more readily handled, more especially if plants are needed for store trade.

Cannas.

While there is still good time in which to start the roots of cannas, if you want good, stocky stuff they can be taken from under the benches, or wherever they have been stored, and brought into heat. Some growers lay the whole clumps on the benches and divide them after they start to grow. A much better plan is to divide them, leaving one sound eye and a few roots for each plant. These can be potted at once into 4-inch pots and if treated carefully only a small proportion will fail to start. They must be kept somewhat on the dry side at the start or many will rot.

A better plan is to lay the individual pieces on a bench, closely together, where there is some bottom heat and where a top heat of 60 degrees at night is maintained. Cover the bench with moss and scatter a little leaf-mold or moss over the roots. Keep them syringed twice a day, but do not soak them with the hose. In about three weeks growth and roots will be starting freely and they can be potted up. Treated in this way excellent stock can be had with less trouble and expense than by any other method we have tried.

Caladium Esculentum.

Roots of that popular subtropical plant, Caladium esculentum, can be started any time during the month of March. The largest roots are not the most desirable. A brisk, moist heat is needed to make them break well. Set them on a bench in the same way as cannas, but if possible give them more bottom heat. Pack closely between the roots with moss, leaf-mold or sand. They will be ready for potting in about half the time cannas are if kept rather more moist at the root. If space on benches is valuable, you can delay starting them until after Easter this year and still get first-class plants.

Genistas.

Plants of genista intended for Easter which have been kept well clipped and bushy should show color by the middle of the month, in which case they will be along in good season. While these plants are quite attractive and sell well, they do not keep so well in the dwelling house as azaleas and some other plants. They should never be grown warm, for if forced the flowers will simply not keep at all.

If a supply of cuttings has not been put in of these, a batch should now be placed in the sand. Do not place them in a warm house. A bench which suits carnation cuttings will root them well. If potted and grown along they will make nice 4-inch plants for next fall. Genistas need frequent pinching to keep them bushy. In the case of larger plants the simplest method is to clip them with a pair of shears several times during the summer months. Do not attempt to plant them outdoors in summer. They are hard things to lift and will lose about all their foliage, even if carefully treated.

Azaleas.

If the buds of azaleas are beginning to show color now they will come along in time for Easter in a cool house. Later plants should be kept in a warm, moist house and freely syringed until they show color, after which they are to be kept dry overhead and rather cooler.

If you have any plants unsold from the earlier batches, pick off the seeds and give them a warm house to make some growth in. They can be planted outdoors in a sunny spot, where you can reach them with the hose, and they will make fine stock for potting up in the fall.

Ferns.

The majority of florists grow, or ought to grow, some ferns. A large variety is neither necessary nor desirable, for the call is only for a few sorts. Of these Adiantum cuneatum holds first place and is indispensable where bouquet or funeral work is made. If it is possible that some of your ferns have not been overhauled for a long time, before the spring rush starts in is a good time in which to pot them. If large, chop the clumps through with a sharp spade. Disentangle the roots and repot in sizes sufficient to allow an inch of compost around the clump. In the case of plants in small pots, all they will need is to have the crocks removed from the roots and any loose soil shaken out before being repotted.

A suitable soil for ferns consists of equal portions of leaf-mold and loam, with sand added. For vigorous growing sorts more loam and less of the leaf compost can be used. Do not use any animal manure or chemical fertilizer of any sort. Plants, however, with the pots well filled with roots enjoy an occasional watering with liquid manure. Ferns of all sorts need a shady house and a moist atmosphere. In summer they grow splendidly in coldframes under sashes shaded with kerosene and white lead. Snails are sometimes troublesome among adiantums. A dusting of air-slaked lime on the bench will clear out most of them. A little should also be dusted among the crowns. If the pots can be moved from the bench and boiling water poured over it many will be killed.

A few desirable ferns to grow in addition to Adiantum cuneatum are A. gracillimum, A. Charlotte, Pteris cretica Mayii, Pteris serrulata cristata, Cyrtomium falcatum, Cibotium Schiedeii, the finest tree fern for house culture; Pteris adiantoides, Pteris Wimsetti, Aspidium tsussimense, Davallia stricta and the various nephrolepis, such as Bostoniensis, Whitmani, Scottii and Elegantissima.

Care of Seedlings.

Many of the earlier sown batches of annuals will now be ready to pinch off. This work should not be delayed a day longer than absolutely necessary. We are mostly prone to sow our seeds too thickly and a few days' crowding will ruin many of the little seedlings. Shade with cheese-cloth or newspapers for a few days after the pricking off. Do not overwater them and, on the other hand, be careful they are not allowed to get dusty dry. Use a watering pot in lieu of a hose for watering purposes. Keep all flats of seedlings which are not pricked out well up to the light to keep them stocky.

Brief Reminders.

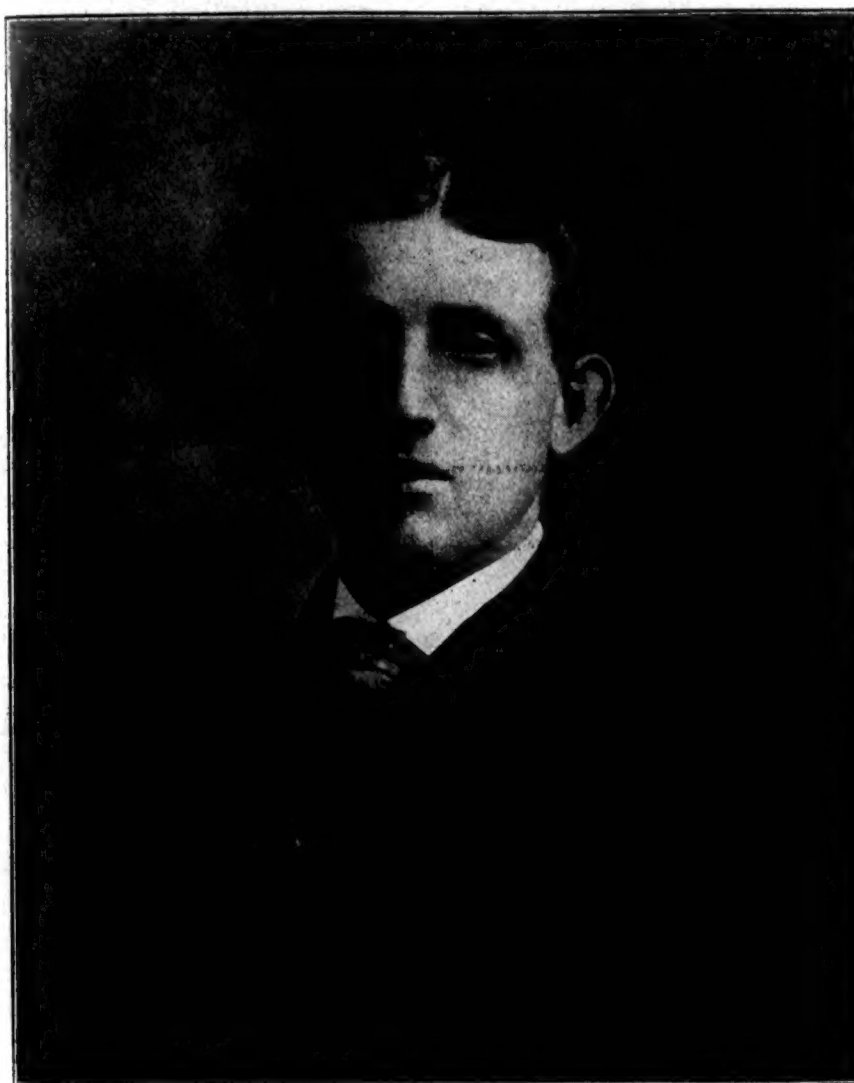

Buds of Easter lilies should now be starting to droop. Those which still point upwards need a little hurrying. Now is the time to get in the extra forcing needed, not the week before Easter.

Sow seeds of Canterbury bells, wall-flowers, Campanula persicifolia and C. pyramidalis, and any of the perennial delphiniums if you want strong plants by fall.

Marguerites should not be subjected to any forcing. The flowers of these remain fresh on the plant a long time if they are not allowed to become dry. Flowers should now be opening.

If you see color in the buds of Rambler roses by March 15 you should have them in season for Easter.

THE GLASS MARKET.

The jobbers of greenhouse sizes of window glass who are advertising in the REVIEW find the demand considerably ahead of last year. Ever since the beginning of the season the number of inquiries has been greater than usual. There are not so many large orders being placed, but a much greater number of smaller orders. All through the country growers are adding one or two houses.

The price of glass has been stiffening steadily since the strength of the demand became apparent. The window glass industry seems in a strong position this spring and manufacturers are reluctant to cut greenhouse sizes. It appears certain that when the end of the season's fire comes, in June, there will be no great stock of greenhouse sizes on hand to meet the demand, which will continue steady, probably clear through September. The result will be that prices during the summer are likely to see a still further advance.

CHARLES KNOPF.

Charles Knopf, of Richmond, Ind., has loved flowers ever since he was old enough to admire their beauty, and was always near them whenever he had the opportunity. He first started in the florists' work in Richmond about fifteen years ago, at the Cascade Greenhouses, and from there he went to the E. G. Hill place. It was here that he acquired a general knowledge of the business and the raising of new carnations. He remained there about two and one-half years, and then went back to the Cascade Greenhouses. While there he discovered the value in the carnation Dorothy, but it was not a seedling of his own raising. Shortly after being at this place the second time he saw a good opportunity to establish a wholesale business at the E. T. Grave place in Richmond, which at that time was only two small houses, more for the pleasure of Mrs. Grave than for profit. Mr. Knopf went to work for Mrs. Grave as grower and manager. He then bought the variety Dorothy, in a short time proved its worth and worked up stock and introduced it to the trade. It proved to be a valuable variety for the trade, as it is still quite extensively grown in certain localities. He remained with this firm five years and then established the firm of the B. K. & B. Floral Co., of which he is manager.

Mr. Knopf has raised many seedlings and has a number now on the place. Sarah A. Hill, white, is his best sort and shortly to be introduced to the trade. It is named for the sister of E. G. Hill, who is associated with the Hill company, and who is as well informed in trade matters as any other member of the firm. She has charge of the office work, and is usually the first to greet the visitor. If the carnation achieves a place as high in the estimation of the craft as has the lady whose name it bears, Mr. Knopf can ask nothing more.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

The bureau of publicity of the Mannheim exposition of 1907 sends out the following:

A great horticultural exposition, in combination with an international exposition of art, will be opened May 1 at Mannheim, on the Rhine, Germany. It may be of greatest interest that a number of most exquisite artists participate in this arrangement by creating special gardens, each one promising to be remarkable because of its originality. Probably modern horticultural art will obtain numerous new incitations and great impulse from this exhibition.

The exposition at Mannheim is especially a national undertaking, yet American gardeners will have opportunity to exhibit in several departments. International are the exhibits of orchids, cacti, modern horticulture and the exhibits of fruits and greens. England, France and even the primitive forests of South America will contribute to the exhibits of orchids. Besides cultivated plants from England and France there will be exhibited, as curiosities, the strange forms of wild orchids, gathered with difficulty in Mexico, Brazil and on the banks of the Orinoco river.

The cactus exhibit will contain a great number of interesting and peculiar plants, representing a rich collection from all tropical countries. There will be, for instance, gigantic cacti from Mexico and South America.

The exhibition of horticultural novelties, by cultivators from Germany and foreign countries, surely will be of greatest attraction. The progress of American horticulture in fruits and plants, as well as in greens, will be shown here.

Eight special exhibits will give opportunity to all countries of the world to show by their products their degrees of advancement in fruit cultivation. America, a country which sends every year many thousands of quintals of fruit to Germany, will take justifiable interest in exhibiting its products at Mannheim and in demonstrating the different methods of preparing them for a long voyage. People will be interested in the different methods of preserving fruits and greens and the various forms of cooling apparatus.

Cuttings taken from the sand after this date can be potted right into 2½-inch pots and left in those pots until time for planting out. When these are set on a bench near the ventilators, or where a draught will strike them, the pots should be plunged about half-way in sand. This will retard drying out and will be a great help next month.

Keep the young plants sprayed with the tobacco extracts, to prevent aphids or thrips from getting a foothold on them, the same as you do the blooming plants. Dusting them with tobacco dust will be found a great help, too, though we prefer the spraying as being more effective and cleaner. Syringe them hard, at least once each week, to keep off red spider and to keep off rust, dust them with air-slaked lime. Be sure they have an abundance of sunlight and ventilation to promote sturdiness.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Shifting Young Stock.

If you propagated a lot of carnation cuttings early and have had them potted six weeks or so you will have to give them a shift within the next few weeks. The first two weeks in March is the best time for this, as a rule, because it gives the plants plenty of time to become re-established and to make a good growth before time for planting out.

Don't think that because the young plants may look young and tender and not excessively pot-bound that they will stand all right in the small pots. Young carnation plants want to be kept continually on the move. By that I do not mean that they should be induced to make a large, rank growth, but it should be slow and steady and should not be checked by being pot-bound, which means not only starved, but later on it means frequent drying out at the roots during warm spring days. The latter is as injurious as the first named, if not worse.

We like to plant from pots and prefer shifting the young plants from 2-inch into 3-inch pots and planting from these into the field. There are several reasons for this. When planting from pots you have a good ball of earth and you have every root that belongs to the plant intact. Taking the plant from the greenhouse out into the open field, subjecting it to the strong sunshine and the drying spring winds, is trying enough for the young plants, without having many of the roots torn or cut and, in many cases, most of the soil shaken from them. If there is no rainfall for a few days the suffering is not so intense when a good ball of earth is kept intact, nor will it begin so early as it will when the soil is shaken from the roots. You will find, too, that this ball of earth will hold together in the fall when you dig the plants for housing and it is a great help at that time. I have also found that the roots on such plants will be more bunched and you can get more of them with the plants, when digging them.

Another way, which is practiced by many large growers and which is a modification of the above, is to pot the cuttings into 2-inch pots and about this time plant them in three inches of soil on the bench, setting about three inches apart each way. This method will produce fine, strong young plants and the 3-inch pots are dispensed with. The ball from the 2-inch pot will hold together when taken up to be planted in the field, but, of course, many roots are broken and the transfer is accompanied with more suffering than when planting is done from pots. The growth is more apt to be rank and soft under this method, too, which is not desirable. There will not be so much drying of the soil as in the pots, which is a good feature and insures a steady growth. Either of these methods is commendable, though we prefer the pot method. We do not approve of planting the rooted cuttings right on the bench. The roots run out too long and are mangled too much when taking up the plants.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

I shall grow carnations in benches next year for the first time, having grown them under glass, but in the ground. I want to get the right kind of soil, but I cannot get rotted sod or cow manure here. I can get a rich, black, sandy loam, almost silt. What shall I put with that? Leaf-mold is obtainable.

A. L. H.

There is no use describing what we consider the ideal carnation soil in this locality, since you say you cannot secure the two principal parts that we use. Rotted sod and cow manure will, without any doubt, make the best soil for carnations; but we have known fine carnations to be grown where one or both of these were lacking. Carnations do not like a rough soil like roses do, but, rather, a porous, well-pulverized soil bordering on a sandy loam, though not too light. When cow manure is added in liberal quantities to enrich it, you have a first-class soil. In your case with such a light soil as you have, if your soil is rich, you will likely get a heavy, rank growth and, unless you can make it heavier with clay or cow manure, you will not get the quality in the blooms you ought to get. The stems, too, will lack in strength.

If your carnations in the natural ground gave fairly good results, then I would use the same soil on the benches. If you use stable manure rake out as much of the straw as you can. Sheep manure would be better; use a big wheelbarrowful of sheep manure to a yard of soil. Turn this over several times, a couple of weeks apart, so it will be well mixed. After filling in the benches, rake in a liberal supply of bone meal, before setting in your plants. After that depend on sheep manure for mulching and bone meal and wood ashes to stiffen the stems and heighten the quality of the blooms. You must watch your plants and give them what they seem to need from time to time. One cannot give explicit directions without knowing more about local conditions, etc., than I do about yours.

HELLENTHAL'S CARNATIONS.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph made in one of the new houses of J. R. Helleenthal, at Columbus. There are four varieties of carnations in the house, Enchantress, Lawson, Lady Bountiful and Ethel Ward. The plants of Enchantress, according to Charles M. Jones, who is grower in charge, are a long way ahead of anything else on the place.

Carnations Registered.

R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, registers The Cardinal, color a deep rich scarlet; habit similar to Estelle but stronger.

The Aristocrat, color a deep, lively cerise; long-stemmed flowers three to three and one-half inches in diameter; habit, no surplus grass, a rapid grower, quite healthy and with long-jointed stems.

Afterglow, color a light, rosy cerise, a three-inch flower, guard petals standing out straight, with high built center; habit, a strong, vigorous grower, stems the length of Aristocrat but more rigid; destined to be grown as largely as Lawson in its time.

DELPHINIUMS.

The larkspurs are useful annual and perennial plants. The boldness of the plant and the beauty of the flowers will always attract attention. They are effective when planted in beds or massed in front of shrubs. In color the flowers range from palest to deepest blue, and include pink, red and white, but rarely yellow.

The culture of larkspur is simple, observes the National Council of Horticulture. They will thrive in almost any good garden soil and in almost any situation. The perennial kinds should be propagated from seed sown early in the fall. In the spring young seedlings, which have been kept during the winter in a coldframe in 2-inch or 3-inch pots, should be available and should be set out two or three feet apart in rich, sandy loam, in a sunny exposure. Perennial larkspurs may also be propagated by taking up an old plant and dividing its roots. In fact, a bed will remain in condition longer if the plants are dug up and replanted every three or four years. The roots or young seedlings may be obtained from most wholesale dealers in hardy plants. Grandiflorum, hybridum, and formosum are the best varieties.

Seed of the annual varieties may be sown in beds or borders in spring or fall, preferably the latter, so germination may take place in early spring. As the seedlings grow they should stand twelve to eighteen inches apart. Seed sown in April will give good results. When the plants are established they should be transplanted to light, rich soil, where they will grow rapidly. The so-called annuals are really hardy biennials, but because they bloom the first season they are treated as annuals. Two successive flower crops may be had the same season from the same plants if the faded flower stems of the first crop are removed. Among the better varieties are Ajacis, which grows from fifteen to eighteen inches high, and has graceful spreading branches, and grandiflorum.

THE ILLINOIS APPROPRIATION.

An amendment to the bill providing the annual appropriations for the University of Illinois has been introduced at Springfield by C. J. Lindley and is now in the hands of the sub-committee on university, of the house appropriations committee, of which Frank J. Heintz, of Jacksonville, is chairman. These gentlemen are looking after the florists' interests, but when the amendment is reported out with the bill mentioned, it must have as broad support as the trade can get for it. The following is the text of the amendment:

That it shall be the duty of the Agricultural Experiment Station to discover and demonstrate the best methods of producing plants, cut flowers and vegetables under glass, and the most effective remedies for disease and insect enemies of the same, to investigate and demonstrate the best varieties and methods of producing ornamental trees, shrubs and plants suitable for public and private grounds in the various soils and climatic conditions of the state, and to disseminate information concerning the same; and that, to carry out the provisions of this section, there be, and hereby is, appropriated the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000.00) for the year 1907 and five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) for the year 1908; provided, that the work undertaken and outlined in this section shall be carried out in lines to be agreed upon by the director of the Agricultural Experiment Station and an advisory committee of five, to be appointed by the Illinois State Florists' Association.

This asking is supported by the Illinois State Florists' Association, Chicago Florists' Club, Horticultural Society of Chicago and all the leading growers of greenhouse products. Each florist should see personally or write his representative at Springfield to support the appropriation asked for.

USING HAND PUMP.

Can water be forced with a hand pump a distance of 350 feet, which includes an elevation of seventy-five feet above the water in the well? J. K. H.

Your question is not quite clear, but if the well is not over thirty feet deep the water can be raised by suction to that height and then forced any distance into the tank. If the well is over thirty feet deep it will be necessary to place the working cylinder of the pump within thirty feet of the water-level in order to make it work. Water can be taken from a well 300 or 400 feet deep, but the working cylinder is usually placed well down, even below the water-level, so that there can never be more than thirty feet suction. Above the working cylinder it is simply a matter of lifting a column of water to the height desired, which simply requires power. While the work in question can be done by hand power, it will be hard, and an engine or windmill should be carefully considered if there is much pumping to be done.

WEILAND & OLINGER PLANT.

The establishment of Weiland & Olinger, at New Castle, Ind., consists of sixteen houses. Ten of them are devoted to tea roses, three to American Beauty and three to carnations. The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made November 20. Enchantress is shown in one of the interior views, Beauty in the other. Peter Weiland gives his personal attention to the Beauties and had a fine crop on for Christmas. He is one of a well-known family of florists, being a son of M. Weiland, of Evanston, Ill., a nephew of Peter Reinberg and related to the Wietor brothers, Adam Zender, John Munro and others in the trade. Mr. Olinger is his partner's brother-in-law. They have, in addition to the range of glass, a big field of peonies of the best varieties, planted for cut flowers. Last season the weather was so unfavorable just at the blooming period that it ruined most of the crop, but the field has now been planted long enough for the stock to be well established and better luck is hoped for this year.

Watering at Planting.

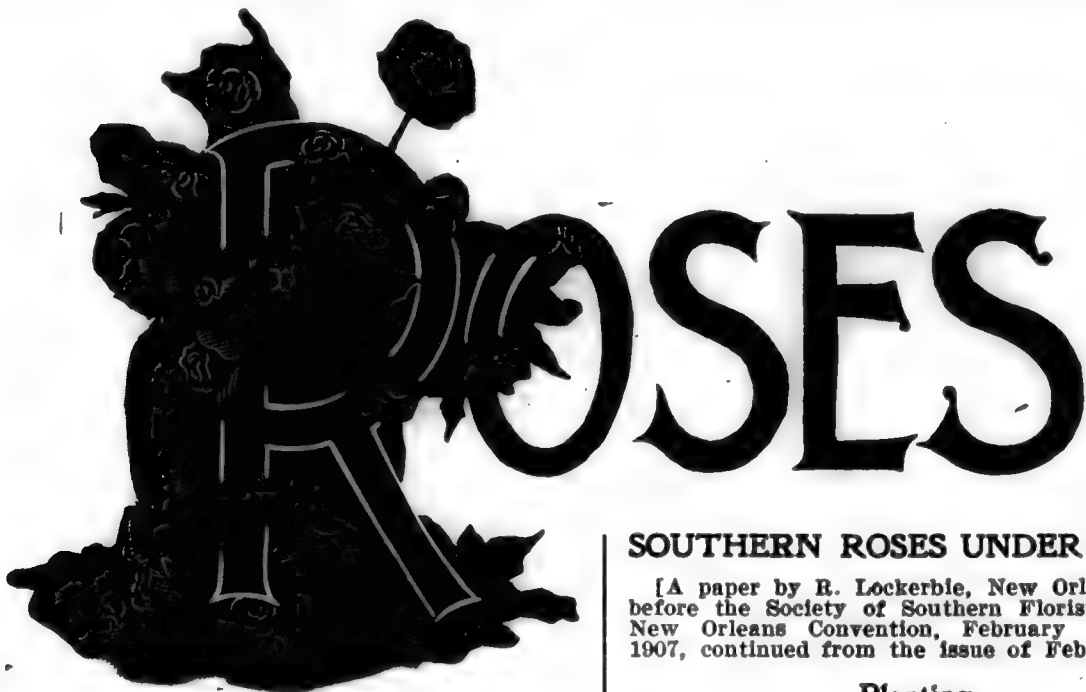

After planting a few rows fill the depressions full of water, so that the bench will be thoroughly saturated to the bottom, and spray the plants. By delaying this watering until a whole bench is planted you may find a great many of the plants have evaporated their moisture and lost the tips of their young shoots. Every bright day the plants will require copious doses of water, in the depressions only, and also a good syringing. Do this in the morning and repeat the syringing after dinner all during the hot summer months. The walks and underneath the benches should also be well wet down a few times each day to neutralize, as far as possible, the enervating effects of the summer heat.

There is a wide margin between the terms, too wet and too dry, but this cannot be measured out in talk, and each grower must study this out for himself. It is difficult to give too much water during the summer months, if the roses are in a good growing condition and the drainage has been properly provided for. It is also well to remember that a rose plant during summer will quickly go to pieces if kept too dry, and is much harder to restore than one that has been kept a little too wet.

The grass and weeds will quickly spring into being, but there need be no haste to remove them. For the first three weeks they serve two important purposes, which more than compensate for the little nourishment they take from the soil. First, they take up any surplus moisture the bench may receive, thus keeping the soil sweet, and second, they act as a shield against the sun's rays, keeping the soil cool and giving the young plants a good chance to start into active growth. After this they must be religiously kept down.

Supporting.

Staking and tying up are next in order. The sooner tea roses are tied up, the better and stronger will the breaks be. Beauties, on the other hand, ought to be left to wander at their own sweet will until the breaks have started from the bottom. It seems the gentle overhang is just enough to induce the eyes at the base to start into active growth. Use wire stakes three and one-half to four feet long for tea roses and six feet long for Beauties, and tie each stake to an overhead wire running the whole length of the bed, over each row of plants. Keep the plants always neatly

SOUTHERN ROSES UNDER GLASS.

[A paper by R. Lockerbie, New Orleans, read before the Society of Southern Florists, at the New Orleans Convention, February 14 to 16, 1907, continued from the issue of February 28.]

Planting.

The operation of planting is simple, but must be well done. Insert the plant well beneath the surface of the soil and press it down firmly with both hands. The soil around the plant must then be firmed, leaving a cup-like depression at the base. Roses naturally love a firm footing, but where the soil is of a heavy, clay texture, less firming is necessary than where it is of a loose, sandy nature. In the latter case you can hardly make the soil too firm, so you must let the nature of the soil guide your judgment in the matter. Be careful in all this firming process not to mash the ball of the young plant. I have found no implement so handy for this purpose as a pint beer bottle filled with sand and corked. Like a certain brand of soap, this "just fits the hand," and beats the bare fist or a brick all hollow. Where three men work together, one inserting the plants and the other two using the bottles, a great many can be speedily planted.

GREENFLY AND RED SPIDER.

As spring advances we may look for a rapid increase of greenfly and red spider and special efforts should be made to exterminate them before they become too numerous.

It is almost impossible to fumigate with tobacco as frequently as is necessary to keep greenfly in check, without at the same time causing injury to the flower and foliage to some extent.

The petals of the pink varieties are so easily bleached that heavy fumigation frequently makes them unsalable and, although the injury to the foliage is not so apparent, it is there nevertheless, and a careful microscopic examination will show the injury done.

This method of keeping greenfly in subjection is yet the most commonly used but it is far from being perfect; nor have we as yet found a substitute that can be used with the same freedom and safety.

That cyanide of potassium is more effective and less injurious to bloom and foliage there is no doubt, but many growers show a decided inclination to avoid the attending dangers consequent on the use of this deadly gas. Where plenty of tobacco stems can be had it is a very safe and effective way to keep these under the benches, on the pipes or, in fact, anywhere in the house where they will be out of the way and cause no untidiness. By renewing these periodically greenfly can make no headway and there is not the least danger to even the most delicate leaved plants, such as ferns, spiræas or cinerarias.

If spider is present in the house keep the syringe going on every favorable occasion and, particularly, keep an eye on the young plants, as this is one of the most insidious and injurious pests they have to contend with in their present stage.

tied up, but not too tightly. Remember that the air must circulate freely through, as well as around, the plants.

In about six weeks from planting each young plant should have filled the cup around its base with roots, and the whole bed can then be leveled off and firmed evenly all over. A dusting of air-slaked lime may then be applied and the surface loosened up with a hand cultivator. Repeat this cultivation every week if necessary until the roots reach the surface, when all cultivation must cease. The firming of the soil is necessary to produce fine, large foliage, the proper accompaniment to a first-class bloom.

The Trying Months.

The months of July and August are very trying ones on the young plants. Then we have almost daily many hard thunder showers which, followed by the bright sun, produce a warm, moist atmosphere, causing a soft, rank growth, which is liable to breed trouble later. I would recommend a light mulch of any old, wornout manure at this time by way of protection against the sun's rays and after each shower syringe the plants and wet down the walks. This mulch will preclude the necessity of cultivating the benches so often. Renew it when it gets worn out.

During the summer months top and side ventilators and all doors should be wide open day and night, except during heavy rain storms, when they should be closed just enough to turn the rain.

About October 1 in this latitude is soon enough to close the side ventilators at night, but the ones at the ridge should always be more or less open, according to the state of the weather.

Particular care should also be taken with the watering. The plants will need less water, and should only be syringed in the morning, so that the foliage will be thoroughly dry before night.

October is generally very fickle and is liable to usher in a few very cool nights without much warning, which, unless your heating apparatus is ready for action, will either check the growth of the plants or start a healthy dose of mildew. A check in the growth at this time is a serious matter and something that is to be avoided at all risks. The transition from summer to winter conditions should come gradually and every effort be made to keep the plants healthy and growing.

When the thermometer outdoors falls below 60 degrees at night, a little fire heat is beneficial. Start your fires and open the ventilators a few inches. This insures a good circulation of air, and tends to give the roses that strong, leathery foliage so much desired. Indeed, there are few nights when it is needful to have the ventilators tightly closed, and make it a rule never to have them closed at night unless you are firing. The fuel is not wasted, even if you have to open the ventilators to keep the temperature down.

Temperature.

The best night temperature for tea roses of the Bride and Bridesmaid class is 56 degrees, but, unfortunately, we don't often get it cool enough to reach that mark. Kaiserin and Perle like it a little warmer, and 60 degrees at night suits them well. The Kaiserin is a fine rose for the south, and is just as free during the shorter winter months as The Bride, and in the fall and late spring is far superior to that popular variety. Beauties require a night temperature of 60 degrees and Meteor requires 68 to 70 degrees. Since the advent of Richmond the Meteor has been relegated to the background, but, nevertheless, it is a fine rose for the south.

The day temperature on dull days should run 2 degrees to 5 degrees higher than the night temperature and on bright days the thermometer may go 10 degrees to 20 degrees higher and even more, but with plenty of ventilation on the houses.

The whole subject of ventilating is a particular science in itself. Outdoor conditions must be closely observed and as the temperature begins to rise you must raise the ventilators a little at a time and keep them going up with the mercury. As the temperature begins to fall, so must the ventilators gradually come down. The man who can do this thoroughly under all conditions has mastered one of the most important factors in rose growing.

Syringing.

Other important points are the watering and syringing, two entirely distinct operations. Every morning the beds ought to be closely examined and any dry spots watered before they get a general watering. Conditions are reversed from summer and the beds are easily overwatered. Light, sandy soils will use quite a lot of water, while heavy clay soils are long in drying out and consequently will use less water. Care and judgment must be observed.

Every bright day the plants must be syringed; otherwise red spiders will get in their fine work. A fine spray of water must be so directed as to hit the under side of the foliage, where the spiders congregate. These little pests are faithful to their destiny, "be ye fruitful and multiply," and their instinct leads them to seek the under side of the foliage as the safest spot. To syringe properly, the lower half of the nozzle should be closed with the forefinger, which gives the stream of water a natural upward direction and makes it easier to reach the under side of the leaves.

I again emphasize the necessity of this operation as early as possible in the morning, so that the foliage may be dry before sundown. If the foliage is not thoroughly dry by night it will soon develop a red rust that is baneful in effect and detracts from the market value of the blooms.

It sometimes happens that immediately after syringing the weather becomes cloudy, in which case I would advise putting a little artificial heat in the houses and opening the ventilators a little wider.

You will find the red spider most troublesome on Beauties and roses with hybrid blood in them. Possibly the heavier foliage of these varieties offers a better protection from the force of water. Some growers, in regions where syringing is often impossible for days at a time, use a weak solution of Paris green to keep the spider in check; but I have had little experience with it, so am not competent to advise. Where there is plenty of force of water and enough bright days to allow of syringing twice or three times a week, there will be little trouble with the pest.

SEEN IN NEBRASKA.

The accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph made at the home of J. F. Rosenfield, at West Point, Neb., is interesting for several reasons, not the least of which is the fact that it controverts the general eastern idea of conditions in Nebraska. Those who think of the state as regards horticulture, usually apply to it only the terms properly pertaining to the western and the northwestern counties, where the elevation is as much as 5,000 feet above the sea, where the land is principally sand hills, which give way to the buttes and bad lands of the extreme western part, and where the wind is never weary.

West Point, the home of J. F. Rosenfield, is in Cuming county, in the eastern section of the state. This is a section field has made peonies a specialty since 1884. He now has a collection of 640 varieties. In the block shown in the picture there is just one plant of each variety. They are planted 3x5 feet, all carefully labeled and afford an excellent opportunity for comparison of varieties.

The other illustration shows a hedge of viburnum fifteen feet high and in full bloom, loaded with thousands of flowers. This hedge divides the residence and ornamental grounds from the service buildings of the farm, which also are of a character to impress the visitor with the fact that Mr. Rosenfield has one of the finest locations to be found anywhere in the west.

THE EXPERIMENT STATION.

[A paper by Professor A. C. Beal, of the University of Illinois, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association, at the annual convention, at Bloomington, February 19, 1907.]

President Rudd, in his address to the S. A. F. in 1899, said: "We are not as a class receiving from the experiment stations—institutions established and conducted with public funds and for the public good—the benefits to which we are entitled. For this state of affairs no one is to blame but ourselves. We have neglected to make our wants known in an intelligent manner, and have not accepted gracefully what little work has been done in our behalf."

President Kasting, last year at Dayton, called attention to the work of the experiment stations and advanced the opinion that florists should use their best endeavors to see that the stations are provided with sufficient funds for carrying on their work.

Since there has been a movement in Illinois during the last two years looking toward closer relations between the florists and the State Experiment Station, I thought it might be well at this provided an appropriation of $15,000 annually for establishing and maintaining a station in each state: "It shall be the object and duty of said experiment stations to conduct original researches or verify experiments on the physiology of plants and animals, the diseases to which they are severally subject, with the remedies for the same; the chemical composition of useful plants at their different stages of growth; the comparative advantages of rotative cropping as pursued under varying series of crops; the capacity of new plants or trees for acclimation; the analysis of soils and water; the chemical composition of manures, natural and artificial, with experiments designed to test their comparative effects on crops of different kinds; the adaptation and value of grasses and forage plants; the composition and digestibility of the different kinds of food for domestic animals; the scientific and economic questions involved in the production of butter and cheese; and such other researches or experiments bearing directly on the agricultural industry of the United States as may in each case be deemed advisable, having due regard to the varying conditions and needs of the respective states and territories."

According to the last available report, there are sixty experiment stations in the United States, of which fifty-three receive support from the federal government. Although there are 710 persons engaged in the work of these stations, floriculture is not recognized, and but one person, George Coote, in the Oregon Experiment Station, is specifically charged with experimental work along this line.

During the twenty years that the United States experiment stations have been established in the various states, there have been issued not less than 5,000 bulletins, of which sixty are on floriculture and allied greenhouse subjects. Of these, eight were on outdoor flowers, five on florists' flowers, twenty-four on vegetables under glass, five on diseases and seven on insects affecting greenhouse plants, three on greenhouse management, two on construction, three on electro-horticulture and one on forcing fruit. Of the sixty bulletins issued one was from Illinois, the leading state in floriculture.

A Broad Field.

One of the reasons why more work has not been done for the benefit of the florist is that in many of the stations one man stands for the whole subject of horticulture, and not only would this seem a broad enough field for any man to cover, but, in addition, the position is often linked with either botany, forestry, entomology or agriculture.

If horticulture includes orchids, onions, oranges, apples, bananas, greenhouses, canning factories, cold storage, cover crops, spraying, plant breeding, white fly and landscape gardening, can one man do justice to them all?

In the beginning of this station work, the farmers themselves were indifferent and often prejudiced against it, so that the work had to be made intensely practical, and therefore it was confined to the food products. The result has been that the orchard products were emphasized and the training of the students in the colleges with which these stations were connected was principally along this line. Since the horticulturists have been trained in pomology and their inclinations were in this direction, and, recognizing that no man can obtain recognition in the adapted to apple growing and native plums and cherries are recommended by the state horticultural society. Grapes do well here. The picture shows that there is nothing of the arid character in this section of the state.

time to call attention to the object of experiment stations, what has been accomplished and what in floriculture needs to be done.

Work of the Experiment Stations.

The work of the experiment stations is thus outlined in the Hatch act, which scientific field unless he is a specialist, it is not strange that this line of work has received the most attention and support. Illinois has taken the lead in recognizing the need of specialization in horticulture. In the university one man is charged with the development of the work along each of the following lines: Pomology, vegetable gardening, landscape gardening and floriculture. This institution is therefore better able to carry on investigations in horticulture.

Stations Poorly Equipped.

The chief reason why more work is not done for the florists is that stations have not been properly equipped for carrying on work in floriculture. The Hatch act assumed that the states would provide suitable buildings for the station work. Many states were slow to do this. Illinois did not support its station until 1901. At the present time the station receives from the state $95,000 annually, divided as follows; Animal husbandry, $25,000; soil investigations, $25,000; corn investigations, $15,000; dairy investigations, $15,000; orchard investigations, $15,000. In addition to the above, the college receives $50,000 annually for equipment.

During the last two years the following problems have come to us for solution: A prominent grower of cucumbers under glass appealed to the station for aid to solve a trouble which was destroying his plants and threatening to wipe out a special trade which he had developed in cities all over the northwest. In response to repeated appeals, I was directed to visit him and investigate. I found his plants dying from a bacterial trouble, the organism multiplying in such numbers in the water channels of the stem as to cut off the water supply, so that the plants wilted and died. Having determined the cause of the trouble, we were unable to go further and assist him in what he, above all else, wanted to know—that is, how to get rid of the trouble. We should have been in position to have planned and carried out some experiments in those infected houses. I tried to reserve one of our own small houses for some work on this trouble, but had to yield it to a graduate student for a piece of work for a thesis. The houses we have were built for instructional purposes. We must have separate equipment, especially designed for experimental work.

Last fall some infected leaves of a chrysanthemum were received. After a careful examination no disease was found. Whether we failed to get the fruiting stages of the fungus in the leaves sent, or that the trouble was physiological, due to something out of balance in the growing plant, or that it was caused from something sprayed on the plant, we were unable to determine. A visit to the greenhouses would have furnished the clew.

At the present time in the city of Springfield is a trouble affecting roses, which at first sight a grower would say was due to overwatering, but the trouble is not a new one; three expert growers have come and gone in the establishment, but all failed to solve it. The amount of water has been varied. It affects both grafted and own root plants and also benches with and without bottom heat. The owner, seemingly, has tried everything, yet there is an annual loss of $5,000 on account of not being able to solve it.

An insect especially destructive on Meteor rose was the subject of an investigation by an entomologist who published an excellent scientific account of the life history, but did not tell the growers how to combat it. Here was an excellent opportunity for practical investigations of benefit to the rose growing industry.

President Vaughn, at Washington, spoke of the need of investigations with fertilizers and cut flowers. In addition, some investigations on soils for greenhouse crops need to be undertaken.

Efforts for an Appropriation.

Two years ago the florists of the state went to Springfield and asked for $30,000 to build greenhouses at the Experiment Station and to carry on investigations in floriculture. The men who went made a good impression and some persons in a position to know thought we would get something. The bill looked as though it would go through until the last ten days of the session. The house appropriations committee recommended the bill out, carrying $15,000, and next day reconsidered and killed it on the score of economy. Every one in this association should recognize the fact that few people have any conception of the amount invested in floriculture and that we had to carry on an educational campaign. Much has been accomplished in this line and this association can do a great work in bringing to the people a realization of the extent of floriculture.

As most of us were inexperienced in getting legislation, we made some mistakes last time, but these have been overcome in our present endeavor to accomplish the securing of an appropriation. The assurances are promising that we shall succeed. Our state is in good financial condition and we must get our appropriation this year if at all. If a period of depression should come, we could not hope to get an appropriation for floriculture. If we fail this year we may wait ten years to get anything. Once the industry is recognized we can demonstrate the need of experimental work and continue the appropriation. Our asking will not fail if this association properly supports the movement. Each member should personally see his representative on the appropriations committee in the assembly and ask his support for an appropriation for work in floriculture.

The following tables will show the growth of floriculture in Illinois in capacity and value, according to the census of 1900 and estimates of 1907:

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The promise of the old proverb concerning March should encourage all who labor for and anticipate a profitable Easter. The fickle month has come in like a lion, so we may depend upon sunny skies and pleasant weather for its close. But no industry can realize the planning, difficulties and dangers of this movable festival of Easter so vividly as do the florists, and it would give general satisfaction, to this trade at any rate, if the ecclesiastical authorities would get together and fix upon April 15 every year for this spring celebration and cut the moon out of it altogether. The only consolation this year is that Easter comes some years as early as March 22.

Winter is making up for lost time and we have more snow than Canada can boast, as a visitor from Toronto has just informed me. The week opens with low temperature and business showing little improvement. Last week was called the dulllest of the year and prices of everything were at the bottom. The cold hampered the street merchants and so dammed the violet outlet. It is safe to say that at times a million violets were spending the night in the wholesale district, dependent upon the weather and the Athenians as to whether they would ever see the light. The finest specials just in sold as low as 40 cents and hordes of leftovers were closed out gladly at $1 a thousand. It is painful to contemplate and perhaps the less said about it the better. The oldest wholesaler, and there are several of them, says he has never seen anything like it at this season of the year, and yet if one consults the records of a year ago he will find that this is but a recurrence of past experiences and that every year the weeks just preceding Easter are "dead ones." With Lent and winter out of the way the old-time prosperity will rapidly materialize and by March 31 we will forget.

Just now there is enough and to spare of every variety of flower. Roses are coming in quantity and color to the satisfaction of buyers and prices, which have held firm while all else retrograded, are now shaded considerably, the best Brides and Maids selling as low as $10 per hundred on Saturday. Beauties hold better than any other variety and there has been no change in quotations for several weeks, the best grades still not equal to the demand. Chatenay, Killarney and Richmond have held their own and are in a class not dependent on oversupply, for there are never enough of them.

Spring flowers are much in evidence, sweet peas, forget-me-nots and stocks, with slight demand. Where the narcissi come from, if not the south, is hard to estimate. There have never been such heavy receipts, every wholesaler being overwhelmed with them. Thousands were sold at 10 cents a bunch and some large clearings were made at 50 cents a hundred. There seems no end to the lily of the valley and the number of gardenia growers must have been greatly increased since a year ago. Easter lilies are not yet plentiful.

Carnations are especially weak, some grand stock selling as low as $20 a thousand, Enchantress and many of the novelties included. Samples of the green variety are already on exhibition. The supply men have the secret of manufacture widely disseminated and every man of the 60,000 in the parade March 16 will doubtless depend upon the florist for suitable decoration.

Orchids grow more popular as the varieties increase and the retail windows are made attractive by profuse use of them, the prices being most reasonable with Easter only three weeks away. McManus says orders are already being booked for shipments at that time to every large city within a radius of a thousand miles.

Various Notes.

Monday, March 11, is rose night at the New York Florists' Club and exhibits are solicited, not only of roses, but of every novelty in plant and flower. An interesting evening is assured.

Visitors are cordially invited. The club is making rapid progress. An interesting surprise will make the evening memorable. The attendance should never go below 100, now that special arrangements are made monthly by the entertainment committee to get out of the beaten track and make the evenings worth while to all who come.

On Wednesday Mrs. W. B. Fullerton delivered at the American Institute an interesting illustrated lecture on "Beauty and Utility in the Home Plot," greatly enjoyed by a large audience and made especially attractive by the colored lantern slides introducing personal experiences and accomplishments. These lectures are given weekly and on Wednesday, March 6, George T. Powell will discuss "How to Lay Out a Country Place" with stereopticon illustrations. March 27 H. Siebrecht, Sr., will lecture on "Easter Flowers and Spring Gardens."

Messrs. Siebrecht & Son have opened a new store at Ninetieth street and Broadway and fitted it up handsomely.

It is in the best section of upper Broadway and should prove a profitable venture.

J. B. Kidd, lately with the Hinode Co. and with William Elliott & Sons, has been appointed customs inspector for the port of New York in the seed, bulb and plant department. There were a great many applicants for the position and Mr. Kidd is to be congratulated. He is competent and practical.

Wilson's plant oil is as popular with the nurserymen as the florists. Andrew Wilson, of Summit, is a young man, but the inventive bee is in his bonnet. His brother has patented his cement bench and Robt. G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, has invented a style of white bark decoration that has made his store the finest in the city of churches. The Wilsons are certainly an inventive family.

H. H. Berger & Co. will move from 47 Barclay street to 70 Warren street May 1.

William Elliott announces the first auction of the year on March 12.

The H. A. Stoothoff Co. is having a wide call for its Aphicide nicotine paper, one of the most effective of fumigators.

The cut flower exchange and market on the top floor of the Coogan building is to return to first principles and open at 5 o'clock in the morning. There is no limit to the strenuous life of the horticulturist and soon there will be no limit to the hours. One would suppose 6 a. m. early enough for the opening services. Before long there will be all-night florists, just as there are all-night banks. The market claims it had to change the hour of opening to meet the example of some of the adjoining wholesalers, who have for some time been on deck as early as 5 a. m.

Bonnot Bros. are handling and shipping fine Enchantress and roses at their stand in the Coogan building. Frank Millang has completely recovered from his broken ankle accident and will be in line with the Long Island and Jersey growers at the early hour.

John Seligman & Co. lately have added some growers of fine roses to their staff and are preparing for a large Easter call from out-of-town buyers, as well as their rapidly growing local trade.

Perkins & Schumann find their quarters cramped for the increasing clientele since moving to the ground floor of the Coogan building. Before another year they expect to double the size of their present quarters.

The Geller Florists' Supply Co. is distributing a neat protection for telephone mouthpieces that involves utility, convenience and good advertising. Twenty-eighth street continues to be the Mecca of the wholesalers. There will be further removals from adjoining streets to this center this spring. Centralization is the watchword. On Twenty-ninth street estates are changing hands and rents are rising. It looks as if both sides of Sixth avenue would ultimately harbor about an equal number of the trade with Twenty-eighth street. It would seem an excellent plan if President Totty's prophecy should be fulfilled that the New York club locate its home on this famous street.

George J. Allen, eldest son of J. K. Allen, celebrated the christening of the veteran's first grandchild with a reunion at his home on Sunday evening.

Siebrecht & Son have a new yellow rose that is very popular and which the firm expects to exhibit at the rose convention in Washington.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

The Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club is justly proud of its new home and the banquet given to the lady friends of the members Monday evening, February 25, in the hall of the building, was voted by all as being immense. The building is complete in every detail, with storage rooms in basement and on the ground floor and so constructed that up to the present time no ice has been needed to keep the temperature down to the desired degree. Manager Perry, of the Baltimore Florists' Exchange, showed me stock that had been held more than a week, owing to dull demand. It was perfectly crisp and fresh.

Growers are increasing about Baltimore, but there is room for a good Beauty specialist. The constant call for this rose and good price paid warrants the investment. Since the great fire wonderful improvements have taken place in this city and the craft have shared in the advance. All the principal stores are located near each other and make excellent displays.

Feasts' second store uptown is the latest move to keep in touch with business moving northward. They carry, undoubtedly, the largest stock of decorative plants in the south, devoting two big houses to that purpose. The tall house for asparagus, built on the W. H. Elliott plan, is a success, as, in addition to heavy, long strings, sufficient seed is saved annually to pay for itself. A platform has been erected near the ridge, along which Asparagus Sprengeri is planted in boxes. The plants, having unlimited head-room, make great growths. A fine lot of the uncommon Acacia pubescens was noted, also the new daisy, Queen Alexandra, which, while a finer and larger flower, is later than the old variety. Adiantum Croweanum is preferred to all other maidenhairs. Carnations are not extensively grown. Cardinal is the best red, good color and keeper, but not free enough. Jennings' patent for benches, consisting of 1-inch iron pipe set in concrete, is used entirely for roses; first cost is all there is. Golden Gate is grown largely here and in Washington. Ivory does even better than Bride. Perle is still popular. Meteor is, at present, more satisfactory than Richmond, which is grand farther north. A battery of Furman boilers furnishes the heat; a gasoline engine the motive power for pumping liquid manure, which is carried into every house by a system of piping. An auto is the latest addition to the delivery system of this up-to-date place.

Dropping in at F. H. Kramer's, Washington, D. C., I had the opportunity to see his new rose, Queen Beatrice, in various stages of growth, and while the newly cut blooms are most intense in color, those that had been kept in the window for five days were but just showing off color, which, at this stage, resembles that old favorite, La France. As the rose will be at its best during the convention of the Rose Society, an excellent opportunity will be offered to see it growing. Mr. Kramer says it is the best all the time and Maids will not sell while the Queen is around.

Peter Bisset, at Twin Oaks, has a promising seedling, of which Queen Beatrice is one of the parents; but the gem of his collection is the result of a cross which has produced a perfectly full-cupped form of the hybrid tea, with the scent of a hybrid perpetual, large petalled, good center, excellent forcer, in color between Mme. Gabriel Luizet and Marquise de Castellane. Unfortunately there will not be a bloom open around convention time, but at the time of my visit I saw a grand flower, unlike anything I have hitherto seen. It is a winner, no doubt about that. To visit his houses at this time one could hardly conceive the grand display of aquatics, made possible during the summer, and for which Twin Oaks is famous.

The stores operated by the craft in Washington are a show in themselves and will well repay a visit. Retailers from smaller towns can carry away ideas which, for various reasons, they do not originate, but readily copy, and it is quite in order so to do. Easter displays will attract crowds of sightseers and it is expected that the rose show will be more largely patronized than any pre-

THE DEATH ROLL.

Herman C. Baartman.

Word has reached this country of the death of Herman C. Baartman, senior member of the bulb growing firm of Baartman & Koning, of Sassenheim, Holland. Mr. Baartman was one of the passengers on the steamer Berlin, which was wrecked off the coast of Holland February 21. Of the 143 passengers on board only fourteen were saved and Mr. Baartman was one of those whose lives were lost. He was returning from a business trip through England in the interests of his firm. Previous to this he had made an even dozen trips to the United States and had made a wide acquaintance in the trade. He numbered as many friends as any Hollander coming to this country, for he knew his business thoroughly and was most careful in all his dealings. The information of his death comes to his partner, John Koning, who is at present traveling in this country and who states he will continue the business as heretofore.

Mr. Baartman is worthy of special mention from the fact that he was a life member of the S. A. F. and was the only European member of the craft who was so affiliated with our national organization. It is to his friendship with William F. Kasting that his membership was due. He joined during Mr. Kasting's administration.

Philip Winter.

Philip Winter died February 22, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Brack, at Glenville, O. Mr. Winter was 83 years old and a pioneer florist of Cleveland. He located at Glenville in 1853. Four children survive him. The funeral was held Sunday, February 24, from the residence of Mrs. Brack.

Ferdinand Tschupp.

Ferdinand Tschupp, whose serious illness was chronicled in the REVIEW a few weeks ago, died at his home at North Bergen, N. J., Sunday, February 24. The funeral services were held February 28 and were largely attended, as Mr. Tschupp was widely known and affiliated with a number of Masonic bodies. He was 66 years of age.

Isaac M. Brainard.

Isaac M. Brainard, a well-known and wealthy citizen of Gouverneur, N. Y., died February 26 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emma Johnston, aged 79 years. For about thirty-five years Mr. Brainard had been engaged in the market gardening business and operated extensive greenhouses in the town. He leaves one son, William G. Brainard, and one daughter, Mrs. Johnston.

Sylvester Snell.

Sylvester Snell, a well-known market gardener, of Watertown, N. Y., died February 26 at the age of 73 years. He leaves, besides his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Herbert Gurnee and Mrs. Frank Beckstead, of Watertown; five sisters, Mrs. A. Gillett and Mrs. Clara Holden, of Watertown; Mrs. Barbara Shaw, of Adams Center; Mrs. Joshua Snell, of Little Falls, and Mrs. Harrison Fuller, of Honeyville, and one brother, David Snell, of Watertown.

Frank Yahnke.

Frank Yahnke, aged 70 years, who has been closely identified with horticulture in Minnesota for a number of years, died at his home at Winona February 27. He was the proprietor of the Pleasant Valley Nursery and for a number of years has been connected with farmers' institute work, acting as lecturer through the winter months. He originated the Yahnke apple.

James B. Ennis.

James B. Ennis, a veteran nurseryman, died February 24, at his residence in Bloomington, Ill., which place had been his home for more than forty years. His death was due to grip and pneumonia, although his health had been feeble for some time.

Mr. Ennis was born in County Dublin, Ireland, October 18, 1831, emigrating to America at the age of 19 years. He located in Philadelphia and entered the Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. After the civil war he moved to Bloomington, where he became employed in the nursery business. He married Miss Mary Sheehan, forty-four years ago, in Philadelphia. Six children were born, all of whom are still living.

THOSE who are in search of novelties should keep an eye on the pages of THE REVIEW devoted to European advertisements. Practically every new plant worth trial is offered there as soon as stock is ready.

HARDY FERNS.

Among the hardy ferns are varieties greatly differing in size and form, from a hair-like creeping stem bearing a few simple, moss-like leaves, to the vigorous growing plants with large leaves, attaining a height of two or three feet. The varying conditions in which the different species succeed is remarkable. Many of them require a warm temperature, while others do well in cool and shady places.

Of the 4,000 or more species of ferns, not more than about forty species are suited to outdoor culture in ordinary soils and situations. These species can be planted in beds, borders or rockeries, or in the foreground of shrubbery. As most of them require a somewhat shady place, they are especially useful for filling in places where grass and other light-loving plants cannot grow. Perfect drainage is required. The soil should have leaf-mold in it, or decayed peat or well decayed sod will answer.

Hardy ferns are best planted in the spring, says the National Council of Horticulture, but they can be planted in the summer, if the fronds or leaves are cut back, making it easier for the plants to establish themselves before the winter sets in. In the winter the ferns should be given protection, with a covering of leaves, hay or straw.

LADIES' AUXILIARY.

Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, 219 Horton avenue, Detroit, Mich., secretary of the S. A. F. Ladies' Auxiliary, requests the publication of the following:

"The following states have reported members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the S. A. F.: Missouri, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Massachusetts, Indiana, New York, Connecticut, Louisiana, Wisconsin and Washington. The secretary would like to hear from the District of Columbia, New Jersey, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Nebraska and other states not reported. Our first order for pins grows small. Address the secretary."

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — The new greenhouses of Rhode Island College, Kingston, have been completed. There are two east and west wings and one north and south. At the north end of the latter is the laboratory building, including offices of heads of the departments and the caretaker's rooms. The houses are of steel frames and concrete foundations and cost about $15,000.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The outlet for stock has broadened since last report. The lessened social activity, due to the advent of Lent, has pretty well worn away, so that the legitimate demand is about equal to the supply of first-class stock in roses. The knowledge that spring sales are now in order has become general in stores where this market is not drawn upon except for special large lots, with the result that last week the call for carnations in thousand lots was so good that the price was advanced on Friday, when most of the big shipments went out. Friday night one house reported sending out 20,000 carnations on these special orders—but it did not serve to clean them out.

Beauties continue in short supply. There are not enough of the long and medium grades to fill orders. Short stock is more abundant and less in request. Quality is variable, but both cut and quality are due shortly to improve materially. Bride is in considerably better demand than Bridesmaid. In fact, all white stock is selling well because of a large amount of funeral work. The same factor causes short roses to realize pretty fair prices. None of the growers has any complaint to make at the state of the rose market. Chatenay is seen in fine form and there are large receipts of Richmond of superb quality. Killarney is giving a good crop for several growers and maintains its popularity.

The carnation market this week is slightly better than last, but there continue to be heavier receipts than the legitimate demand can consume.

A little bad weather last week put the violet market in a worse state than at any time thus far this season. The stopping of business produced an accumulation from which the market has not rallied. Prices went down to where many shipments realized no more than express charges and there was considerable loss. For the very best stock in the small lots 50 cents per hundred was top.

Callas continue abundant. There are increased receipts of Easter lilies. The quality is nothing to brag of with most of the growers. Tulips continue in large supply, but not so many daffodils and jonquils are seen. There is still enough valley, but not quite such heavy receipts as in the last fortnight. Sweet peas are much more abundant, of fine quality and selling well.

The wholesalers are speculating on the outcome in the fern department. Stock is spoiling rapidly and that received from the east indicates a similar condition there. It is predicted that $4 to $5 per thousand will be the price before new ferns are in. Smilax frequently is difficult to procure. Orders should be booked a day in advance if possible. Adiantum also is shortening up. Strings of asparagus are in fair supply but bunches are small.

LONGIFLORUMS FOR EASTER

$15.00 PER 100

Our reputation for having the BEST LILIES is because all our lilies are shipped in the original packages, packed at the greenhouses, thus avoiding bruising by second handling, and because they are from the most expensive bulbs, grown by the most careful growers.

FANCY MURILLO TULIPS, double pink, for Easter, $4.00 and $5.00 per 100.

EMPEROR, fancy Jonquils, $4.00 and $5.00 per 100 for Easter.

LA REINE TULIPS, $3.00 per 100 for Easter.

WHITE LILAC, for Easter, $1.50 per bunch.

Write us for prices on large orders of all kinds before placing orders, as we can save you money on all kinds of Novelties; also Roses, Carnations, Violets, Valley, Etc.

Baskets and Easter Novelties

Just received this week, a large shipment of Baskets and Novelties. We saw in the beginning of the season that we would run short before Easter, so cabled for more. The large demand we have had has exceeded all our expectations, but this new lot will enable us to fill all orders promptly and in a way that will please you. Order one of our assortments today and it will be delivered in plenty of time for Easter.

A full line of BIRCH BARK, POT COVERS, HAMPERS, CREPE PAPERS, GLASSWARE, BOXES, or anything else you may need, always on hand.

St. Louis Exhibitors.

Fred C. Weber, Jr., was in town last week asking the growers to send exhibits to the flower show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, which opened March 4. Leonard Kill is attending, with a large display of Peter Reinberg's roses. He took some magnificent Brides, Maids, Richmond, Chatenay and Uncle John, also an exhibit of Beauties and several other varieties they grow in lesser quantity. C. L. Washburn went down to do a little missionary work on behalf of the red carnation, No. 20. J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, also took an exhibit.

Williams and His Plans.

Frank Williams and his partner, George, of the Alpha Floral Co., Des Moines, have opened temporarily on the corner of Adams and Wabash, where they have a large double store. They state they have a three years' lease and have ordered fixtures to fit the place up in first-class style. As soon as these are ready they will open a permanent store there.

May 1 Frank Williams will close the Masonic Temple store, which he has conducted since the departure of Mosco. He states he is making little money there and the landlord added $4 a day to the rent. The Randolph street store will be continued as usual.

Favors The Queen.

J. P. Brooks, who is conducting the old George Harrer place at Morton Grove, thinks The Queen is the most profitable carnation in commerce today. He has more than 20,000 plants of this variety and grows less than 1,000 of any other sort. Last year The Queen made more money for him than any other variety he grew, and this year, with greatly increased plantings, it is making the same comparison with other sorts. Mr. Brooks was for some time foreman for the Poehlmann Bros. Co. and is an excellent grower.

Belated Wedding Announcement.

It has developed that Julius Niesen, formerly with Wienhoeber, and for the last couple of years in business for himself at Holden's old stand on Forty-seventh street, took unto himself a wife several months ago. He neglected to make any announcement at the time, but always has a cigar in his pocket in case of emergencies.

Garfield Park Conservatory.

Jens Jensen, superintendent of the west side parks, says the new conservatory to be erected in Garfield park will be the finest in Chicago, and those less conservative connected with the park administration say it will be the finest in America. The estimated cost is $225,000. It is to be quadrangular, covering 230x302 feet. The bids will be opened next Tuesday.

Weather in February.

The mean temperature for February was 26 degrees, right on the average for the last thirty-seven years. The highest was 53 degrees, February 13, and the lowest 2 degrees below zero, February 4. It was only three above February 22, giving quite a variety. The precipitation was only one inch, less than half the normal. There was ten inches of snow.

The wind averaged fifteen miles an hour, one mile more than in January. There were six clear days, fourteen partly cloudy and eight cloudy. January had twenty cloudy.

Various Notes.

John Pehrson, who was for a long time in the retail department of the George Wittbold Co., has opened an attractive store on his own account at 25 East Forty-third street. It is an excellent neighborhood and only a few doors from the Illinois Central station, where it is passed each day by thousands of people who can afford to buy flowers—and most of them do.

Jensen & Dekema will try four novelties in carnations this season, planting each one quite heavily. These will be White Enchantress, Winsor, Beacon and Aristocrat, and Mr. Jensen thinks they are the four finest varieties that ever have been added to the lists in one year.

N. J. Wietor says the business in rooted cuttings is ahead of expectations this year. Orders are larger than ever before. One order was for 10,000 Beauty cuttings and there have been a number equally large but including several varieties.

Arthur B. Dietsch is enjoying a good cut of carnations from the late Winandy place, handled by Zech & Mann. There also is a good crop of lettuce now on and bringing good money.

Michael Fink, who sold out his retail store on Cottage Grove avenue, is now with the A. L. Randall Co. The Randall Co. reports the call for white lilac steadily ahead of the supply.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. now has 115 men employed at its greenhouses at Morton Grove. It is said to be the largest force employed by any cut flower grower in the United States.

The Florists' Club holds its March meeting next week, Thursday evening. Easter will be the subject for discussion.

C. W. McKellar says orchids have improved in supply the same as other items and that the demand is a little slow at present because no great amount of wedding work is done during Lent.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is handling some excellent sweet peas from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Home-grown orange blossoms are one of the March specialties of the E. F. Winterson Co. They say the green carnation fluid is selling better than ever this year.

P. Pearson contemplates selling his interest in the business of Keene & Pearson, 920 North Campbell avenue, to engage in carpentering.

It is reported that J. F. Kidwell has abandoned his plan of erecting a range of greenhouses west of the city this season.

E. Franzen, sales manager for Scheiden & Schoos, says the demand for carnation cuttings, especially Enchantress, continues excellent. He is surprised at the number of inquiries received for unrooted cuttings of Enchantress.

Klehm's cut of Novelty tulips is over for the season. Kennicott Bros. Co. reports having done especially well on them this year.

James King, of Elmhurst, is serving on the federal grand jury, reported by the daily papers as about to indict a number of trust officials.

O. P. Bassett has written from Funchal, Island of Madeira, that the flowers of their red carnation, No. 20, taken with him on the steamer, were still in good condition. They were shipped from Chicago February 5 and Mr. Bassett's letter was dated February 12.

The latest popular song had been sung by John P. Risch, if with somewhat different words, for two years before it became the hit of musical comedy. Its title is "My Irish Rosie." A good many have joined in the chorus.

E. C. Amling says the sun has brought out the sweet peas in abundance. They have had a brisk sale up to the last few days.

Although Peter Reinberg has been denounced by Mayor Dunne and his friends because as alderman he voted for the new traction ordinances, and because he favored Carter Harrison for mayor, when the Dunne people made up their finance committee they put Mr. Reinberg's name well up on the list. He is expected to raise funds for a cause he does not favor. All that Mr. Reinberg does in the present campaign will be done for the democratic party and not for municipal ownership.

Adam Wolniewicz says he will have about 1,000 geraniums in bloom for Easter. One of the sections of his cast-iron boiler broke last week, but he patched it with Smooth-on cement and escaped loss. He thinks the patched boiler will carry him through the season.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, has spent a few days canvassing the prospects among the growers and thinks well of them.

Wm. A. Peterson and "Gipsy" Smith, the evangelist, have been conducting revival services in various parts of Chicago, doing spring plowing in the Lord's garden, as it were.

At E. H. Hunt's, C. M. Dickinson says the approach of spring is made apparent by increased calls for To-bak-ine products.

Robert Klagge and wife, Mt. Clemens, Mich., were in town last week.

Otto Goerisch was lucky man in a suit club this week, on an investment of $2.

The business in young stock seems quite satisfactory to all this year. There also is an excellent sale for the old plants from the benches, especially Beauties.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business is still good locally, as a fair week's business was reported last week by almost all the retailers. Funeral work is especially heavy. There seem to be plenty of small weddings and an occasional large one, in spite of the Lenten season. The Orthwein wedding, March 5, was one of the largest this season. Other social work is somewhat scarce.

In roses, first-class stock in Brides and Maids is still scarce and high in price. Large quantities of violets are being brought into market every day and the demand for them is excellent. Prices range low. The supply of Californias will be small for Easter.

Carnations are a little too plentiful, but still in great demand, with prices for extra fancy at $4 per hundred. Quality is extra fine in all varieties, especially

Lilies for Easter

Our lilies are better than ever this year and we will have a big lot just right for Easter. We will book now a limited number of orders at $15.00 per 100; $150.00 per 1000. Later market sure to be higher.

Nelson Fisher, Lady Bountiful and Enchantress. Cardinal sells well.

The run on bulb stock at the wholesale houses has been good. Valley is plentiful, and so are Von Sions and tulips. Callas are well up in demand. Dutch hyacinths sell well. Romans, Paper Whites and freesia are none too many.

Extra fine quality of sweet peas are to be had, also forced white lilac. In greens everything one wants is to be had.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, has returned from a visit to his father, at St. James, Mo.

C. De Wever, who has been very sick for the last three weeks, has fully recovered. Mr. De Wever had a close call, but his strong constitution pulled him through.

Walter Retzer, late in the employ of Mrs. M. M. Ayers, is now with the St. Louis Seed Co.

J. W. Dunford, at Clayton, is busy shifting his stock of 15,000 geraniums into 4-inch pots. He reports that he is entirely sold out of pot lilies for Easter.

C. A. Kuehn reports that the green carnation fluid put up by the Manchester Chemical Co. is selling well.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was in town this week.

Walter Weber and Frank Fillmore paid a visit last week to their friends, John Steidle, A. Jablonsky and James Dunford, in the country.

Miss Meyers, bookkeeper for George Angermueller, says that the rumor reporting that she is to be married soon is a bit too previous and says that a man of her choice must have 100,000 feet of glass well filled with the choicest stock.

W. C. Smith & Co. have received a large shipment of florists' supplies from Bayersdorfer, Philadelphia, including good styles in wicker baskets.

Charles Dauernheim, Jr., of Kimmswick, Mo., is cutting a fine lot of extra quality carnation blooms, which are consigned to Henry Berning.

Oscar Huettmann must be busy these Lenten days, from the amount of stock he carries home each morning.

Rude Windt, who has charge of his father's show houses, has a fine lot of blooming plants and cut stock. Business is all that could be expected during the Lenten season.

Fred Pope, on the south side, has had a busy week in funeral orders. His houses are well filled with Easter stock of all kinds.

Henry Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., reports the Orthwein wedding for Tuesday one of the largest of the season. They ordered a large shipment of orchids from New York. This order will run close to $1,000.

From present prospects quite a lot of glass will be added by several of the Kirkwood growers this summer. Growers at this place have almost doubled their business this season. They grow little but violets and carnations.

A. Berdan, of Kirkwood, is sending in some extra fine lily of the valley and other bulbous stock.

John Burke, Fred Foster and Alex Siegel tried to corner the market in violets last Saturday and partly succeeded early in the morning, but later too many came in, so the smaller buyers had their share as well.

Monday morning the committee was working hard in the banquet hall in the Masonic Temple to have everything in readiness for the Horticultural Society's spring flower show, which opened March 4. Complimentary tickets have been sent broadcast to business men and society folks. In this way it is expected to enroll a large number of the more wealthy class, who will, in the future, pay for the holding of flower shows in the fall. J. J. B.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business last week was fairly good. Nothing of great importance was on hand, but enough trade to keep everyone going steadily at this time of the year. Funeral work has been the most called for. Our growers have no trouble in disposing of their cut blooms, as we have had so vast an amount of funeral work; in fact, any kind of flowers were salable that could be used.

We are having fine, bright sunshine and roses and carnations are coming in heavier, with a slight decrease in prices. A large amount of bulbous stock is on the market and can be had in any quantity at reasonable prices. The Harrisii stock looks unfavorable in some sections and a short crop is feared. Sweet peas are more regular, while violets are plentiful, bringing 50 cents per hundred. Greens are scarce and many order from the north. The cost and expressage make them expensive and there is not much profit for the retailer.

Club Meeting and Banquet.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held February 25 in the new Baltimore Florists' Exchange building, with Vice-president Charles Seybold in the chair. The meeting was cut short. The new bookcase is now in our club-room and was admired by everyone. Otto Fielder was elected a member.

The banquet committee took charge of the larger part of the evening. The rooms were handsomely decorated with cut flowers and potted plants and while the musicians played many danced.

August Bernard and brothers rendered a number of songs in English and German, after which the chairman invited the jolly crowd downstairs. The doors of the salesroom of the exchange were thrown open and at the sight of the many good things a rush was made and justice was surely done. It took about two hours to reach the last course. About 100 covers were laid and every lady received at least one flower.

F. G. Burger was the toastmaster. The arrangement for the special ladies' night and feast was in the hands of a committee composed of I. H. Moss, T. Patterson and M. Richmond. Those who responded to the toasts were Richard Vincent, E. A. Seidewitz and Robert L. Graham.

It was said to be one of the most successful banquets ever held by the club and the ladies were assured that a banquet will be given them by the club once a year.

The Market.

The inevitable slump has come and flowers are more of a drug than for a long time. Values have fallen heavily and vary so much that it is hard to give quotations. Ice-chests which for a good many weeks were practically empty are now filled to overflowing and these conditions are likely to continue until the holding back of stock for Easter causes a lessened supply. Roses are much more abundant and have dropped nearly to normal prices. A few hybrids, mostly Brunners, are seen and sell much better than Beauties, which latter are being hard pushed by Richmond this season. Carnations have sold as low as $1 and none but select stock makes or exceeds $3. Violets have been slaughtered unmercifully, prices of 10 cents per hundred being recorded on not a few and only fancies reach the 50-cent mark. Street fakirs are selling bunches of fifty at 10 cents.

Bulbous stock is too abundant and prices erratic. Sweet peas even have been a glut and almost unsalable. The quality of these is splendid and it seemed too bad to see such large quantities unsold. Lilies and callas are abundant and much lower. Quite a variety of other spring flowers are seen, for which the demand is a little uncertain.

Presentation Banquet.

About sixty members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club assembled at the banquet room of the Boston Club, 22 School street, on the evening of March 6, the occasion being a complimentary banquet and testimonial to ex-Presidents J. A. Pettigrew and James Wheeler. A generous response was the result when an appeal was made to the club members for small contributions toward a fund for recognizing in some way the services the two esteemed past presidents had rendered to the club. F. E. Palmer had charge of the arrangements and these were well carried out. The decoration committee had seen to it that the tables were tastefully adorned and the room presented a very attractive appearance.

After dinner had been served and cigars passed, Edward Hatch, the genial treasurer of the club for the last thirteen years, assumed charge of the post-prandial exercises and called on a number of those present for remarks. Patrick Welch, in his own inimitable way, in the name of the club spoke of the way ex-President Pettigrew had re-galvanized the club into life and the earnest work he had done as presiding officer for two years, also of the earnest and enthusiastic work of his capable successor, James Wheeler, during his tenure of office and amid applause presented each in turn with a handsome testimonial in the form of a handsome bronze group, suitably inscribed. The two recipients gracefully and feelingly responded, speaking of their terms of service being made especially pleasant by the willingness of the members to aid them in every way. A musical program of songs, readings, etc., was interspersed and the whole evening was a very enjoyable one.

Various Notes.

J. A. Pettigrew lectured at Horticultural hall March 2 on trees for streets and waysides before a good audience. An animated discussion followed the lecture.

Fire of unknown origin caused heavy damage at the establishment of Elijah Cartwright, in Needham, on the morning of February 28. Efforts to subdue the flames with small hose were ineffective and before help came the head house was almost gutted and the ends of several connecting houses burned out. The stock in these houses was almost a total loss, carnations being mostly grown. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Cartwright, whose loss would not have been so great but for the fact that on the morning in question the thermometer was 10 degrees below zero.

Boston's big annual automobile show opens March 9, the whole of the immense Mechanics' building, as well as Horticultural hall, being utilized for the show, which equals in size and number of exhibitors the two recent New York exhibitions combined. The decorations are elaborate and unique. Mechanics' building is a representation of a New England apple orchard with the trees in full bloom.

Entries are coming in from the spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. While the fine exhibits of the American Rose Society will be missed this year, there will be an abundance of other attractive features.

Sidney Hoffman had an effective window of Ghent and mollis azaleas at his Massachusetts avenue store last week.

class workman and much esteemed by all who knew him. He was a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and attended the meeting January 15.

A recent call on Joshua Lawson, at E. J. Milton's in Brookline, found the cattleyas, which are the special feature here, in fine condition. In the center stage in the cattleya house the plants are tied on rafts, six or seven plants to each, and seemed in excellent health. Dendrobiums and some other orchids are also grown. A fine batch of specimen cyclamens was noted.

At Mrs. H. Dumaresq's, in Chestnut Hill, where William Downs presides, we found excellent batches of Primula obconica, cyclamens and other seasonable plants. In carnations, Patten, Lawson and Enchantress were doing especially well. Another season Beacon and Winsor will be tried. Bridesmaid and Richmond are mostly grown in the rose house. A batch of exceedingly fine specimens of Lorraine begonias were just on the wane. Nectarines were just coming into flower. Mr. Downs' cottage is both internally and externally one of the most attractive we have seen.

February broke all records for low temperature for a long term of years. In North Easton we recorded zero or below on twelve nights, the lowest being 20 degrees. March is rather severe, but there is no very springlike feeling in the air yet.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held February 15, at the Oriental hotel. There was a large attendance. Seven were nominated for membership. The special prize for carnations arranged for effect was won by Valentine Clevis. Lawson carnation, shown by William Eccles, scored eighty-nine points; Phoenix Rebeleenii, by Thomas Harrison, scored eighty-four points; mignonette, by A. MacKenzie, eighty-four points; lily of the valley, by A. Janache, seventy-nine points; double violets, by H. Matz, seventy-six points. Felix Mense was awarded a cultural certificate for a bunch of 100 Princess of Wales violets. A large collection of carnations was staked by Charles Bertanzel, for which he received honorable mention. The judges were: J. Ingram, S. J. Trepass and J. Everett.

PHILADELPHIA.The Rising Eastern Market.

The days when everything sold at good prices have passed for the time being, and it is now oftentimes difficult to market flowers at anything like satisfactory prices. The oversupply of daffodils is past, with daily expectations of southern shipments, now overdue. Tulips are, however, sold at distressingly low prices; really fine stock has been retailed on the street at less than cost of bulbs. This is merely an indication of the depression in the tulip market. The stock is excellent in all colors. Violets, while abundant in supply, are selling well at moderate prices. Sweet peas are also extremely plentiful. The best sell, but the medium and shorter grades are hard to market. Carnations are lower in price than a week ago, quality excellent, demand only fair. The situation in roses remains unchanged, excepting that teas are more plentiful. Smilax has advanced in price.

The Washington Convention.

Those intending to exhibit at the Washington convention of the American Rose Society can obtain the premium list with all the latest additions by applying to Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, New York, or Charles McCauley, Eighteenth and Kearney streets, N. E., Washington, D. C. The exhibition will open Wednesday, March 13. All those interested in roses are cordially invited to be present.

Recent Importations.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., has shown me two extremely pretty Easter novelties which his firm is distributing. One, an improved plant mat, is in every way superior to the old mats so largely used. It comes in all flower colors, is of fine quality, and very durable. The other is an exquisite little birchbark fernery, rectangular in shape, ornamented with mushrooms, mosses and other growing things so natural that one could hardly believe they are not real. The leading retailers have greatly praised this fernery, which has the additional recommendation of being moderate in price.

Among the Growers.

The average quality of the Easter plants at Godfrey Aschmann's is decidedly higher year by year, showing the result of hard, painstaking work. The lilies are nicely budded, averaging five flowers to the plant, clean and healthy. They are already being hardened off in some of the houses. The spiræas, the variety is Gladstone, are well grown and full of buds. Azaleas are here in great quantity, the varieties noted being Deutsche Perle, Vervœneana, and Mme. Vander Cruysen. Hydrangeas, cinerarias, Ramblers, primroses, begonias and bulbous flowers make up the assortment.

What especially impresses one about Godfrey Aschmann's place is the care he has given to studying the wants of his market (all the sizes are the best selling commercial varieties) and the large quantity of stock that he disposes of each season.

Carnations at Craig's.

Robert Craig showed me as pretty a lot of carnations as one could wish to see. His Enchantress paid him 93 cents a plant last season, a remarkable yield, and this year promises to do as well or better. White Perfection and Vesper are his whites, Robert Craig his scarlet, while for crimson he has a fine seedling of C. W. Ward's 'as yet unnamed. A whole house of seedlings in their second year is a fine sight. A pink of good size, brighter than Daybreak, is exceptionally promising.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

77.—Last year out of 4,000 Jerusalem cherry plants we had one plant one-half of which was variegated. We have taken cuttings from the variegated side and also the berries. The seed is just showing now and from all appearances it will come variegated; at any event, it is entirely different from the other seedlings. The berries on the variegated plant were the same as on the green variety. It made a very pretty plant. Do you think this would take as a novelty and do you know of any one else who has struck a seedling of this nature?

Ans.—I think well grown and well berried variegated plants of Jerusalem cherry would make an excellent novelty. I have never heard of variegated plants coming true from seed. It is an old law that nature will not reproduce itself in variegated form in this way. PHIL.

Club Meeting.

President Samuel S. Pennock presided over a large meeting of the Florists' Club Tuesday evening, March 5. P. J. Lynch, of West Grove, read an interesting paper on the mail trade in rose plants. F. H. Kramer, of Washington, brought three magnificent vases of Queen Beatrice, unusual flowers, heavy stems and good foliage. John Cook, of Baltimore, sent a new seedling resembling an improved Gontier. Robert Scott & Son exhibited two Irish seedlings, one a soft pink, full flowers, which Edward Schwartz says they will plant in quantity for next season, and the other a long, coppery bud with heavy petals. Samuel Batcheler showed Brides and Maids that surprised the experts. Edward Towill, of Roslyn, brought a splendid vase of the new rose, Joseph Hill. It attracted much attention.

P. F. Richter will speak on bulbs at the April meeting.

WASHINGTON.

Convention Notes.

National interest is being manifested in the exhibition of the American Rose Society and Washington Florists' Club which will be held in the Washington Light Infantry hall, March 13 to 15. Nearly every state and territory in the Union will be represented, as well as different portions of Canada. Washington is particularly interested in three classes open to amateur competitors. Three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 are offered by John Clarke for best specimen of a fern which has been grown in a dwelling for at least four months previous to exhibition. Peter Bisset offers three prizes of similar amounts for best specimen of rubber plant grown under same conditions. George Field offers a like amount for best geranium. Preparations for the exhibition have been in progress for weeks and strongly indicate that Washington will this year have one of the finest exhibits in its history.

Current Comment.

Trade conditions remain good and, in spite of brighter weather, almost all kinds of stock is kept used up; prices remain good and the quality of both roses and carnations is much improved. There is an abundance of bulb stock. The different stores and the market had a decidedly spring appearance last Saturday, the window displays being especially attractive.

H. W. Rieman is busy planting roses. His Easter plants look to be in fine shape and, no doubt, he will reap a rich reward.

were favorably impressed with Hill's new rose, Rhea Reid. It is the rose that will make the hit; a fine bud with a splendid color. The firm's new houses were interesting, not only for what they contained, but in their construction and heating. The firm has spared no effort in making this a model plant. At the B., K. and B. greenhouses the carnations were fine, their Superior showing to good advantage, also Sarah Hill, a fine white. At Vernon Grave's everything was lovely. His benches of Enchantress were a sight to see. All his carnations were in fine shape and promise well for Easter. The nicest lot of violets in this section of the country are at Ed Ruch's greenhouses. He is certainly fortunate in escaping the disease that has ruined so many.

E. A. Nelson has a lot of spiræas coming on for Easter, also lilies. He is one of the few who have had good luck with them this year.

closed the evening's work. The meeting adjourned till March 12.

Various Notes.

While William and Samuel Graff have been in Chicago, attending the marriage of their sister, Harry Aaron has been assisting James McKellar in handling the large business of the Graff Bros.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. was especially busy last week. Among other orders they had the supplying of carnations daily to the booths of the Ohio Hardware Men's Convention which is annually held here.

The craft are most favorably commenting upon the splendid American Beauty roses at the Institution for the Feeble Minded. T. A. Sexton is in charge of the state's greenhouses there.

The craft are glad that Mrs. E. M. Krauss is again able to be back at her store after a severe attack of the grip.

The Clover Hill Greenhouses have a fine stock of Easter plants coming on, and, as usual, their regular business will carry them off.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. has, as in past years, a large stock of geraniums coming on, and, considering the weather, the plants are in excellent condition. The varieties grown here are: S. A. Nutt, Queen of the West, Single General Grant, Heteranthe (Double General Grant), and Mme. Hallock Foote.

The incorporation last week of the American Mutual Pottery Co., of Columbus, with a capital of $100,000, means that our Columbus Pottery Co., recently destroyed by fire, will be rebuilt and operated.

Another competitor for the cut flower business has appeared. The Columbus Drug Co. has added a floral department.

C. V. Heikes & Co., of Troy, O., have established headquarters here for spring nursery stock sales, and planting contracts and are so advertising in the daily papers.

There has been an unusual number of spring openings in the big stores, which has used up a lot of stock, and this week one of the theaters gave carnations to its patrons. All this helps.

A suit for $500 damages has been brought against Gustave Drobisch, the dean of our florists. The plaintiff declares that the smoke from the greenhouses of Mr. Drobisch has blackened the walls of her house and polluted her cistern water. Much interest in the outcome of this case is felt by all the craft.

The weather has been exceptionally sunny and fine lately, but it has been cold. A great trade is sure for Easter. ZERO.

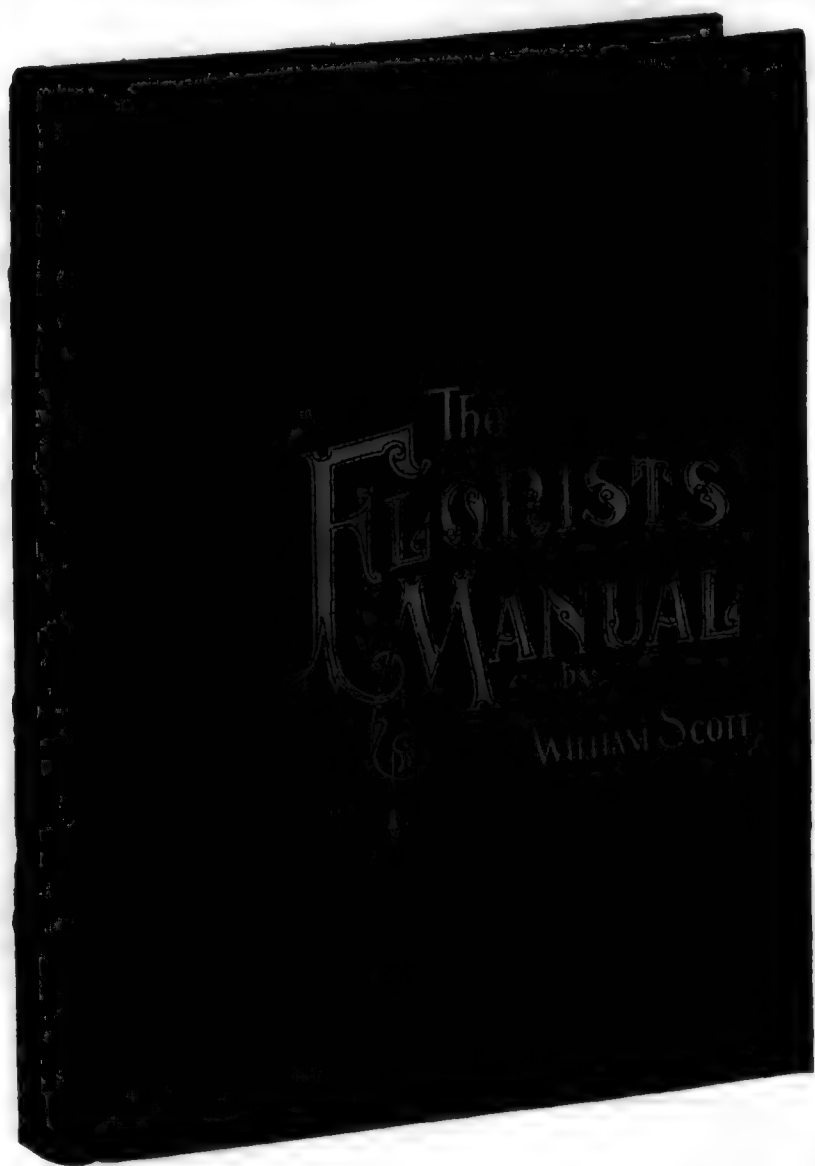

TIPTON, IA.—Mr. Shiffer, who started the Tipton Greenhouse some years ago, has sold the plant to Mr. Patterson, whom he employed last winter during the busy season.

CALUMET, MICH.—Fire threatened the destruction of the greenhouses of the Lutey Floral Co. February 25. The office building and boiler room were destroyed, and some of the plants were injured by frost.

ROANOKE, VA.—The case of McGhee, the florist, against the Tidewater, was closed February 26. Mr. McGhee claimed $1,200 from the Tidewater for alleged damages done to his flower beds on Jefferson street, but the court decided against him in the case.

BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of The Florists' Manual."—J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

TELLS you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

Treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

LEWISIA TWEEDYI.

This plant is to be numbered among the most attractive of recent introductions, says a writer in an English contemporary. It has all the good attributes of the best alpine, and possesses the finest flowers of a naturally showy race. It is a Californian plant that grows wild under conditions that are alpine, on the one hand, and partaking of those of the desert on the other, inasmuch that cultivation, as we understand it, is more likely to do harm than good.

It forms a flattened, leafy rosette, in some measure like that of Echeveria metallica, and averaging six inches across. The flowers are produced in dozens from the leaf axils, and are held nearly erect, are multipetaled, fleshy, and funnel-shaped, whilst the color scheme is apricot mainly, but later rose and purple struggle for place till the flower fades. It is a beautiful plant in flower, and quite distinct from any other.

Under cultivation one could select for it a sheltered recess in rockwork, and plant it in a rift or seam between boulders, laying its roots back into soil and rock chippings as far as they will go. It cannot have too much solar heat, but it can have too much moisture, and the position noted is probably the best that can be given it.

An importation from California of many adult specimens showed clearly the conditions under which the plants grow. The roots were exact copies of the largest dock roots ever dug—nearly a yard in length, and they bore the impress of rock chips and stout yellow loam very plainly. The size of root and leaf, and the number of old flower stems these imported roots carried showed that this lewisia has not been seen under cultivation in half its real strength and capabilities of flower production.

THE REVIEW is full of valuable information. In fact, it is the best florists' paper I have ever read. I would not be without it for ten times its cost.—GEO. FAUTH, Woodlawn, Md.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is making his annual tour of the Pacific coast.

THE season's crop of state pure seed laws is only second to the record yield of railroad rate legislation.

THE mail order houses report a brisk business, the outlook indicating an increase over last year.

A. G. LEE, the local seedsman, is interesting himself in the flower show which is to be held at Fort Smith, Ark., next November.

H. H. BERGER & Co. will remove May 1 from the store at 47 Barclay street, occupied ever since the business was established in New York, to new quarters at 70 Warren street.

THE truckers in the vicinity of Beaumont, Tex., have organized an association, with James Pattinson president and J. A. Arnold secretary and treasurer. Mr. Arnold also is secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

THE death of H. C. Baartman, the well-known Holland bulb grower, who has made twelve trips to this country, is reported in the obituary column this week. He was one of those drowned in the wreck of the steamer Berlin, off the coast of Holland, February 21.

IN an apparently authorized sketch of Dexter Mason Ferry, "philanthropist and benefactor," published in the program of the Detroit bi-centenary celebration of 1901, it is stated that the seed house he established in 1856 "did in its first year about $6,000; since that time in a single year the sales have been more than $1,500,000."

THE country papers, which are quite naturally opposed to the great mail order houses, have got hold of the fact that the seed catalogue of Montgomery Ward & Co. was excluded from the mail because of a so-called lottery feature, and are making capital of it.

A CHANGE in the Department of Agriculture, through the often rumored retirement of Secretary Wilson, or in the general government, through the inauguration of a new administration, will doubtless have more or less effect in modifying the policy of supervising several lines of private endeavor. The resignation of two assistants to the postmaster-general is likely to ease the friction in that department. To none of the government's new policies can objection be made on principle, but the application of the rulings has resulted in much excessively fine hair-splitting and caused no end of annoyance.

THE conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill, carrying the usual provision for free seeds, was last Saturday approved by both branches of congress.

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS.

Ordinarily a fairly satisfactory review of the condition of California crops at this time of the year might be given, but this season is so unusual that it is impossible to make more than a very general statement.

Root crops are pretty well in the ground, but so far (February 25) have made very little growth, and there are still many sacks in the hands of the growers. Onions are finally all planted, though only within the last fortnight one large grower had 2,000 or 3,000 bags still on hand.

Part of the radish and lettuce seed is not yet planted, and some growers are still planting sweet peas, though every day of delay now adds to the risk of failure. The success of these late planted peas will depend somewhat on the time when the hot waves come. If all goes well, they may make a good crop, because the ground is thoroughly soaked.

The onion crop, on the whole, does not look encouraging. Some fields are in excellent condition, but many others have been drowned out, and many more have been so affected by water as to greatly retard the growth of the onions and to cause a thin stand.

Weeds are also getting quite a start on some fields and they will make the work of the grower harder in this already difficult season.

Growers are now hustling after their bulb men for next year. Most of the

Now, the old seed house of Sutton & Sons has issued a circular, well within the terms of the act, which, while setting forth the firm's aversion to getting business by feeing customer's employees, goes on to say that "while so many of our customers ask us to recognize the care bestowed on our seeds by the gardeners who have the cultivation of them, we have not the least objection to doing so, if we have the express approval of the customer in writing. For this purpose we append a form, which may be signed and returned to us." According to the English trade papers, it has raised a storm, as being a violation

THE ROSE OF THE SEASON

It is a seedling from Antoine Rivoire, with the scent of Souvenir de la Malmaison, very full and beautiful form, an ideal exhibition rose, a good opener, and robust grower.

We staged 68 perfect blooms at the Royal Horticultural Society's Show at Holland House, July 9 and 10, 1906, and after two days' show were as good as when first set up, and were admitted to be in better condition than any other variety in the show.

Awarded the Card of Commendation National Rose Society, Botanic Gardens, July 5.

Award of Merit, Holland House Show, Royal Horticultural Society.

Strong plants ready in pots in April. Price, $1.20 each; 13 plants for $15.00; 50 for $55.00; 100 for $100.00.

credit this misguided expenditure of the people's revenue with a certain missionary effect, however. Perchance an occasional rank amateur who really grows his trifling allotment of cucumber, radish and turnip seeds bestowed by the condescending favor of his congressman, may be led to enlarge his views and buy something worth while from his near-by seed dealer. The free distribution is not all loss to seed merchants, even in the present inept way of conducting it, but the seed trade generally should relax no legitimate effort to lift it to a higher plane."

HELP YOURSELF TO SEEDS.

Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kan., think they get the brunt of the government competition a little hotter than most seed houses, as witness the following from their daily paper of March 4:

"The garden seeds sent by Mr. Scott to his constituents, to be delivered through the World office, have arrived. A mail bag nearly full of packages sits in this office and the packages will be distributed to those who call for them, until they are all gone. Get yours early."

LOOKING FORWARD.

The Bucks County Gazette, published at Bristol, Pa., which fact may or may not have a bearing on the matter, publishes the following as of date some years hence:

PRIMULA KEWENSIS

See Florists' Review, Boston report, page 1089, Feb. 28.

This charming addition to our greenhouse Primroses originated at the Royal Gardens, Kew, as an accidental cross between the small, bright-flowered Himalayan species, P. floribunda, and the sweet-scented P. verticillata, a native of Arabia. The plant is a strong grower, with bright green leaves, and numerous erect flower-scapes, 10 to 18 inches in height, producing flowers in whorls at intervals along their whole length. The flowers are fragrant, bright yellow in color, with a slender tube and spreading limb, nearly an inch in diameter. As a winter-flowering decorative plant it is an acquisition; its floriferousness when in a very small state is remarkable. Per pkt., $1.00.

CATALOGUE ILLUSTRATION.

After commenting on the absence of the usual number of gaudy lithographs in this year's catalogues, a writer in the Rural New-Yorker says: "The substitution of accurate photographic reproductions of flowers, fruits and plants for the old misleading woodcuts gives an air of sincerity to many catalogues that was formerly lacking, but every halftone is not directly made from the object represented. This process reproduces as well from wash drawings, which may show the subject, not as nature produced it, but as the artist conceives it should have grown! Little exaggeration, however, is indulged in except in the cases of a few incorrigible offenders, whose customers must certainly be accustomed to discount the claims heavily. The catalogues on the whole present such good appearance that the colored lithograph as an important pictorial feature may be largely discontinued in the future. A similar restraint is creeping by degrees into the descriptive matter, transforming seed and nursery catalogues, acknowledged advertisements as they are, into reliable and instructive monographs of value to every cultivator."

The Peony-Flowered Dahlias

MENTIONED ON PAGE 1081 OF THE "REVIEW" ISSUE FEB. 28, 1907 ARE OFFERED IN MY CATALOGUE AS FOLLOWS—AND SECOND SHIPMENT WILL ARRIVE THIS MONTH

The Gorgeous New Peony-Flowered Dahlias are an entirely new type of this grand decorative plant, and have created a sensation in Europe wherever shown. They have also received some of the highest honors ever accorded to novelties. The habit of these peony-flowered dahlias is all that can be desired, being medium tall, free-flowering, blooms growing erect on tall stems, of immense size, measuring 6 to 8 inches across, of distinct and remarkable coloring. They are grand for cutting and all decorative purposes, and last well in water.

QUEEN WILHELMINA—Pure white, extraordinary large flower; grand form and very free flowering.

QUEEN EMMA—Lively rose and yellow margined; very large; irregular petals, strong and long stems.

DUKE HENRY—Dark red, very gracious form, compact plant; four rows of petals, strong stems.

PIUS X—Soft yellow, rose margined, nearly single; very strong and long stems.

HOLLANDIA—Beautiful dark rose, large flower; free bloomer.

BARON DE GRANCY—Pure white, with two to four rows of petals; a very remarkable flower.

GLORY OF BAARN—Very fine rose-color, large flower, size 8 inches in diameter.

PAUL KRUGER—White and purplish red; compact plant; very long and strong stems.

DR. K. VAN GORKUM—White rosy tinted, three to four rows of petals, very beautiful flower.

GERMANIA—Brilliant carmine, four rows of petals; compact grower, long stems.

SOUVENIR OF PARIS—Pure white, very large single flower; long and strong stems.

We offer the above set, eleven of the best varieties, in strong tubers, as follows:
Price $1.00 each, $10.00 per doz., $75.00 per 100. The set of eleven varieties, $8.50

BEST NEW SWEET PEAS.

A trial of recently introduced varieties of sweet peas was held last year in the Royal Horticultural Society's Gardens, near London, says the Gardeners' Magazine, the following being highly commended by the committee of award:

Countess Spencer—Standard erect, waved margin, light pink, shading at the margin to a deeper pink; wings erect, embracing; flowers very large, bold, three to four to a stem.

Dainty—Standard erect, slightly hooded, white, shading at the edges to a light pink; flowers of medium size, three to four to a stem; distinct.

Dorothy Eckford—Standard slightly hooded, pure white; flowers large, bold, three to a stem.

Helen Lewis—Standard erect, waved, orange-pink, wings pink; flowers large, three to four to a stem.

Helen Pierce—Standard erect, flat, pale blue, shading to and veined with a deeper blue; flowers of medium size, three to a stem. The most distinct of the new varieties.

Hon. Mrs. Kenyon—Standard erect, cream; flowers of medium size, mostly two to a stem; the young flowers are of a light primrose color and represent the nearest approach to yellow.

Jeannie Gordon—Standard slightly hooded, light rose, wings cream-rose; flowers of medium size, three to a stem.

John Ingman—Standard waved, bold, bright rose, with deeper colored wings; flowers large, three to four to a stem.

Miss Willmott—Standard hooded, rich orange-pink, wings pink; flowers large, two to three to a stem.

Mrs. G. Higginson, Jr.—Standard erect, of a pure pale blue; flowers small, three to a stem.

CINCINNATI MARKET RADISH.

In speaking of the Cincinnati Market radish, the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., says:

"This superb radish originated in the vicinity of Cincinnati, with the Glass Gardeners there, and has been continually used by them for more than twenty years. We introduced it to our trade in the spring of 1895, and it at once became so deservedly popular that we have had to grow it ever since by the thousands of pounds to supply the demand. The tops are so small that the radishes may stand touching each other in the rows. One grower says that he never thins this variety as he does other kinds which run to seed if left standing too thickly. The Cincinnati Market radish grows perfectly straight and smooth, six to seven inches in length. Their attractive scarlet skin is very thin, the flesh crisp, brittle and of delightful flavor. The finest long, red radish in existence for forcing, and it outsells all others in any market. Remaining, as it does, a long time in perfect condition for the table, after it is first ready for gathering, it is one of the very best varieties to plant in the home garden."

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The tide of European travel has again set in. It will gather volume as the spring advances and promises to be heavier than ever as summer approaches. Retail florists can add to their business with no greater trouble to themselves than the posting of a list of steamer sailings in the window. Or tell in a neat circular that you have facilities for the delivery of flowers on any outgoing steamer. Then mail or wire the orders to be filled to one of the Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Lent is here in full force and the results are noticeable in our line of business. The demand for colored stock is limited, although there has been no appreciable oversupply of light colored carnations or roses. Enchantress, Prosperity and all the fancy light colored flowers offered have been sold quickly enough, and the same can be said of Brides and Maids. Beauties are few and far between in San Francisco at present. It looks as though the growers were all out of season at this time with their supplies. Bulbous stock is scarcer, although we still have a fair stock of late flowering narcissi and quite a few tulips are seen. Valley is plentiful and moves slowly. Violets are to be had in any quantity and the price remains the same.

Wild maidenhair is coming into town in large quantities, much to the relief of the retailers, who have had much difficulty in getting enough adiantum recently.

Business is about as good as can be expected at this time and there is a fair supply of funeral orders enjoyed by the retailers. Over in Oakland business is well up to the handle and no complaints have been received recently on that score.

The plant trade is now at its height and florists who handle these as well as cut flowers are very busy.

Various Notes.

W. H. Mann, the Pinole florist, is in town. He reports everything booming in his locality.

Hutchings & James will make a specialty of poinsettias for the coming season. They are splendidly located at Elmhurst to handle the wholesale trade.

Frank Shibeley and Alexander Mann have opened in good shape at 1203 Sutter street. They will carry a full line of florists' supplies.

Domoto Bros. will be in line with three houses of Easter lilies. Their stock looks well at present.

J. L. Dorris will take a trip to Los Angeles and the southern portion of the state in a few days. He expects to be absent a month.

Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard Co., of Chicago, is in town.

PLANT TRADE AT FRISCO.

The effect on trade in the line of small plants in San Francisco has not been as bad by our late catastrophe as was predicted by many people. The plant line at present is fully as good as it has ever been. There is a good demand for stock and prices are better than for many years. The retail dealers are having a harvest, as it is doubtful if there was ever a season on this coast where there was so much stock moving. This is not especially noticeable in any one line, but the infection apparently has struck almost everything. There are so few really good nurseries on the coast, and such demands are being made on them, that they will have little to do business with after the season is over.

Even heavy ornamental stock, such as sidewalk trees, hardy palms, cedars and material that usually takes many years to become salable, has been well cleaned out and it will be several seasons, even under the best of circumstances, before the young stock again will be large enough to make a showing.

The facilities for importing stock from the east are so inadequate and the time of arrival so uncertain at present that many of our largest growers have bought sparingly in the east and Europe. This also has a tendency to make growing stock scarce and as there is no immediate relief in sight, the effect is bad for heavy planting of imported stock.

Another feature is that large tracts of land in the vicinity of our cities, formerly devoted to the nursery business, have been cleared off and cut up into town lots. This has been the fate of several large places in the neighborhood of San Francisco this year and the chances are that several others will follow suit in the near future.

I have not referred to the cut flower growers in this article, confining myself rather to the plant growers and nurserymen. From indications, however, it is perfectly safe to predict that they will also have prosperous times and that the idea of overproduction is ridiculous. There is more demand for good stock than ever in this locality and there is no danger of too much good stock. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 39d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE demise of James B. Ennis, Bloomington, Ill., is chronicled in the obituary column.

THE nursery catalogues are now in full flight, and better printed, better illustrated and more numerous than ever.

THE demise of Frank Yahnke, proprietor of the Pleasant Valley Nursery, Winona, Minn., is reported in the obituary column this week.

THERE is reported to be a brisk demand for peonies that have been heeled in over winter, but no one recommends spring planting of peonies except on the theory that the maxim that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" applies also to orders.

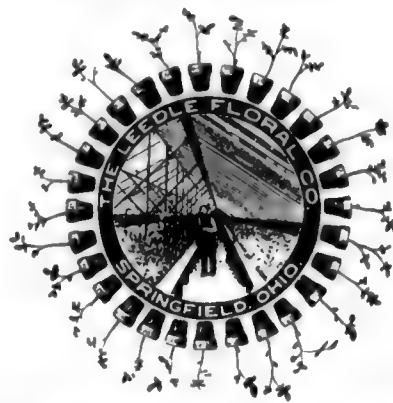

THE Peterson Nursery, Chicago, reports an excellent local business; so good, in fact, that they are not devoting the time they once did to the wholesale end. They have planted an unusual number of large specimens this winter, several having been hauled forty miles from the nursery.

ROSA RUGOSA makes a hedge of attractive appearance from early summer right up until winter sets in. The beautiful flowers of this most accommodating rose make a hedge of it especially desirable, not only on places where it is an aim to have something bright and out of the ordinary run of hedges, but it also appeals to planters who have occasion to plant where few things thrive well. Rosa rugosa does well almost anywhere and in any kind of soil. After the flowers pass away the seed berries mature rapidly and soon pretty nearly take the place of the flowers in point of attractiveness.

EUONYMUS.

Euonymus radicans is one of the best, if not the very best, climbing plant for many purposes, for covering buildings, although, perhaps, not so softly pleasing as English ivy or Amphilopsis Veitchii, it is, nevertheless, better than either of these; better than English ivy because it does not need the protection in winter that the latter does, and better than Amphilopsis Veitchii because it is an evergreen and, for that reason, especially desirable for use in cities and in the suburbs of cities, where anything green in winter is quite a consideration. This euonymus is desirable also because of its tenacity in clinging to whatever it is placed against.

Euonymus radicans argenteo-variegatus in habit much resembles the former and green variety, but as its name implies, the foliage is brightly variegated. This variety is much used for edging large and formal beds, for which purpose it is invaluable, not only because of its being suitable, but also because it grows into such a dense mass that the soil in the bed may be piled against it without injury. On the contrary, it thrives better when the soil is up to it in that way. It can be clipped or sheared in any way desirable. This euonymus, like the green

ANOTHER BOGIE.

The newspapers in Pennsylvania and New Jersey are much wrought up over a rumor of a nurserymen's trust and will not be reassured by the fact that they can find no evidence, even of the organization of another of the trade associations which are so numerous.

The Trenton Gazette of February 28 says:

New Jersey and Pennsylvania nurserymen are greatly interested in a project to form a combination to control the entire ornamental nursery products of the United States. W. H. Moon, of Morrisville, is said to be interested in the project, but refused to discuss the matter last night.

An organization has been formed, it is reported, and it has been named the National Association of Ornamental Nurserymen. The association held a meeting in New York a short time ago and another session is scheduled to take place in the same city in the near future. The association is keeping its plans secret for the present, but it is understood that the objects are to get every ornamental nurseryman in the United States into the association.

On the same day the Philadelphia Public Ledger said:

Members of the Pennsylvania State Nurserymen's Association, which met in secret session in the Hotel Walton yesterday afternoon, denied that they planned a nurserymen's trust. They said that they favored legislation now pending at Harrisburg, the purpose of which is to create a state department of pomology.

George Achells and Abner Hoopes, of West Chester, attended the meeting in the Walton. Both were seen in their homes in West Chester last night, and both denied that the trust plans had been forwarded at the Walton meeting. W. H. Moon, of Morrisville, refused to discuss the proposed trust, although he said that the Walton meeting was to aid the state department of pomology plan alone.

If the "ornamental" nurserymen organize we "trust" they will do the purists the favor of calling it the Association of Dealers in Ornamental Nursery Stock.

HARDY ORNAMENTAL SHRUBS.

The National Council of Horticulture says that too much cannot be said to encourage the planting of hardy shrubs to decorate home grounds. Great ignorance prevails concerning the varieties which are most adapted to the climatic conditions in the extreme northern part of the United States. The varieties given hereafter are chosen as being among the best.

The lilac is early blooming and remains green in northern latitudes long after many other deciduous shrubs have shed their leaves. In May its trusses of fragrant blossoms give evidence that tory of all shrubs. All the season the foliage is delicate and the habit of the shrub is graceful. It is perfectly hardy and easy of culture. Varieties: Van Houttei, white, the queen of them all; arguta, early dwarf habit, white; mon-gelica, white; lanceolata, white, blooms in June; robusta, double flowers; paniculata rosea, rose colored; golden, yellow foliage, very effective in groups.

INSECTS AND PLANT DISEASES.

[A paper by Arthur H. Rosenfeld, assistant entomologist, Louisiana State Pest Commission, read at the annual convention of the Society of Southern Florists, at New Orleans, February 14 to 16, 1907.]

The subject assigned me by your very efficient secretary was "Injurious Insects and Remedies," but, on account of the breadth of this subject, I have decided to narrow it down and talk tonight on "The Value of Laws and Regulations for the Controlling of Insects and Plant Diseases." Any sort of talk on injurious insects at large would take up a great deal more time than you gentlemen would care to give, so I trust that you will bear with me in my choice of a more restricted subject than was first given me.

Value of Laws and Regulations.

The value of laws and regulations of this sort cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, for even a conservative estimate would reach such a tremendous figure that the mind could hardly grasp the vastness of the sum. These laws have resulted not only in the direct saving of millions of dollars, but also in the preservation of thousands of human lives, the intrinsic worth of which no man would venture to conjecture. No higher goal can be set for any undertaking than the preservation of human life; that divine fire, which when once extinguished, can be no more rekindled by hand of man; that flame which, when once departed, leaves the vessel which contained it forever cold and dark. Had these laws accomplished but this, how grand would their result be.

Take for instance the laws against the Stegomyia mosquito, the little insect which is the connecting link in the transmission of the most terrible scourge of the city in which we are now enjoying ourselves, and without which this scourge could not exist. By enforcing a system of cistern screening and otherwise reducing the number of breeding places of the Stegomyia mosquito, epidemics of yellow fever have been prevented, thereby saving hundreds of lives, and removing one of the greatest hindrances to the development of this beautiful Crescent City, as well as many others.

In the course of a few years, with proper coöperation, the enforcement of fence laws, etc., we can safely look forward to the total eradication of the cattle fever tick, one of the greatest scourges to southern agriculture. Without cattle there can be no really successful agriculture, and with the cattle tick, we cannot have the right kind of cattle. At present very few southern cattle can compete with the northern grown animals on account of the continued sapping of vitality by the tick. It is estimated and, I might add, conservatively estimated, that this insect is at present costing the south $100,000,000 annually. Think of what a vast amount of money this is, and then picture to yourself some of the advantages of tick eradication; the advantage of removing from the fair shoulders of our bonny south the load of this yearly depletion of her coffers.

I could continue these comparisons indefinitely, but as we are at this time most concerned with the nurseryman's side of the subject, I will speak only of those things which bear directly upon this phase.

State Organizations.

Almost all of the states in the Union now have their boards of entomology, crop pest commissions, or something of the sort, which are engaged in protecting the farmers, fruit growers, gardeners, florists, etc., from the depredations of various insects and plant diseases which would otherwise soon overrun the states and make the growing of any kind of plant a practical impossibility. This may seem a broad statement; but when we think of the destructiveness of some of our pests, and the wonderful powers of reproduction and spreading exhibited by them, we can see the truth of it.

The majority of the organizations were formed primarily to fight the San Jose scale, the little insect which, thirty years ago, practically unknown in the United States, is today the most feared pest in this country, by all nurserymen and fruit growers.

The southern states will serve as a good example of the danger of deferring the passage of crop pest laws until many insects, which might have otherwise been kept out, or their entrance greatly deferred, have been introduced. Our crop pest laws in most cases were not inaugurated as soon as in the majority of the more northern states and, as a consequence, unscrupulous nurserymen in the states having such laws and also in other states, dumped a great deal of stock, unsalable in the states having these laws, into the states not so fortunate. Here was where the southern states came into possession of a number of the insects of their neighbors. Had the southern states, as a whole, been as wide awake to the value of these laws as the northern ones, we might have saved ourselves thousands, yes millions, of dollars.

3 NEW CANNAS

WILLIAM SAUNDERS

The flowers are large, of splendid form, and are borne very freely in immense clusters. The color is a deep rich shining scarlet slightly dappled with crimson. Foliage is a rich bronze. Height, 3½ to 4 feet. We believe that Wm. Saunders is decidedly the most perfect Canna of this type that has been introduced. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

OTTAWA

Is a strong grower, very robust and 5 to 6 feet high. The flowers are large and beautifully formed, color is carmine with tints of old rose and deep coral, add to this the silken sheen and you can imagine the effect a few plants will produce.

NOTE—We had this Canna on trial among the Canadian experimental stations last summer and this is the official report of their expert: "Quite distinct and one of the most beautiful shades of color I ever saw in Cannas. Of 70 massed in one bed during the past season, this was the most floriferous in the collection, coming into bloom early and continuing until cut down by frost, as many as 13 expanded heads of blooms being counted at one time on a plant, and not a poor one among them, all being of immense size." 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

NEW YORK

Has the Orchid type of flower. They have much more substance than the flowers of the other varieties of this class, and will stand the hot sunshine as well as the toughest varieties of cannas. The color is a solid rich scarlet covered with a beautiful glowing sheen. The flowers are large and contrast beautifully with the dark bronze foliage. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Stock is more plentiful. There are carnations enough to fill all demands. Violets are also more plentiful, selling from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. American Beauties are selling slowly at present. There has been quite a few cheap carnations and one store had 16,000 on hand last Saturday and disposed of 14,000 of them. This store had a special sale on them at 35 cents a dozen. Two or three of the department stores also had carnations on sale at 20 cents to 30 cents a dozen. These sales supplied this city with cheap carnations for a week.

All of the florists are getting ready for the Easter trade. It looks as though there will be quite a good many Easter lilies that will not be ready for Easter, as they are forcing slowly.

Various Notes.

D. Freudenthal reports good business. Carnations are mostly called for and he handles a large quantity every week.

The Rosery Conservatory, at Westport, was incorporated March 1 with $15,000 capital stock, paid up in full. The stockholders are Ed Ellsworth, president; Alpha Elberfield, vice-president and treasurer, and H. E. Colvin, an attorney in the New York Life building, of this city, is secretary. These three are also directors of this new company. Being located in one of the best parts of the city, this new firm ought to do well. Its new store is completed and is open for business. The last two months of good weather has been in its favor in completing the store and conservatory.

Amil Eichenaurer, formerly employed by the Alpha Floral Co., has been sick for the last two weeks, but is now able to be out again.

C. L. Knoke, of the J. W. Sefton Mfg. Co., was in Kansas City last week. He reports a fine business. W. H. H.

MADISONVILLE, KY.—F. A. Chervenka has left Ira, O., in order to take up the management of the Pleasant View Greenhouses at this place, for T. L. Metcalfe, of Hopkinsville, Ky.

WHEELING, W. VA.—John Dieckmann & Co. have purchased twelve acres of land on Mountain View, where they will move their eight large greenhouses. Mr. Dieckmann will also erect a residence on the property.

Announcement—Aristocrat

As we have not made all the deliveries of Aristocrat as promised, we beg to announce to our patrons that all orders are being filled strictly in rotation and all orders will be completed by the 20th of March, as we have 50,000 cuttings in the sand nearly rooted and 150,000 cuttings that have been put in during the past ten days. These will be ready for delivery before the end of March, which is not too late for Aristocrat, as it is a very rapid grower, free from disease and will do as well as earlier cuttings when benched in the fall. The variety is an easy rooter, but owing to the very unfavorable weather, cuttings did not root as quickly as we expected; besides we are growing them cool, which takes a little longer. All of the stock we have sent out has given the best of satisfaction, as it is our aim to see that every cutting is first-class in every respect.

We wish to thank our patrons for their patience and assuring you of our very best attention and that your order will be filled by the time stated.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The market conditions remain about the same. Trade is good; but owing to the fact that the larger retailers grow their own bulbous stock, the sales at the wholesalers' are comparatively small; consequently some stock goes to waste.

Roses keep well cleaned up and with white carnations it is the same. Several thousand colored carnations, mostly Enchantress, variegated tulips, daffodils, etc., were not called for last week. Considerable valley is being disposed of. Sweet peas and forget-me-nots do not sell as well as might be expected. Common ferns are becoming scarce. Smilax and asparagus are also scarce.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens, spent last week in Chicago.

Some growers are keeping their carnation houses cool in the hope of holding back the crop until Easter, when they will bring better prices, as in all probability the present large supply will not last long. It is also apparent that lilies will be scarce in this vicinity. Present indications point to a good supply of the general run of Easter plants.

Hugo Schroeter has the agency for Detroit and vicinity for the Baur clip and plier, for mending split carnations.

The store at 245 Woodward avenue, for many years occupied by G. Leadly, is being torn down to make way for a large music hall. Mrs. Allen P. Cox, who recently acquired possession of Leadly's business, has opened at 233 Woodward avenue, a few doors south of the old stand.

P. F. Reuss is again in Detroit. He will be in the employ of B. Schroeter until after Easter.

It would not necessitate a twenty years' sleep to make one feel a stranger in the business section of Detroit. This part of the city is rapidly undergoing a complete change. Many new buildings are being erected and numerous firms are changing their locations. The center of attraction for the florists seems to be Broadway and there is no doubt but what this fine thoroughfare will some day be called "florists' row." H. S.

HINSDALE, MASS.—The fern dealers are having bad luck this season. The stock in storage has been spoiling, until now there is not enough to fill contract orders.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Last week developed a weak market and things lacked the snap and go which has been with us ever since the holidays. While this state of things is to be expected during Lent, still, as we had escaped so far, we were all in hopes that there would be no slack Lenten period this year. But it might have been much worse. Many of the retail men say that business was just as good as ever. But there is no question that there was a good let down, in the wholesale market at least. The demand was poor and prices dropped a little at a time till they were down to a fairly low level, low enough to make us feel a little uneasy. Monday there was a decided brace; in fact, last Friday and Saturday both showed a considerable increase in the demand. It would appear now that good business will prevail until after Easter. The supply of flowers is not heavy and, even should there be a few days when the demand is not all that could be desired, it will have little effect on the price of stock.

Various Notes.

The outlook for Easter continues to be good, but we need bright weather or a good many growers will fail to get in with a crop. W. K. Partridge reports that he expects to be in with a fine crop of both roses and carnations, which of course will go to supply his retail store. Max Rudolph says that his houses are just in shape to make Easter and he is happy over the prospects. As is usually the case though, there will be numerous growers who will miss it by about a week. Easter is early this year and with the cloudy weather that March usually brings it takes a smart one to be right in on the dot.

February business was a revelation this year and every one reports a decided increase over last year.

Fred Gear has just completed building his home in Clifton. He has spared neither expense nor labor to make his home right up-to-date and it is one of which he may well be proud.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Another week of Lent has made no change in business. There is nothing of importance doing in a social way, and, as a result, business is quiet. Funerals and small trade do not create demand enough to use up the stock brought in and prices have fallen to the bottom. Bulb stock is not in demand, with the exception of Murillo and yellow tulips. Good carnations are selling as cheap as $15 per thousand. Roses, alone, are not plentiful. Violets are in abundance, and if you buy in quantities you make the price.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is receiving a limited supply of fine lilies, but with prospects of plenty for the last of the month. W. Q. Potter is calling on out-of-town trade.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. have been handling this season some fine stock from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

John Wyland has a big crop of Richmond on just now, which are fine.

Charles Hoffman, of Allison Park, is handling real estate, in connection with his greenhouses, and says the odds are in favor of real estate.

T. R. Dunn, who is running the old Gibb place, has been on the sick list for some time.

The special meeting which had been proposed for the Florists' Club has been postponed for the present, the committee not having been able to make the desired arrangement.

Randolph & McClements have three houses going up on their new place. These are the first of a new range and are intended for palms and decorative stock.

W. J. Smith is supplying A. W. Smith with quantities of fine sweet peas and bulb stock.

G. & J. W. Ludwig, of the Allegheny Market, have been busy the last week with funeral work.

Ernest Ludwig, we believe, is the only florist in this country who keeps his store open day and night the year around. His stand in the market is worth a visit any time.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

An Immense Stock of Choice
EASTER PLANTS

Blooming Easter Week
or earlier if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment.

Come or mail your order direct to the headquarters. Our reputation over the entire country from the Atlantic to the Pacific in growing Easter stock for the wholesale market for many years past ought to be sufficient guarantee as to the truth of what we say and advertise. We have every house, nook and corner full of plants and they were never so fine as this year, 1907.

While laborers, merchants, jobbers, contractors, builders, etc., have increased their prices almost double as usual, we have not advanced our prices; but look, we sell our plants at the same old prices charged two or three years ago when the cost of producing plants was much cheaper.

What was my duty on my trip to Ghent, Belgium (the land of azaleas, araucarias and palms), last fall, 1906? Answer: Of course, the interests of my customers, not speaking of the 1100 souvenir cards which I mailed to my customers in America. For the benefit of my customers I also bought Azalea Indica for Easter trade, the cream of Belgium's production that money could buy.

AZALEAS

Now I am able to offer to my customers, and the trade in general, two houses full of Mme. Vander Cruyssen azaleas, the well known and much favored best double pink azalea that has given so much satisfaction all over America. Plants as round as an apple, just covered with buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, at 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.00 each. Other fine varieties adapted for American markets, such as Niobe, Benard, Andre Alba, Deutsche Perle (double white), Prof. Wolters, Empress of India, Vervaneana (double variegated), and about eight more fine sorts, all covered with buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.00 each; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 50c to 60c. We have a fine limited quantity of azaleas, 50c to 60c each, such as Apollo (double dark scarlet), Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, and a few others.

Hydrangea Otaksa (pink), 6 to 7-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; also $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Lilium Multiflorum and Japanese Longiflorum were never so fine as this year, all sizes, and can meet all wants, 6-in. pots, 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud 4 buds and under, 12c per bud. Raised from Henry F. Mitchell Co.'s special brand bulbs.

As we sell our lilies so cheap, some other plants must be taken with them. The cultivation of lilies is expensive.

Spiraea Gladstone, 6 to 7-in. pots, these plants are very large and bushy and unusually fine, full of buds, at 50c, 75c and $1.00 each.

Crimson Rambler Roses, 8 feet high and over, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

In Philadelphia there's a florist noted,
Aschmann, his name, his plants beyond compare;

To a sweet girl his heart is all devoted,
Next rank his Araucarias, passing fair;
When seen together they're a pair so charming—
Brimful of beauty—both he cannot keep;
So to his heart he'll hold his winsome darling,
While you may have the Araucarias cheap.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, five years old, 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, width the same as height, very swell stuff, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, 4 years old, 4 tiers, 20 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Specimen Glauca, 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 5 tiers, 30 to 35 inches high, $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 4 years old, 6-in. pots, 20 to 25 inches high, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, one large plant in center, 3 small around, $1.50 to $1.75 each. Single plants 36, 45 to 50 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Cineraria Hybrida, have a house full all shades, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, $2.50, $3.00, $4.00 to $5.00 per doz.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, an immense bloomer, blooming the entire summer and winter, 5½-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Primula Obconica, 5½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Areca Sapida (palms), 6-in. pots, 50c each.

Dracaena Bruanti, 6-in. pots, 50c each.

Ferns, Nephrolepis Barrowii, 6-in. pots, 50c to 75c each; 7-in. pots, $1.00.

Scottii, 8-in. pots, very large, $1.50 each; 5-in. pots, 35c each; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 50c.

Boston Ferns, 7-in. pots, 75c; 6 in. pots, 40c to 50c each; 5-in. pots, 25c to 30c each.

Holly Ferns, 3-in. pots, $1.20 per doz.

Hyacinths, raised from first-class bulbs of my own importation. These bulbs cannot be compared with ordinary stuff flooding the market. King of the Blues, Lavender (blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (white), 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Touneol Tulips, red and yellow variegated, the best selling Tulips on the market. Will stay in bloom 10 days. 3 bulbs planted in a 4-in. pot, $12.00 per 100 or $1.50 per doz.

Double Von Sion Daffodils, the best double yellow narcissus in the world, will sell on sight. 3 double-nosed bulbs planted in 5, 5½ and 6-in. pots, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. pots. All bulbs are strictly first-class, of my own importation and are now outside in coldframe and will bloom in about two weeks after bringing in greenhouse.

Have about 200 pots Von Sion Daffodils, 5½-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, in greenhouse now, in bud ready to open for immediate sale at $2.00 per doz. This is a special offer, only good for a few weeks.

Moonvines, Ipomaea Noctiflora (A. W. Smith, originator), best pure white, largest and most fragrant moonvine in the world. I made a specialty of them for the past 15 years and am known as the Moonvine Grower of America and grow yearly about 20,000. In 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100. Now ready.

Directions to visit my place: Take Germantown or Willow Grove car at 18th and Market Sts. to Ontario St., or 8th and Market St., and take Germantown, Chestnut Hill or Willow Grove car to Ontario St. In going either route you walk two squares east on Ontario St.

Mention if pots are wanted with all plants. Cash with order, please.

All goods must travel on purchaser's risk.

LATROBE, PA., Feb. 18, 1907.

MR. GODFREY ASCHMANN.

Dear Sir—I received your plants in good condition, satisfactory to me. I am pleased in every way.

Respectfully,

EDW. LEIZMANN.

(Above order amounted to $86.25, for 55 azaleas, 19 kentias and araucarias and ferns.)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.

I have seen Mr. Aschmann's Easter stock and I can truthfully say that it never looked finer, and he never before had such a large stock. Am pleased to recommend our customers to Mr. Aschmann.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held February 26, President Howard Nichols in the chair. Enoch Evans and A. L. Marshall were nominated for active membership.

A fine vase of the new scarlet carnation, Beacon, from Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., was on exhibition and was awarded a certificate of merit. Three well-grown plants of Primula stellata were exhibited by Thomas Atkinson, gardener to Mrs. Henry Siegle, Mamaroneck, N. Y., who was awarded a cultural certificate. The monthly prize for twelve roses, other than American Beauty, was won by James Ballantyne, with Bridesmaid.

It was decided to hold the June show June 14 and the dates were fixed for the fall show for November 6 to 8. A communication from David Fraser, Pittsburgh, offering a prize of $25 for twelve blooms Chrysanthemum Miss Clay Frick at the fall show, was thankfully received, and it was decided to offer $15 for the first and $10 for the second prize. A third prize of $10 was then donated for the same exhibit by James Requa.

James I. Donlan read a paper on "Art in Plant and Flower" and gave some good illustrations in the arrangement of cut flowers. Joseph Bradley contributed the cut flowers, among which were Roman hyacinths, Primula obconica, mignonette, cyclamen, carnations and sweet peas. A lively discussion followed. This was conceded to be the most animated meeting the society has had in many months and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. At the March meeting an essay will be read on "Outdoor Roses." D. McFARLANE.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held March 1. Displays of orchids were made by Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs Co. and Orson A. Miller, and there were the usual contributions from neighboring estates of carnations, miscellaneous flowers and plants. Resolutions were passed upon the death of O. D. Munn, a patron of the society. The offer was made of a prize of $10 for twenty-five Winsor carnations at the fall show, by the F. R. Pierson Co., by its representative, William F. Ross.

Greenhouse Heating.

SIZE OF FLOW PIPE.

How large a flow pipe would be required to heat 60,000 feet of glass to 56 degrees, in zero weather, with ten pounds pressure on the boilers? The extreme length of the main flow would be 250 feet. I intend to use a steam trap, thus doing away with any back pressure on returns. A. R.

A 6-inch main flow pipe should be sufficient to provide heat for the 8,600 square feet of radiating surface which will be required for 60,000 feet of glass.

It will be much more satisfactory to you to state the dimensions of the houses rather than to state the glass area. Glass area is only one factor in a heating problem; therefore, the above answer is not as reliable as it could be made if dimensions of the houses had been stated. L. C. C.

PIPE REQUIRED.

How many feet of 1½-inch, 2-inch or 3-inch pipe would I need in a house 22x66? The south wall has three feet of glass and the north wall five feet. I wish to maintain a temperature of 58 degrees when it is 40 degrees below zero outdoors. I have a Wilks self-feeding heater 30x48 inches. Can I put a new base under this boiler with a Martin rocking grate and have boiler capacity enough to heat this house and a 5-room dwelling house added? P. J. K.

To heat the house in question with hot water at 180 degrees with 1½-inch pipe would require 1,260 feet of pipe, with 2-inch pipe would require 1,008 feet and with 3-inch pipe would require 630 feet. The grate question is one which can only be settled by the makers of the boiler. L. C. C.

TROUBLE WITH HEATING.

I have six east and west houses, each 20x100, and a north and south house on the west end of the range. My boilers are located at the middle of the west side. I have the overhead hot water system, using two Kroeschell boilers, a No. 9 and a No. 5. These boilers are con-needed with an 8-inch main flow pipe which runs through the west house, where a tee divides it, and each east and west house is fed by a 3-inch pipe. Just inside each house a tee reduces each flow to 2-inch. These pipes drop under the benches, where they connect with 4-inch returns, so that there are three flows to six returns in each house. The returns are connected to a 5-inch main return by 2-inch pipe.

I want to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in Illinois climate, but have not been able to do so. If more radiation is necessary, could 1½-inch or 2-inch pipe be used? Would it improve matters to have one feeder for each house? How high should the expansion tank be? C. L. E.

pipe in them should, with water at 180 degrees in the boiler, carry a temperature between 60 degrees and 70 degrees. If a single 4-inch pipe could be carried from the boiler direct to the house to be heated and there divide to supply the three risers in the house, I think greater efficiency would result. The flow is certainly greatly impeded by reducing to two inches, which should be avoided if possible. The common riser is not altogether desirable on a hot water system. With steam there is less danger of cur-

PIPE FOR THREE HOUSES.

How many feet of 2½-inch pipe will be necessary, in Missouri climate, to heat three east and west houses, connected, 15x100, seven feet to gutters, and eleven feet to the ridges? Hot water will be used, with a 4-inch flow in each house. The western gables are of glass and the south wall has three feet of glass. The houses will be used for carnations. Solid benches will be used, with one raised bench on the south side to accommodate return flows under it. The boiler-pit will be six feet below the surface. The houses slope eighteen inches toward the boiler-pit.

W. B. O.

In order to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the houses in question, you should install twenty-one 2½-inch pipes in addition to the three 4-inch flow pipes you propose to use. If it would be any economy to use 2½-inch flows instead of 4-inch, three 2½-inch risers direct from the boiler will do the work just as well as the 4-inch pipes, provided the piping is properly installed.

SIZE OF BOILER.

I wish to put in a boiler to heat a greenhouse with steam. What size will I have to use to get 60 degrees temperature with the mercury 5 degrees below zero? I will have to put the boiler under the potting-bench in one end of the greenhouse, and can put it as low as necessary. I will burn gas. The greenhouse is 23x68 and fifteen feet to the ridge. The side walls are of boards, two thicknesses, with tar paper between, and four feet high. The greenhouse connects with the storeroom on one end. I have no cellar. There are three runs around the house, of 2-inch pipe under the side and end benches. Is that enough heating surface?

W. M. T.

If you desire to use steam you should secure a boiler with a rated capacity for at least 800 square feet of radiation. It should be set deep enough so that the lowest return in the house will be at least eighteen inches above the water line in the boiler; two or three feet would be better. Then run a 2-inch riser under the ridge from the boiler to the far end of the house, drop to the radiating pipes and with a built manifold return by two coils, one on either side of the house, to the boiler; or, if desired, by three coils, one under the middle bench. To get best results from steam the house should have another loop of pipe added; i. e., another 2-inch pipe of the same length as those already installed.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business last week could have been a great deal better. The first part of the week we had a decided change in the weather. The temperature dropped to 10 degrees above zero and was accompanied by a cold, damp wind which, undoubtedly, kept the cut flower buyers at home.

Outside of funeral work there was little doing until the latter part of the week, when the cold spell passed over and trade instantly took a brace. There was then a decided demand for bulb stock especially. Carnations were also quite active. One of the dealers placarded his windows, offering them at 35 cents per dozen, but none of the other dealers fell in line. The general price was 75 cents and $1 per dozen. It is needless to say that the 35-cent variety was a very inferior lot.

The situation in roses has not changed to any extent. We are still getting an ample supply. The quality could be improved upon with nearly all of the growers. Valley and violets are as good as we have ever had; the demand is also active. Practically all of the dealers are carrying a small stock of Easter plants, with the exception of Easter lilies. Fine specimen plants of azaleas, Baby Ramblers and spiræas are offered, but are slow sale and it is a little too soon to show them to secure orders for Easter. The city inquiry for Easter stock is light, while from the country points a great many have been received.

Minneapolis.

The Powers Mercantile Co. reports a satisfactory trade for last week, the demand Saturday being especially strong for medium priced carnations and roses. It has also turned over a great many tulips and daffodils.

The Donaldson Co. continues to have a heavy run on about everything in cut flowers. Its prices are the same as asked by the retail florists in general.

The few bright days that we have had have brought a little more competition. The Greek candy stores have already started to offer stock at reduced prices, which takes some trade away from the smaller dealers.

Amundson & Kirschner show some attractive windows of bulb stock and carnations. Business, they say, has been good.

Our wire worker, Mr. Kusik, has gone into the florists' supply line, under the name of Kusik, Gerstmann & Co. The general impression is that there is a good opening here and, if properly conducted, a good trade can be worked up.

ITHACA, N. Y.

The evening of February 25 was dedicated to carnations at the Lazy Club, which is the official organization of the horticultural department of Cornell University. At the solicitation of W. H. Griffiths, gardener of the department, a number of varieties of carnations were on exhibition. The merits of these were studied and compared by students and visitors. The extraordinary improvement which has taken place in the commercial qualities of this flower in recent years was noted and commented upon.

Collections of blooms were received from John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., who forwarded an exceedingly instructive and interesting group, largely of his own origination.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., showed Winsor, Melody, Helen M. Gould, White Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Red Lawson. The interesting feature about this exhibit is that Gould, White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress are all sports from the original Enchantress. The F. R. Pierson Co. regard these as among the leading commercial varieties which they grow.

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., showed a fine vase of Beacon.

The Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I., presented the display with a collection of some fifteen seedlings, showing a great variety of color and form, and illustrating in a general way the possibilities of careful breeding when applied to the carnation. Many of the seedlings were of high merit.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., provided a striking vase of that handsome carnation, Aristocrat. This variety illustrated in splendid fashion the best points of a good commercial flower. For itself, it attracted much attention from visitors.

The United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., showed a general collection, prominent among which were Enchantress, Red Lawson and White Lawson, as well as the original Lawson, Bountiful, Fred Burki, Vesper and Mrs. M. A. Paten.

It is needless to say that the exhibit provided both instruction and inspiration to the large group of students who had the privilege of examining and studying it.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The Hall & Lyon Co. drug store now has a violet sale each Saturday, using 30,000 to 50,000 a week. They are sold in bunches of twenty-five at 19 cents a bunch and attract many people who would not otherwise visit the store.

..ANNOUNCEMENT..

The King Construction Company, of North Tonawanda, N. Y., and Toronto, Ont., in response to numerous inquiries by mail, states that the trussed roof greenhouses which collapsed at Mr. Farenwald's place near Philadelphia were not of the King Construction design or construction. Moreover a number of King houses in the same neighborhood passed through the same weather conditions without any damage whatever. Also the King Construction Company has just received an order for two trussed roof greenhouses, each 500 feet long and 28 feet wide, which are to be built for Mr. Victor Groshens on his place which is only a couple of blocks from Mr. Farenwald's place. Owing to having introduced the trussed method of greenhouse construction and to having been identified with it for so long, the King Construction Company finds it necessary to make this announcement as a matter of self-protection.

This shows you exactly how our Interchangeable Clamp Column Fittings are used.

When you compare our estimate with the fellow's, just keep in mind that our price includes all these iron parts.

Here is exactly the way we use our Interchangeable Clamp Column Fittings in that Giant Arch we have been telling you about lately. See how the Purlin is secured to the Gable Bar by that Purlin Clamp—how every Sashbar is firmly fastened to the Purlin by the Heavy Purlin Clasp—that the Column Fittings are split and tightened together by a single strong bolt, making them easily adjustable. The whole thing is a most convincing argument of the strength and neatness of this combination of $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches Purlin, Column and Cross Tie, forming a light but absolutely rigid Giant Arch running the entire length of your house. It is not only a matter of strength but a mighty lot of time saved in erecting, and when used with our Cast-Iron Foot Pieces, makes a certainty of perfect and easy line-up of your roof.

It's this way—we sell you the house complete or any fitting or part of it you want—but whatever you do, use these Column Fittings and have the Giant Arch, then you can be sure your house won't spread. Write for prices.

NO NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

There will be no national flower show at Chicago in November, 1908. The executive board of the Society of American Florists in session at Philadelphia March 11 and 12 came to the conclusion that the year of the national election would not be a propitious time to try to arouse national interest in flowers and voted down the project in spite of the $7,000 guarantee fund which had been raised.

Those present at the Hotel Walton, in addition to the Philadelphians, were: President W. J. Stewart, Boston; Secretary P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; the following directors, W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.; Sam Murray, Kansas City; Theo. Wirth, Minneapolis; F. H. Traendly,

New York; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; ex-president W. F. Kasting, Buffalo; Patrick Welsh, Boston; G. X. Amhryn, New Haven, Conn.; Felix Mense, Glen Cove, N. Y.

Instead of a November show a spring exhibition was taken under consideration.

Sentiment was shown to be strongly in favor of continuing the summer meetings of the S. A. F. as in previous years.

Horticultural hall was selected for the trade exhibition at the convention at Philadelphia next August and the Broad street theater for the meetings of the society. David Rust was selected to be superintendent of the trade exhibition. A program was partially prepared.

THE AMERICANROSE SOCIETY*THE WASHINGTON MEETING.

The annual convention and exhibition of the American Rose Society is on this week in connection with the spring show of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C. The exhibition is held in Washington Light Infantry hall and is one of the best ever staged by the society. Much active work has been done during the year, with the result that the premium list contained more special offers of valuable trophies than ever in the history of the society's many successful exhibitions. The quality of the exhibits is of the usual high character, and the rose exhibits are supplemented by the spring plants shown for the premiums offered by the local Florists' Club. Altogether it makes an exhibition of which those responsible for its being have reason to be proud.

The judges of the exhibition were: P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, and Robert Craig, Philadelphia. The plan was to have their work completed at the time the show was opened to the public at 6 p. m. on Wednesday, March 13.

The first of the business sessions was called to order Wednesday evening with a large attendance of members, including both those in the trade and many private gardeners. President Robert Simpson delivered his address, which will be found in full in this issue. Secretary Hammond reported on the successful year's work. The treasurer's report also was presented. The first of the papers to be read was that of E. G. Hill. The titles of the papers and the essayists are as follows:

"The Hybridization of Roses, the Ideals Before the Worker, and the Means Used to Work Up to Those Ideals," by E. Gurney Hill, Richmond, Ind.; "Ever-Blooming Roses for the Garden: What to Grow and How to Grow Them," by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, Minn.; "Climbing and Trailing Roses in the Hardy Rose Garden," by M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass.

The invitation to Chicago for 1908 is almost certain to be accepted.

Treasurer's Report.

The report of Treasurer Harry O. May showed cash receipts in the year as $1,235.91; disbursements, $911; balance on hand, $324.91.

Officers Elected.

Officers were elected as follows:

President—Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.

Vice-President — Fred Breitmeyer, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

PRESIDENT SIMPSON'S ADDRESS.

[Delivered before the annual convention of the American Rose Society, Washington, D. C., March 13, 1907.]

We meet today in the capital city of our country as guests of the Washington Florists' Club. Many of us are growers, and I am sure that all of us are lovers of the rose. Some of you have come to Washington to place on exhibition your beautiful flowers, some of you have come chiefly it may be to admire the wonderful productions of others, but a goodly number of you, I trust, are here to discuss with us problems in rose growing and problems that confront our rose society. In any event I am sure that no one will say that mercenary motives have drawn you, some from the east, some from the west, some from the south, and others from the north, at considerable expense of time and money at this busy season of the year to attend this meeting; it is to gratify your love for the beautiful in nature, and to signify your willingness to do your part towards making this earth more beautiful and attractive that you are here today.

I trust that our meeting may be helpful and encouraging to every grower of the rose, that we all as a result may have higher ideals, and go home more than ever in love with our business and calling and that this shall prove to be an epoch-making meeting of the rose society.

Preparations for the Meeting.

At the 1906 meeting in Boston, the matter of selecting the place in which to hold the exhibition and annual meeting of 1907 was left in the hands of the executive committee, after a discussion, however, which showed plainly that the sentiment of the meeting was in favor of going to some city in the west, should the way be open for us, and should such a course seem to be for the best interests of the society. The executive committee left the matter open until July, thus giving every section of the country an equal chance to compete for the privilege of having the rose exhibition.

The society did not receive any invitation from the west; but it did have a very hearty and pressing invitation from the Washington Florists' Club, which sent its president to New York to back up its formal written invitation.

The president, Mr. Bisset, assured us that Washington and its people would see that the local detail work of the exhibition was taken care of properly and that an exhibition there would be a success financially. Whether they have kept their promise you will see for yourselves.

There is a great amount of detail work to be done in arranging for an exhibition of this kind, particularly when it is not held in connection with some regularly organized horticultural society where men have been trained for the work, and where all the facilities for the holding of exhibitions are at hand; more, perhaps, than many of you realize; and I wish at this time to express my appreciation of the hearty enthusiasm with which the officers and local members of the executive committee have entered into this work, and have done willingly and gladly, whatever was in their power to do. Several meetings have been held in the city of New York, and some of the officers have not failed to attend a single meeting. If the exhibition of 1907 shall prove to be equal in point of interest and enthusiasm to that of 1906 much of the credit is due to the push and energy and painstaking work of our secretary and the enthusiasm of our young treasurer.

The position of secretary of the American Rose Society is no sinecure I assure you if the incumbent tries to do faithfully the work that he finds to do, and just in proportion to the quality of the man in office will depend how much of the work shall be done, or how much shall be left undone. For good work the salary is totally inadequate, but in the present state of our treasury I dare not ask for an increase. The work of our present secretary during the last nine months will meet with your entire approval, I am sure.

Plan and Scope of Meeting.

As the program for this meeting indicates, we have arranged for the reading of papers on interesting subjects by men eminently qualified to talk on the subjects treated, and I trust we may give to them our undivided attention during the delivery of the same, and in the discussions that shall follow we may be able to give out and gather in a vast store of useful information. The society is to be congratulated on the personnel of its essayists.

It has been arranged that gentlemen of large experience and observation shall start discussions on matters of vital interest to the society; that of increased membership, and new work that may be done by the society as an organization for its members and the public. I do not wish to anticipate or forestall what these gentlemen may advise, as I hope for a very full discussion when, in the order of business, these subjects are taken up; however, in this connection I may be permitted, perhaps, to make a few observations, and possibly offer a few suggestions.

Suggestions for Enlargement.

Much good work might be done by the society if we had at command funds with which to do the work; much work should be done that has as yet not been even attempted. For instance, a committee of half a dozen men, representing different sections of the country and competent to deal with the peculiar climatic and other conditions of that particular section, might, in conjunction with the secretary, prepare a list of roses with general cultural directions, suitable to the conditions prevailing in those various sections, that would be worth much more to rose lovers than the annual membership fee. This committee could also advise as to the best roses to purchase, Dutch, French, English, home-grown budded, or own root plants, department store stock, or stock direct from nursery. There is a vast amount of ignorance among the general public along these lines, and their ignorance is frequently taken advantage of by unscrupulous dealers.

What the society can offer its prospective members as an inducement to membership will no doubt be a controlling factor in seeking to enlarge that membership; on the other hand, larger resources, as a result of larger membership, will permit the society to undertake greater things.

If the American Rose Society should identify itself with the various horticultural societies of the country to the extent of offering its silver medal once a year for collections of cut roses, roses in pots, etc., to be judged according to the scale of the Rose Society, it would add much interest to the exhibitions and our society would gather strength and prestige thereby.

If the financial resources of the society were adequate, I would favor the holding of an exhibition in June, as well as March, so that the rose-loving public could see and become acquainted with the beautiful outdoor roses that we cannot place before them in March, such as Frau Karl Druschki, Baroness Rothschild, Mrs. John Laing, etc. The June exhibition would be more popular, more interesting and do more to educate the masses in rose culture than it is possible to do with an exhibition of indoor roses in March.

If the catalogue men of the country—we have some of the gentlemen here to-day—could be induced to give a page of their catalogues each year to a statement of the aims and purposes of the Rose Society and advocate membership in it to their customers, great possibilities would immediately loom up before the society.

It is reasonable to suppose that our membership could be multiplied several times within a year if all present would resolve to make a point to interest their friends and business acquaintances by correspondence, by personal appeal or in any other legitimate way that presented itself.

Rule Governing Novelties.

The society offers gold and silver medals at its exhibitions for new varieties, the object in offering these being to encourage the production of novelties of sterling merit; but in ruling that a novelty must score at least ninety-five points to win the gold medal we practically make it impossible to win it at all.

Very few judges would be willing to say that a flower was perfect in form, in color, in fragrance or distinctiveness or, in fact, in any one particular, yet a variety with as many good points as Liberty or Killarney or Richmond should have a chance to win the gold medal of the society. We should of course maintain a high standard in the giving of such awards, but we should at the same time avoid exacting impossible conditions.

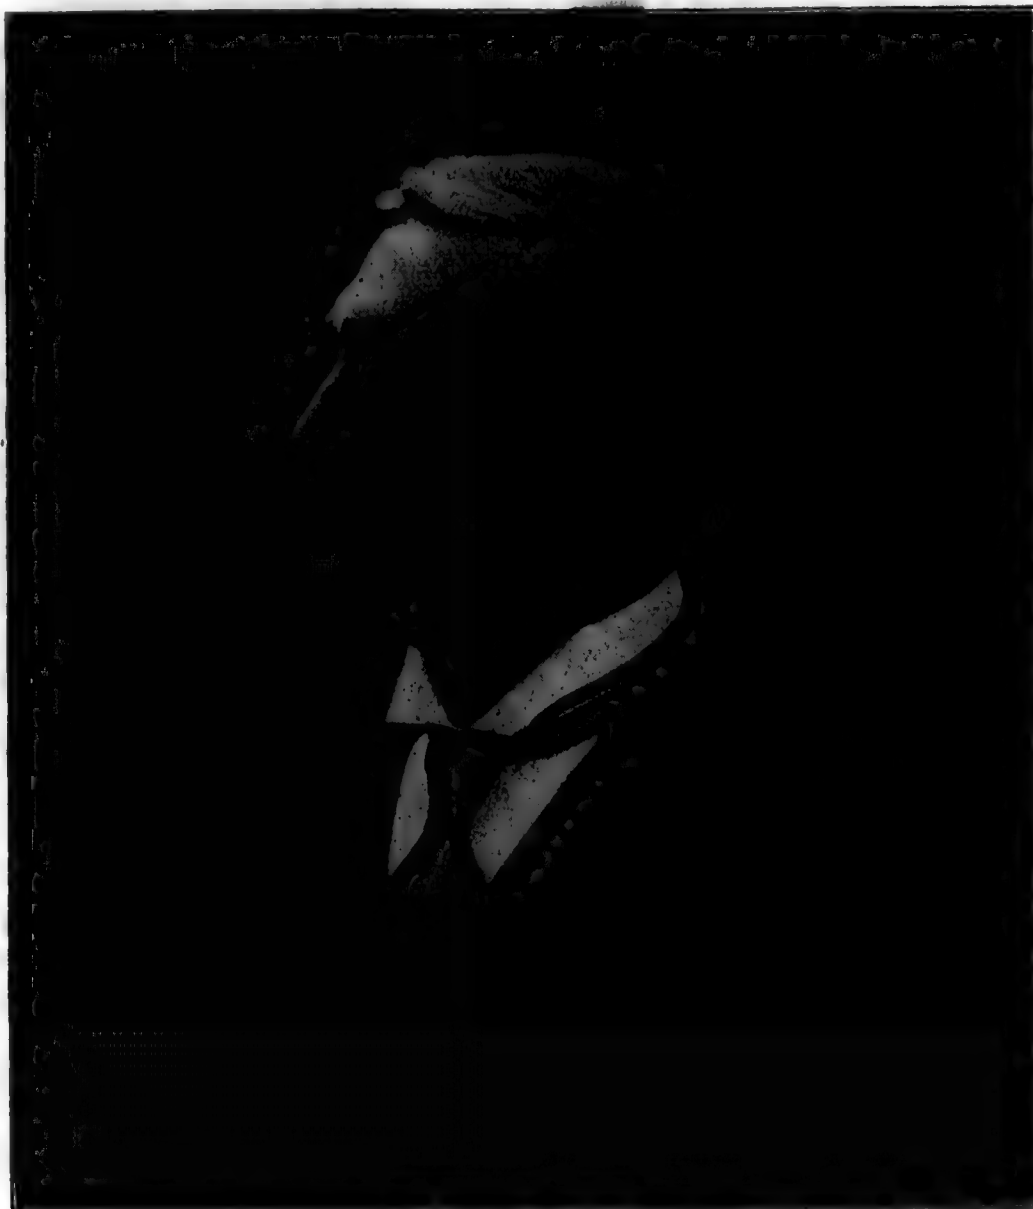

I ask you to consider whether or not the rule governing the judging of novelties needs to be revised.

The Permanent Fund.

At the 1906 meeting you will remember that much time was taken up discussing the desirability and practicability of establishing a permanent fund, of considerable size, for the uses of the society; all agreed that it was desirable, but the meeting could not agree on any particular plan of action. We have today in America many men, so enriched with this world's goods, that their chief concern in life is to find the best way to spend this vast accumulation of wealth that it may accomplish the greatest amount of good for the largest number of people.

Art, education, science, religion, humanitarianism, have each received their millions to aid in prosecuting the work of blessing mankind along their particular lines. It is a good thing to pay out $100,000 for a fine painting and present it to a museum of art, where it can be seen and admired and furnish inspiration to thousands of people. It is noble to endow our institutions of learning so that our youth may have the privileges of higher education. It is still better to provide the means for caring for the sick, the suffering, the aged and the homeless; but it is a question if, in establishing a fund of ample proportions out of which this society might disseminate information and furnish the inspiration which would result in the beautifying of hundreds of thousands of homes all over our land, and bringing joy and brightness into the hearts and lives of still larger numbers of our people, the man of means would not be choosing the very best way, from an artistic, educational, humanitarian or sociological point of view, of investing the wealth which a kind Providence has placed in his hands and made him the steward and custodian. I am sufficiently optimistic to think that if a committee composed of the right men should take hold of this matter and present it properly to men of large means and philanthropic tendencies, that a fund could be established, permanent in character, the income of which only could be used by the society.

Gentlemen, it rests with you to take such action on this and other matters as your combined wisdom may consider best. I trust your stay in the city of Washington may be both pleasant and profitable.

ORDER AND CLEANLINESS.

Having recently had occasion to visit a number of greenhouse establishments, the writer has been impressed with the fact that the order and cleanliness which obtain in greenhouses are almost always in direct proportion to the prosperity of the establishment. It does not follow that the cleanliness is the result of prosperity, but that prosperity is the result of cleanliness.

When a man keeps his greenhouse clean and neat he also keeps the stock growing in it in the same condition. The result is that it is better stock than is grown in a disorderly establishment. It sells quicker and it brings a better price. You would not look for fine plants in a slovenly establishment. It is an old saying that the clothes make the man. By the same token, order makes the successful business man.

They say that cleanliness is next to godliness. There certainly is no other way in which we may so easily approach godliness. It costs little to be clean. It takes only a moment to throw the rubbish where it belongs, instead of under the benches. Five minutes once a week will rake the gravel or ashes beneath the bench and habit quickly will cause a careful man to keep his pot plants straightly aligned.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Florists' Club is going ahead with preparations for a flower show this fall.

THE ROSE GROWER'S IDEAL.

[A paper by E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., read before the annual convention of the American Rose Society at Washington, D. C., March 13, 1907.]

Your president and executive committee have suggested as a subject for my paper, "The Advisability of Having an Ideal in Mind when Attempting to Raise New and Improved Varieties of Roses."

It would have been better if you had selected some one to prepare this paper who has had a broader and more extended experience bearing upon this particular line of work than myself. It is a subject full of interest, of mystery and of elusive leadings, and of which I am free to confess I have little exact knowledge. The more I have tried to inquire into the laws governing cross fertilization, the more surprised I have been at the very little tangible knowledge possessed by plant growers, for it would seem that after generations of attempts at crossing we should find much more accurate information at hand, and, at least, a few formulas which might be followed with some certainty.

These, however, are not yet at hand, but that is no occasion for discouragement, for of one thing I am convinced, there are underlying laws which guide to certain results, and while at present we are only groping toward them in the dark, patient persistence will finally give us our working theorem which will prevent the present waste of utterly haphazard effort, and reduce it to a science and an art at least approaching the exact. Nature does finally reward the painstaking investigator and she does reveal enough concerning her manners and methods to give incentive to those who would know her better.

Have an Ideal.

I should say, by all means have an ideal in mind when attempting the production of a new variety of rose through the medium of cross-fertilization; in fact, the ideal is persistently forced upon the working florist by the very shortcomings of his everyday favorites. The amateur may please his fancy and delight himself with the odd and curious results of haphazard work, and there is much pure pleasure to be derived from it; but the florist, with all his love and reverence for the beautiful in nature, has a sterner purpose in view. The rose has descended to commercialism; the rose grower must raise it to a pinnacle of perfection, where it can dominate its special line of commerce, without apology for any weakness. And it must be confessed at the present time that the usefulness and the profit of nearly every variety of commercial rose is greatly impaired by some serious drawback to its reliability. To eradicate these faults in the parent is impossible; to produce a seedling that shall retain the good points of the parent with the weakness varieties, and only after a good lapse of time have results been forthcoming. The purpose in view was first to secure a vigorous constitution in the progeny; that must always be first. Seedlings showing exceptional vigor have again been bred with Liberty, Richmond, American Beauty, Queen of Edgely and several of the best hybrid perpetuals. My aim has been in this particular line of work to secure a red rose that would flower freely under glass in winter. Furthering this idea of improving the red varieties, pollen was taken from American Beauty and over 300 crosses were successfully made last year, 1906, and these latest seedlings are now nice little plants growing vigorously in their little pots. My hope in thus using American Beauty pollen is to secure, if possible, a long-stemmed, free-blooming winter-forcing variety. A previous effort in this line has given us a rose superior in color and size to American Beauty, with the additional advantage of producing flowers as freely as Richmond or Bridesmaid.

Quite a separate line of crossing has been to improve upon the size of Rosalind Orr English while retaining its general color scheme. With this in view, possessing double the number of petals that either of its parents possess. The above two instances are cited to show concentrated effort on a given line in a multiplicity of crosses. I give the above in detail to illustrate my conviction of having an ideal in mind when working for a given end. Perhaps some day we will find a means to the end desired by simply making one direct cross.

I do not know to a certainty, yet I believe that Joseph Pernet, of Lyons, has followed out a similar certain line in his raising of new varieties. I judge this by the similarity in growth, foliage and the general build of the flowers in his originations. Take Pres. Carnot and Antoine Rivoire; note their general characteristics and I think it is easy to detect a similarity of lineage running on down through his Madam Rivary, Le Progress, Joseph Hill, Mme. Jenny Gillemot, Mme. Philip Rivoire, Mme. Melanie Soupert and Baronne de Sinety, and three of his very latest introductions, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mme. de Luze and Renee Wilmart Urban show the same general characteristics. It would be interesting to know if M. Pernet had been following out Mendel's theory in his breeding of roses. Not all his productions are allied to the varieties mentioned above, for his Etoile de France, Marquise Litta, Soliel d'Or and Laurent Carle are quite distinct from the type cited above.

Transmission of Vigor.

If the law of interbreeding be correct, gathering in only pollen from closely related varieties, then the law of heredity as applied to the animal kingdom would not hold good in the vegetable family. My suggestion would be to follow both lines of work, interbreeding and promiscuous breeding, if I may thus put it, but always have in mind the design of a given improvement.

Of late my one thought has been to select the most vigorous grower for the mother plant, for without health, vigor and a good constitution the finest new rose is a failure. I am thoroughly convinced by observation and experience that the mother plant has the most to do in giving health, vitality and constitution to the offspring. This being the case, we can see at a glance how important it is to select only the very strongest among the everblooming varieties to serve as the female parent. We should select the pollen from those varieties which have pronounced qualities in the way of color, stem, length of bud and fragrance. If these qualities are present in the male you may hope that they will have an influence upon your crosses.

With the increased vigor possessed by many of the later productions in tea and hybrid tea roses, such as Betty, Pharisae, Killarney, Kate Moulton, and others of like vigor, it need not be many years before a race bred from such parents will give greatly increased vigor over present existing varieties, and with this increased strength of growth great good will come to the grower.

The infusion of hybrid perpetual blood will also have a marked tendency to increase the vigor and growth of seedling roses, and, by using the everblooming for the seed bearer, freedom of bloom will in large measure be preserved. It ought not to be many years until the present non-flowering hybrid perpetual roses are superseded by a race equally as virile but which will give continuous eliminated is well worth working for. This, then, forms an ideal; definiteness of purpose in any line of activity is essential to results, and quite as important as the ideal is the working plan which must be formulated to attain the end in view.

Examples of an Ideal.

Some years ago I began working on red roses, hoping to secure something better than Meteor, Teplitz and Litta, all fine in their way, though stubborn material in the hands of the rose forcer. My initial work was begun with these hundreds of crosses were made with pollen taken from Richmond, Queen of Edgely, American Beauty and Paul Neyron during the season of 1905. The progeny from these have mostly flowered, with a result that some thirty have been retained for a second year's trial. Two out of the thirty selected are of unusual promise. One of these is American Beauty x Rosalind Orr English and is specially notable for its stiff, long stem and large size. The other cross is Richmond x Rosalind Orr English, which is intermediate in color between its two parents, with the additional merit of bloom. If we get vigor of growth with certainty of bud, flowers on the ends of long straight stems, that will be the type that shall give us larger and finer flowers for our winter forcing as well as better varieties for our gardens.

I know that you will say that predictions of this sort are easy to make; but kindly indulge me a little; let us use any means to impress upon the minds of those just taking up this work that constitution is the foundation upon which all effort must proceed.

Skilled Workmen at Work.

A great number of skilled and practiced workmen are enthusiastically bending their best energies toward improving the rose and we are surely making a steady advance in the right direction under such men as the Dicksons, the Pauls, the Souperets, Pernet and others in France, and Peter Lambert and his colleagues in Germany, together with Cook, Walsh and others in this country; we have a right to expect even better results than have yet been obtained.

Even with the combined efforts put forth by the rosarians in this and other countries, progress will appear slow to the impatient workers in our ranks; trifling advance will be noted, but better types and varieties will surely gladden our eyes and hearts, for nature has been kind in the past, both in bud-variation and by cross-fertilization and the coming years will be no less fruitful than the past. We shall improve upon Malmaison, Marechal Niel, Catherine Mermet, Bride, Perle des Jardins, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, American Beauty, Frau Karl Druschki, Liberty and the two Cochetts, or, at least, she will reward us with varieties more readily amenable to our twentieth century requirements, which are stringent in the extreme.

By all means let us study Mendel and his theory, note the deductions of De Vries, and gather all the information possible from whatever source it can be had, remembering that nature's working theorems are to be discovered only by the painstaking application of the knowledge at hand, and that no amount of speculative theory will take the place of intelligent persistent experiment personally conducted.

Let no one think for a moment that good results may not be obtained by the simple direct crossing of two varieties of roses, for such is quite possible without interbreeding. Richmond was obtained by using pollen from Liberty upon Lady Battersea, but it was the one valuable result out of a very large number of the same cross, so that we may say there is a chance of a good return, though it is not probable from this procedure.

I have carefully avoided the use of any scientific or technical terms and have only tried to embody in this very imperfect paper my own ideas and to chronicle the results of my own observations.

The Need in Northern States.

Our gardens are sadly in need of roses that will grow and bloom as do most of the present standard varieties in England, on the Pacific coast and in many of our southern states; but here in the north only a pitifully small number can be depended upon. And right here is a wide field for the hybridist to enter. A good, reliable, everblooming garden rose will give pleasure and delight to millions of American citizens. It is to be hoped that many rose lovers may enter this sadly neglected field. My ideas on this line of the subject were given in a paper read before the S. A. F. at its annual meeting at St. Louis, 1905.

This line of work might have received a fine stimulus if the trustees of the Carnegie fund had been empowered to set aside certain funds to be awarded for meritorious new garden roses. The field is not inviting to one who must earn a maintenance, but if a prize or a money consideration could be offered of sufficient size it would stimulate efforts in this direction.

EASTER STOCK.

It is time every retail florist was looking to his stock for Easter. If it is not already under way in the greenhouses, it should be ordered of the wholesaler. And if you have stock provided, have you all the necessary accessories? A large part of the sales will be growing plants and nowadays no plant is salable unless properly dressed with the many accessories provided by the supply houses.

In a great majority of the stores there is only a limited sale for the large and expensive plants and for the staple items of the average store only the less costly accessories are needed—but they are no less necessary because inexpensive, and adequate supplies should be on hand for a record trade. Unless all signs fail this is to be a banner Easter. It is the purpose of the REVIEW to show in this and the following issue the plant arrangements which sold well last Easter, not so much that they may be copied as to offer suggestions to the thoughtful store man as to how the stock may be varied. Variety is not only the spice of life, but in a flower store it is the sauce which does as much as novelty to retain the interest of the public.

Birch bark ware is one of the best sellers at Easter. You can fill all sorts of bark receptacles with all sorts of plants and make a pleasing combination in every case, but don't overdo the birch-bark feature. Provide styles, sizes, colors and kinds of boxes, baskets, hampers, etc. The twig basket is no longer a novelty, but it is a good seller. If you have not provided these things, lose no time in sending an order to your supply house. If you don't know just what you want, leave the selection to the house, simply indicating how many pieces you want, the amount you want to invest, or the price per piece you want to pay. Of course you want a few big pieces, but most of them should fit an average purse among your customers.

It is the same with pot covers, crepe papers and the staples, but mats, etc., should be on hand to add variety. Ribbons, too, are necessary in large assortment of styles and colors. Order now what you will need.

TROUBLE WITH SWEET PEAS.

Will you tell me what is the matter with the branch and leaf of the sweet pea enclosed? You will notice the double branch is grown from the same stalk below and I cannot understand why one branch is grown from the same stalk as healthy as it can be. It is the same with the leaf I am enclosing. Occasionally through the house there is a whole stalk affected this way, while the ones all around are healthy. The sweet peas are growing in some old fern soil with some horse manure mixed into it. Most of the plants are now looking fine with the exception of a few that are affected as you can see by the enclosed leaves. The house was run for a while at 60 degrees at night and 70 degrees during the day. Now it is run 44 degrees to 50 degrees at night and 60 degrees days. Do you think the disease is caused by having run the house too warm, or by ammonia rising from the horse manure in the soil, or do you think it is an insect invisible to the naked eye?

J. A. J.

Undoubtedly the high temperature maintained during the early stages of growth must have been harmful to the sweet peas, which naturally love a cool and moist atmosphere. The temperature you are now keeping is much more to the liking of the plants. We do not think the soil can have been of the best nature. Old fern soil, even when mixed with manure, is hardly what we would want to plant sweet peas in for best results. They like a good loam in which a liberal supply of well decomposed cow manure has been incorporated. If you used horse manure and it was rather new, some ammonia would undoubtedly arise, but nothing but thoroughly decayed manure should be used in the soil for any crops.

It is difficult to tell what has caused the dying of the shoots. It may have been partially due to the causes you have suggested, or again, the trouble may be the work of minute bacteria which work inside the stems and no spraying solution can reach them. Cutting off or pulling up and burning affected stems is all that can be done to mitigate the evil.

CAMPANULAS.

Campanulas, which are also known as bluebells, harebells and Canterbury bells, are among the most beautiful of our hardy flowers. Some of the dwarf species are not over six inches high, while the tallest reach five feet and over. There are many species in cultivation, of which the following six, according to the National Council of Horticulture, are most deserving of mention:

Campanula persicifolia in the northern states is an almost continuous bloomer, is a perennial, will grow in any soil, and is, perhaps, the most beautiful species cultivated. The type has blue flowers, but there is a white variety. There is a semi-double variety which is beautiful, growing two to two and one-half feet high, and is best adapted to a hardy border or old-fashioned garden. It should be planted in irregular masses, mixing colors.

Campanula Medium, the common Canterbury bells, is the showiest species. When in bloom it is often such a solid mass of flowers that no leaves can be seen. It varies from darkest to lightest blue, pink and white. It is biennial and will die immediately after the seeds have ripened. There is a distinct variety called cup and saucer, and several that are decidedly double. The young plants should be set out not later than June.

Campanula Carpatia is the prettiest of the dwarf species. It is perennial, of easy culture, producing flowers in great abundance the second year from seed. Campanula turbinata is another dwarf species suited for open rockeries or small borders. For rockeries, Campanula rotundifolia, the English harebell, is best. One of the tallest varieties is Campanula pyramidalis, which sometimes reaches five feet. Its numerous spikes are covered with blue and white flowers.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—The Summerfield Floral Co. has placed in its store window a glass aquarium twelve feet long and stocked it with goldfish. Among them are some fine American and Japanese fantails, and it serves to keep a crowd in front of the window all day.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Salvia Splendens.

That brilliant and ever popular flowering plant, Salvia splendens, grows very rapidly, either from cuttings or seed, and a mistake is often made by starting it too early, with the result that the plants become too tall and, if in pots, so matted with roots that they never sufficiently recover from it. Where stock plants have been carried over they should now be producing an abundance of cuttings, which should be placed in sand at once. Keep the cuttings shaded, well watered daily and they will soon root. We consider seedlings, however, preferable to plants raised from cuttings, as they possess vigor. Seedlings should be transferred to flats or be potted off as soon as they produce a second pair of leaves. They grow very fast and even if seed is not sown before April 1, excellent plants will be produced.

Sweet Peas,

It may seem a little out of place to discuss the sowing of sweet peas in the open when the snow lies deep and frost is two or three feet in the ground, as it still does in some sections, but we cannot tell how soon a change may come. It arrives with cyclonic force sometimes. Sweet peas are annuals which love a cool, moist climate and the outdoor crop should be gotten in as soon as the frost leaves the ground and it is sufficiently dry to work. Points to remember in sweet pea culture are: Liberal enrichment of the soil. Burying the seeds at least three inches deep, being careful not to sow thickly, and if you have done so, thin in good season. Give them brush and other supports before they start to climb. Remove all seed-pods as soon as formed. Water, if possible, during dry weather and mulch the plants to assist in keeping them cool and moist at the roots.

A few good varieties of sweet peas are: Dorothy Eckford, white; Hon. Mrs. Kenyon, primrose; King Edward VII., scarlet; Lady Grisell Hamilton, lavender; Prince of Wales, rose; Miss Wilmott and Helen Lewis, orange; Gladys Unwin, pink; America, variegated; Black Knight, maroon. For early flowers sow some of Earliest of All and Mont Blanc.

Poinsettias.

Stock plants of poinsettias will have been resting under the benches for the last ten weeks. While there is no immediate hurry about starting them, if you desire to bench some of the rooted cuttings and desire long, strong stems, they should be overhauled some time during the present month. Shake the soil away from the roots, cut the tops back well and place in as small a pot as the roots can be comfortably squeezed in. Place on a sunny bench over steam or hot water pipes, give a good soaking of water and then keep rather on the dry side until the plants start to break. Cuttings rubbed off with a heel, or cut below a joint, root readily in bottom heat, care of course being taken to allow no sun to strike them and to water well daily. Sand of a moderately coarse nature from which water passes away at once is preferable to the finer sort, which is more liable to scum over. As soon as roots are an inch long, pot up. Care must be taken not to break the roots and it is a great mistake to allow them to make long roots before removing them from the cutting bench. It always results in a loss of foliage.

Smilax.

Seedlings of smilax are much more profitable for planting than are divided roots. If seed was sown last month the little plants will now be ready for 2½-inch pots. A further shift may be given them about the end of April, and in these latter pots they can remain until they can be set out in the beds during June or July. They should have not less than six inches of good soil and if liberally treated will yield several crops of strings during the season. A top-dressing of well-rotted manure and occasional soakings of liquid stimulants will materially improve them. Red spider disfigures the foliage if not kept well syringed, especially where the plants are near the heating pipes. The demand for smilax is not what it used to be before the advent of Asparagus plumosus, but we find a bench of it always pays well.

Variegated Vincas.

For vases, veranda or window-boxes Vinca variegata is indispensable. If you want a good supply of strong plants for another year it is not yet too late to put in a good batch of cuttings. Rub these off with heels from the base of the plants and they will soon root in sand. Do not cut the tops from the long, trailing shoots. They are slower and more uncertain of propagation. Pot off the little cuttings when nicely rooted and plant out in the open ground. Cultivate well all summer and by fall you will have fine stock which you can squeeze into 4-inch pots and stand in single rows along the edges of your cool house benches. This will make the finest possible material for use the following bedding season. There never seems to be any surplus of this pretty and most useful plant and if you chance to grow more than you need yourself you will always find it easy to dispose of. Vincas need a cool house and, being hardy, an occasional freezing does not harm them. Fall cuttings, taken about the last of September, will make nice plants for use the following May.

Lorraine Begonias.

If you are in the habit of raising your own stock of this most useful of all begonias you will now be able to secure some nice base cuttings from old, cut-back plants which have been rested a little but kept lightly syringed. These cuttings, as soon as two inches long, should be taken off with a sharp knife and inserted in clean, sharp sand, where they can have a bottom heat of 70 degrees to 75 degrees and a top heat of 60 degrees to 65 degrees. Use care in watering and nearly all will root.

If leaf cuttings were used and put in sand some six weeks ago they will now be rooted nicely and young growths will be making their appearance. Pot them up in light, sandy compost and keep a little on the dry side until the roots are running around the sides of the pots.

Some growers propagate the shoots coming from these leaf cuttings and consider that so treated they make better plants. Our experience has been that plants from leaf cuttings are more robust, make larger leaves and have larger flowers than those raised from cuttings, but flowers are more loosely scattered on the plant. This is rather an advantage, however, as Lorraines really carry too many flowers in proportion to the foliage they carry.

Preparations for Easter.

The early buds on many of the lilies will now be showing white. These can now safely be given a cooler house and will be out in good season. While the principal call for lilies is for single stalks in pots, made up plants carrying three to five each make very handsome specimens and always sell well. It is possible now to make up these plants by selecting those which will flower together. No compunction need be used about shaking away or chopping off some of the balls to make them fit into the new receptacles. They will flower just as well if kept well watered. Probably you have noticed how stalks cut off containing only buds open out finely in water. The same applies to the made-up plants.

Tulips and narcissi which are usually grown in flats can be taken out and placed in pans now. They will open just as well and last as long as if grown in them. Do not attempt this unless the plants are short and stocky and do it just before the flowers open. Hyacinths can be treated in the same way. It is inadvisable to pull apart the very vigorous narcissi, like Emperor, Sir Watkin and Horsfieldii, in this way, but Golden Spur we find stands it well.

Pansies and double daisies sold well in little baskets last Easter. If you have these in a cold house and they are coming into flower make up some pans or baskets of them. English primroses are also salable if treated in the same way. Many customers prefer these little harbingers of spring to the larger and more showy plants associated with Easter.

Flowering shrubs, such as lilac, deutzias, cherries, double plums, etc., should now be coming into flower and ought to be opened in a cooler house. Wistarias also need similar treatment. Do not allow the latter to become too fully expanded.

Rambler roses, hydrangeas, spiræas and in fact all flowering stock will now be matted with roots and copious supplies of water are necessary to keep them in good condition. A little carelessness now may mean a heavy pecuniary loss. What a treasure a man is who is a really careful hand at watering. He who does not skip a few plants on a bench every time he waters it is the exception, not the rule. Nothing so stamps the successful grower as one who knows how to use the hose at watering pot.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Forcing an Easter Crop.

Two weeks after you get these notes you will be in the thick of the Easter rush, the biggest day of the year for the trade. No doubt you are trying even now to estimate what your cut of blooms will be for that week and wondering whether you will be able to deliver as many as you may have already promised. If you could count on bright weather you could make a close estimate, but when you have to run the risk of a bad week it becomes an uncertain proposition, and here is where trouble commences. You accept orders for as many blooms as you cut during the heaviest weeks, and when the sun refuses to show itself, and the blooms fail to materialize, you shove on the heat to force them out. Consequently you weaken your plants so much that for some weeks your cut will be away below its usual quality.

The danger at this time of the year is not so great as it is at Christmas and with a little foresight the plants can be forced to give a few extra blooms without danger, but be reasonable. The sun is stronger now and more ventilation can be given, thus causing the plants to grow stronger and to build up and overcome the effects of a slight strain quicker than in midwinter. By starting the temperature upward a week before you deliver the blooms and raising the temperature a degree each night until you have raised 6 degrees, and after you are through cutting drop again in the same manner, you can make it comparatively easy for the plants. But under no conditions should you jump the temperature all at one time, or drop it, especially if the weather is bad. Do not raise it more than 6 degrees. That is enough to push out as many blooms as will be forced out without injury to the plants. Remember that the time of gluts and oversupply is not far away. During those times only the best of stock is wanted and you cannot afford to do anything now that will lower your quality at that time.

Next week I will tell you what may safely be done in the matter of storing up your cut to provide a holiday supply.

EXPERIENCE WITH CARNATIONS.

[A paper by A. J. Stahelin, of Redford, Mich., read before the Detroit Florists' Club, March 6, 1907.]

With my short and limited experience in carnation growing I do not feel that I am competent to write anything new or of instructive value to our carnation growers, especially when our trade papers are continually printing all the information that any one possibly could desire. Nevertheless, what little experience I have had I will only be too glad to give.

Getting a Start.

In the spring of 1903 I concluded that every young man at the age of 25 should decide what his future vocation should be—then get busy at it. Especially did I think this time of myself, so I at once secured a position with the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., one of the largest and most up-to-date carnation growing establishments in this country, where many important ideas in greenhouse construction, as well as carnation growing, were easily picked up.

In the fall of 1903 I returned home, built one evenspan house 30x200, with gutters six feet high and raised benches, installing a Superior hot water boiler.

It was altogether much the same as many houses seen at Chicago.

The first year lettuce was grown and also young carnation stock for the following year, which was the season of 1904-1905, when the carnation market was glutted almost continually, causing profits to be almost unknown. The following year another house was added to the old one, with solid beds made with 12-inch boards for sides, filled with soil. This house was planted to carnations before the glass was on, with very satisfactory results. The following year, which was 1906, another house was added and planted to mums.

My Way of Growing Carnations.

To start with, the propagating bench is built of 1x6 tamarack boards with three hot water pipes underneath. After whitewashing the inside of the bench it is filled two inches deep with fine cinders, and is then filled with three inches more of coarse, clean sand, leveled and well packed. While this is not the modern style of propagating bench, still I find no fault with it, as it is inexpensive, easily constructed and, if properly taken care of, nearly every cutting will be strongly rooted.

I try and select cuttings at the stage where there is about one-half inch or a little more of base without any leaves, then cut as small amount as possible off of the base and still leave a nice, smooth surface. If plenty of room is at hand on the propagating bench leave on all the leaves except when it is necessary rooted and oftener when much ventilation is given. The cuttings should never see bright sunlight until well rooted, when they should be planted up as soon as possible. I always have planted in flats, simply because it saves a lot of work and, when plants are planted out in the field, I believe it to be just as good as if pots are used. The advantage of growing young carnations in flats, at least in my soil, which is clay loam, is: First, a saving of a lot of labor potting, repotting and handling; second, they do not suffer from want of water so easily, which is worth while, because in the spring rush they might happen to be neglected; third, about the last of April or first part of May they can be placed outdoors. This outdoor treatment with cool nights brings the strength and vigor right into them and they are then in tip-top shape to plant in the field. In case of a hard frost they are easily covered with a large piece of light cotton, which is enough protection at this time of year.

Field Culture.

By cutting with a sharp knife, both ways, between the rows of plants, then holding the flat on one side, giving it a sharp downward tap upon a solid block, the plants are loosened and easily taken out in good shape, with all the soil clinging to the nice mass of roots which they always have. These plants with roots looking out in every direction, not like pot-bound plants, but ready to take hold of their new quarters, always make fine, time, not allowing the plants to produce a lot of buds unnecessarily, which is only a waste of energy on the part of the plants. This also should be done often and not more than two or three shoots on any plant stopped at once. Doing this often helps much to have plants in continuous bloom.

Indoor Culture.

Lifting and planting in the houses should always be accomplished as early as possible. I have always planted in August, but would plant earlier if possible. By keeping the plants well cultivated they can be taken up at any time, regardless of the weather, although a dry time is best, as then the foliage is rather hard and not easily injured by wilting. I like to leave on a ball of dirt about three inches in diameter, which, when planted, helps to keep them erect and also from wilting badly the first few days.

Until the plants begin to send out little rootlets they should be sprayed once or twice a day, according to the weather; also keep them well watered after the roots have taken good hold. Watering is only done when needed and then thoroughly. At first it is necessary to keep the soil wet enough, still not too wet, as the plants have not as yet taken a strong hold, and the soil, not being full of roots, is easily and quickly soured. Thorough cultivation will help much to avoid this and should be done often.

As soon as growth commences, the shade on the houses should be removed, plenty of ventilation given and the plants never allowed to suffer for want of water. After the plants are larger and are beginning to bloom, the soil, being full of roots, is kept sweet, so it is not necessary to cultivate so often.

Fumigating and syringing should be attended to. Greenfly and red spider must be kept out of sight. Nothing causes so much loss and annoyance as a good crop of these pests.

Marketing and Varieties.

Every grower has his own way of disposing of his stock. So far I have sent the bulk of my stock to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, except at a few short periods when I have relieved a glut, to a certain extent at least, by selling on the street; which method by some has been severely ridiculed, and by others upheld, as the only method that will satisfactorily relieve a glut.

I am at present growing Thos. W. Lawson, White Lawson, Variegated Lawson, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Nelson Fisher, Harlowarden, Ethel Ward, Helen Goddard and two seedlings, one white and one red. Of these varieties I will discard M. A. Patten, Harlowarden, Ethel Ward and Helen Goddard, and will add to my list for next season Aristocrat, Beacon and White Enchantress. I have also done a little hybridizing, which every grower should practice, at least on a small scale; it keeps up a lively interest, gives one something to look forward to at all times and, perhaps, may result profitably financially.

WESTBORO, MASS.—R. O. Stockbridge & Co. have had a hard winter, especially since their boiler broke down in the cold snap in February. They were able to keep frost out by using oil stoves, but it has hurt later crops.

to remove some of the small lower ones. When a batch is ready, make a cut in the sand with a tool about the width of a table knife and one-sixteenth of an inch thick. The distance apart to stick the cuttings is governed by their size. Three-quarters of an inch apart in the rows and the rows two and one-half inches apart is about right for medium size cuttings.

Spray the cuttings every day until healthy stock. So far I have planted out in the field as early as possible, sometimes the last part of April, when we still have hard frosts and find the earliest ones out always make the best plants. They are planted eight inches to nine inches apart and the rows thirty-nine inches apart, so all cultivating can be done with a horse. This should be done as soon as possible after every rain.

MR. THADEN AND HIS HOUSE.

The accompanying illustrations show H. Thaden, dean of the craft in the south, in one of his greenhouses at Atlanta, explaining the merits of his new truss construction to a visitor. In forwarding the pictures Mr. Thaden says:

"We mail you today photographs of a greenhouse embracing our recently patented equalizing truss. Perhaps you would like to make use of it in the REVIEW, as it embraces something radically new and different from all old methods at construction, eliminating not only the post supports for the purlins, but also any and all cross bracing, thus clearing the greenhouse of all obstruction from floor to ridge. As you are aware, we were awarded a certificate on our modest exhibit last summer at Dayton, and our invention was highly recommended by the judges. We thought you would no doubt like to show it up to better advantage than has heretofore been done, as we are one of your old patrons."

PANSIES.

The pansy is one of the oldest garden flowers and most popular. Every florist can sell quantities, put up in baskets at 25 cents or 50 cents a basket, so the customer can readily carry them and plant at his convenience. In one of its widely circulated press notices the National Council of Horticulture says it is best for the home garden-maker to have in the spring pansy plants which his florist has carried through the winter in a coldframe. The plants should be set out as soon as the ground is in condition for working. The only cultivation necessary is to keep the ground reasonably well stirred to prevent baking, and keep it free from weeds. The blooms should be kept picked closely, so the blooming season may be lengthened.

In favorable localities, where the soil is moist and not too warm, the seeds may be sown early in the spring and if thinned and the flowers picked closely will give a succession of bloom almost until winter.

In rather warm and dry localities, sow seeds in August or September and transplant the seedlings to pots, or better, to a coldframe with good soil, where they may remain until cold weather, when they should be protected by glass and boards. They are best kept in the frames until spring, when the boards may be removed and the plants allowed to make early growth in the frames.

STOCKS AND CANNAS.

I have a fine strain of Cut-and-come-again stock and would like to raise my own seed. Please tell me when and how to fertilize the blossoms. I have both double and single. Which will be the seed-bearing parent? How are cannas hybridized? G. O. K.

Presuming that there are no other colors or varieties of stock in the same house, there is no reason why you cannot secure some good home-saved seed. The single flowering plants are the ones which produce the seed. Bees and tapping the plants should sufficiently scatter the pollen at this season. The plants must be left in the pots or benches until the seed shows signs of ripening, when they can be pulled out, the roots and part of the stems removed and the remaining portion of the plants hung up in a dry, airy shed or room until the pods are all ripened. The pods show by their size and shape those which will give a high percentage of double flowers and all inferior ones should be discarded. Culture in pots of stocks intended for seed is desirable, for they can be moved around, whereas in benches the space, however valuable it may be, cannot be utilized for other crops until they are pulled up.

A French method given by M. Chate is to place the plants in a position outdoors well exposed to the morning sun. When flowering, a number of shoots are nipped off, leaving ten or twelve pods on the secondary branches. All other branches made are carefully removed. All the sap goes to the few pods left and they average eighty per cent double flowers. The upper portions of the pod were separated, as they averaged eighty per cent single flowers against an equal proportion of doubles for the lower half.

In Erfurt, Germany, where an immense business is done in stock and aster seeds, many of the choicer strains are obtained from plants in pots grown in sunny houses. The plants are watered only enough to keep them from dying. Thus treated the plants are weakened, pods shortened, seeds better ripened and they yield sixty to seventy per cent of doubles.

Cannas for purposes of hybridization ought to be grown in pots. Place them in a sunny location in a temperature of 55 degrees to 60 degrees at night. Use a small camel's-hair brush to remove the pollen from the flower of one variety and touch the pistils of the future seed-bearing plant with it. Remove all flowers not fertilized, allow the plant to produce no more blooms and enclose the fertilized flowers with fine muslin to keep out bees and other insects to make sure that no outside agencies are at work on the flowers. It is best to enclose them from insects before they open. If fertilized during winter, sown as soon as ripe in a brisk bottom heat and grown right along, seedlings will flower the same year. Use celluloid labels to record the cross. They will not decay, like wood or paper ones. C. W.

ALBION, MICH.—A. H. Dew will erect two new houses this spring. One will be a truss house 37x100, the other a carnation house 27x100. A retail store will be opened in a new building on Perry street. Mr. Dew has been at it twelve years.

WAVERLY, MASS.—Vernon T. Sherwood, formerly with Thomas Rochford & Son, the famous English growers, is now with W. W. Edgar & Co., in charge of the new houses here.

THE JEWEL CASKET.

One of the novelties is the jewel casket shown in the accompanying illustration. It looks as though it were made of heavy iron and as if it were very old. A few of the best stores in New York, Chicago and other cities have had it as an exclusive specialty and have found it sold well with such flowers as violets, the sizes being just right for this purpose. Now the Geller Florists' Supply Co., which states that it is sole importer, is sending the jewel box broadcast in the trade.

PLANTS BY MAIL.

[A paper by P. J. Lynch, of West Grove, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia March 5, 1907.]

While the subject assigned me only treats of roses by mail, I shall nevertheless take the liberty of extending the scope to the mail-order plant trade in general. At first glance it might seem that this subject is too prosaic to admit of much that is new and interesting, especially to those not engaged in the mail order business. There is, however, much in common between the mail trade man and the numerous other branches of the florists' trade.

The Pioneer.

From the most humble beginning the mail order trade, beset as it has been with so many vicissitudes, has made marvelous strides. Few of us realize the great work that is being done in this branch of our trade, a work that has brought untold advantages to everyone engaged in the florists' business. I can do no better than to repeat the opinion expressed upon a previous occasion, that your mail order man is the pioneer and pathfinder of the craft, and he has carried the gospel of loving flowers, especially roses, and how to get them and grow them, to the most remote parts of the country, and, in a measure, has been the educator of the masses, those who

He has had much to combat: First of all, the skeptical public in early times refused to believe that it was possible to send rose plants, or plants of any kind, safely by mail, particularly to distant points. Then, too, in the beginning it would seem that the postal laws were framed with special reference to the mail order business, to prevent it from spreading to any material extent. Thirty-five years ago the rate of postage was the same as that of letter postage. No plant was allowed to bear a label, nor was the name of the firm sending the package allowed to appear on the outside. It would be hard to imagine a condition of affairs more discouraging than this, but the germ of the mail order business was firmly rooted, and the early pioneers kept after the postoffice department until these obnoxious conditions were modified and placed upon their present basis. The efficiency of the mail service has been improved, and now we are allowed to send seeds, roots and plants of all kinds under the rate of the third-class postage, 1 cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof.

Postal Reforms Needed.

While the postal authorities have done much to encourage the mail order business, there is yet ample room for further reform; in fact, with the annual deficiency in the revenues of the postoffice department it would seem that there is a great opportunity to place the department upon a business-like basis. Not until there is concerted action in the mail order trade will we secure such concessions as we should have, and could undoubtedly get by unity of movement in this direction.

While I will not cite the rates of the express companies as a criterion of all that is equitable and fair, yet in some respects they are far superior to our postal rates. For example, the express company will carry 100 pounds from Philadelphia to Pittsburg for 40 cents, rate than they charge the government to carry the mails.

It seems to me that mail matter, particularly in bulk, should be carried with reference to the distance covered, just the same as passenger traffic or express rates. It might be urged that this would bring about a great deal of unnecessary confusion, but were the country divided into sections or by meridians, and have a rate of postage to each section, it would not bring about any more confusion than is incident to the selling of railroad tickets or making express rates to various parts of the country. The question is one, however, so broad in its aspect that I shall not treat it further at this time, but it is a subject that might be carefully considered by the national society. And, too, the matter of a parcels post system, similar to that in vogue in Great Britain, should be sought after as a measure that would revolutionize the mail order business to a very great extent.

Abuses in the Trade.

I do not want to be classed among pessimists, but in these days of reform there is an opportunity to apply some of it to the mail order trade. Sending roses and plants of all kinds by mail and guaranteeing their safe delivery to any postoffice or express office in the United States is the fundamental principle which has made the sending of plants by mail no longer a risk from the purchaser's viewpoint.

Year after year large sums of money are spent in advertising and the sending out of catalogues, and the skeptical public has been won and has confidence in the mail order man; but in the endeavor to still further increase our business there has crept in here and there abuses which should be eliminated. Through the trade papers there has been considerable discussion as to the advisability of giving premiums with every order. The practice is a pernicious one, to my mind, and there is really no excuse for it. We oppose the free distribution of seeds, but in our own business we do not oppose the free distribution of plants. There should be a flat price, a price that leaves a legitimate margin of profit; then the buyer knows just exactly what he is getting and what he has to pay for.

There are other abuses which could be easily modified which would add much to the moral tone of the mail order trade, such as misleading guarantees, which seem to grow more radical year by year, and the sending out of plants that are not true to name, which to my mind is one of the most damaging practices which besets our trade.

I am not an advocate of trusts and so-called community of interests, but there should be a common interest among those engaged in the mail trade to bring them in closer touch with each other and modify many of the abuses which have crept in.

The mail order trade is one of interminable detail, and a visit to an establishment at this time of year would prove a revelation to the novice. A correspondent, whose airy persiflage is always heard above the roar and din of the battle, recently paid a visit to a mail order establishment, where he was shown upwards of a million small rose plants, being sent to nearly every state in the Union, and to foreign countries, such as China and Japan, where, notwithstanding the trip of four to five are not in close touch with the large centers of population where the rose, grown for cut flowers, can make its own appeal. He has been a factor in beautifying the waste places of our land, and the great work in which he is engaged has but commenced.

while the postoffice department would charge $8 for 100 pounds of mail matter. The express companies conduct their business upon a profitable basis, and even the railroad companies provide splendid accommodations for the public in the passenger traffic at a much less weeks, they invariably reach their destination in first-class condition. For a person who is never surprised at anything his astonishment at the vast amount of detail involved came in the nature of a real triumph.

Nature Demands Novelty.

Human nature enters largely into our trade, and it must be realized that to sell goods to an army of different individuals through printer's ink and to hold this trade requires, first of all, honesty of purpose and individual care for each and every order that is sent out.

The mail trade man encourages the production of novelties, especially in roses, because each year he must have a leader in the different branches of his business, and nothing is so attractive as a new rose. There have been so many disappointments in the new roses from Europe that we must depend upon our own hybridizers; and for that reason it seems proper at this point to ask the earnest support for the American Rose Society, and encourage it by attending the forthcoming exhibition in Washington. The demand for good roses is ever present. We cannot secure too many Killarneys, Richmonds, Golden Gates, Kate Moultons and new roses of these types. The hardiness of the hybrid tea class has brought about a revolution in amateur circles, because the planter of the north can have roses throughout the entire growing season and at the same time they are sufficiently hardy to withstand the rigors of the most severe winters. We should undoubtedly secure a greater variety of hybrid teas, and our exhibitors of new varieties should be encouraged in every possible way.

I could say much more with reference to the sending of roses by mail, but I fear that the details would, perhaps, prove tiresome, and I shall therefore draw my remarks to a close by thanking you for your patience and kind attention.

THE ST. LOUIS EXHIBITION.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society opened its first spring flower show Tuesday afternoon, March 5, in the Masonic Temple building on Grand avenue. The exhibition in itself was very pretty and the society is to be congratulated on arranging in such a short time so successful a show.

The display of bulbous stock was fine, especially that exhibited by F. C. Weber and G. B. Windler. C. Young & Sons and Wm. Schray & Sons had two fine groups of plants in bloom. The booth put up by F. C. Weber was handsome, showing good taste in every way. C. Young & Sons also had a finely arranged booth. In the booth of the St. Louis Seed Co. there was a general display of seeds, bulbs and birds. The Koenig Floral Co. also had a booth made of smilax which was pretty.

Theodore Miller displayed a dinner table Wednesday afternoon, which was tastefully arranged and attracted a great deal of attention. His floral basket, which took first prize, was also a fine piece of workmanship. F. C. Weber and R. J. Windler also displayed handsome made up baskets.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., staged a vase of the new rose Rhea Reid, through S. S. Skidelsky, which was admired by all the visitors. Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, Ill., showed some good specimen ferns and Peter Reinberg, Chicago, a new pink rose which came in for its share of praise. Mr. Kill, of Reinberg's, was present with a large display of roses.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, had a fine vase of No. 20, a new red carnation.

The attendance was good throughout the three days and evenings, for society people were sent free tickets. The judges were Alex. Waldbart, R. F. Tesson and Andrew Meyer, Sr. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Collection of plants in bloom, Wm. Schray & Sons first; G. B. Windler second; Koenig Floral Co. third.

Collection of bulbous plants in bloom, F. C. Weber first; Wm. Schray & Sons second; G. B. Windler third.

Fifty foliage and blooming plants, C. Young & Sons first; Wm. Schray & Sons second; C. C. Sanders third.

Specimen plant, Wm. Schray & Sons first on Kentia Belmoreana; Koenig Floral Co. second; C. C. Sanders third.

Specimen blooming plant, A. Jablonsky first, with a handsome Acacia armata; F. C. Weber second.

Six blooming lily plants, C. Young & Sons first, with longiflorum; A. Jablonsky second; Fred Meinhardt third.

Display of lily of the valley, H. N. Bruns, Chicago, first; Wm. Schray second.

Display of pansies, R. J. Windler first; C. C. Sanders second.

Display of violets, Wm. Schray & Sons first; F. C. Weber second; Wm. Winter third.

Display of bulbous cut flowers, F. C. Weber second; no first.

Display of carnation blooms, five varieties, twenty-five in a vase, Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., first on White Perfection, Red Riding Hood, Aristocrat, J. A. Valentine and Enchantress; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. second.

Fifty white carnations, Chicago Carnation Co. first, on White Perfection; John Steidle second, on Lady Bountiful.

Fifty light pink carnations, Chicago Carnation Co. first, on Enchantress; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. second, on Evangeline.

Fifty dark pink carnations, Chicago Carnation Co. first, on Aristocrat; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. second, on Lawson.

Fifty red carnations, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. first, on Robert Craig; A. Jablonsky second, on Cardinal.

Fifty variegated carnations, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. first; A. Jablonsky second, both on Mrs. Patten.

Fifty carnations any other color, A. Jablonsky first, on Harlowarden; J. Steidle second, on Enchantress.

Four vases of roses in four varieties, twenty-five in a vase, Peter Reinberg first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey second.

Twenty-five American Beauties, W. J. & M. S. Vesey first; F. C. Weber second.

Twenty-five pink roses, Peter Reinberg first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey second, both on Bridesmaid.

Twenty-five white roses, Peter Reinberg first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey second, on Bride.

Twenty-five red roses, Peter Reinberg first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey second, both on Richmond.

Twenty-five, any other color, Peter Reinberg first, on Uncle John.

Basket of flowers, Theo. Miller first; F. C. Weber second; R. J. Windler third.

Vase of flowers, F. C. Weber first; Theo. Miller second.

There were many visitors in town. Among them were Leonard Kill, Chicago; Peter Olsen, A. F. Longren and J. D. Thompson, Joliet, Ill.; A. C. Brown, Mrs. A. C. Canfield, Springfield, Ill.; C. L. Washburn, Chicago; Geo. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; A. R. Knowles, Bloomington, Ill.; M. Barker, Chicago; J. S. Wilson, Western Springs, Ill.

On Wednesday afternoon the society gave a dinner to all the members and visitors, at the Colonial Cafe.

In the evening the society held its annual meeting and elected officers as follows: President, Edward Mallenckrodt; vice-president, Leonard Mathews; secretary, O. G. Koenig; treasurer, Fred C. Weber. The society, it is said, will at once make preparations for a fall show.

J. J. B.

Special prizes were awarded to the following exhibitors for booths erected in the show: St. Louis Plant and Seed Co., Koenig Floral Co., C. Young & Sons Co. and Fred C. Weber. All the first display a large collection of Whitmani ferns, dracenas, blooming azaleas and Philadelphia Ramblers.

HOW ST. LOUIS LOOKED TO ME.

The spring flower show at St. Louis last week was a decided success in my opinion. There were a number of novel features which were very attractive. The best feature was the beautiful appearance of the hall on entering. The first view the visitor got made the hall seem like an enchanted island, filled with flowers artistically arranged to blend their colors in a most delightful manner. This pleasing effect started the visitor on a tour of admiration around the hall and it accomplished a vast amount of favorable advertising for the flower trade in St. Louis.

The exhibit of spring flowers was the largest and most complete I ever saw. The arrangement of tulips, daffs, hyacinths and valley in baskets, pots, etc., decorated with ribbons and coverings, showed excellent taste. Mr. Weber's booth had a mantel decoration, a very handsome basket of roses and several vases all well done, which, with the arrangement of plants, made a fine advertisement for his business: Theo. Miller immense flower, four inches in diameter, well built and a peculiar dark wine shade in color. It is certainly a fine novelty. The Chicago Carnation Co. had a choice exhibit and Aristocrat showed up well. They had a vase of Witterstatter's J. A. Valentine, a fine carnation of a color between Enchantress and Winsor that looks like a good thing. The J. D. Thompson Co. had a good lot of flowers. A vase of Robert Craig was exceptionally good. There were a number of other good carnation exhibits. (Bassett & Washburn's No. 20 attracted its share of attention.—ED.) In the roses, Peter Reinberg had two vases, one of Chatenay and one of Richmond, with stems four to five feet long. We don't wonder the alderman has to keep raising the roofs of his greenhouses if he grows that kind of stock. The E. G. Hill Co. had a vase of its new rose, Rhea Reid, similar in color to the American Beauty. The flower is very solid, though not as large as a Beauty. The stems and foliage were fine. The color appears a little dull at first, but we think if the plants were grown in our rich Illinois corn soil that the color might be brightened up a little.

The welcome extended the visitors made one feel right at home and the and second awards carried a cash prize in addition to ribbons.

Special mention was made of the following:

George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., exhibitor of four varieties of ferns, the most notable of which were the Whitmani and Piersoni.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., showed a vase of Rhea Reid rose, a good, large flower on stiff stem.

Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill., exhibited a vase of seedling No. 20, a bright red carnation, large size and good stem.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., showed a large vase of mixed carnations, containing a number of well-grown varieties.

Heller Bros., Newcastle, Ind., showed three vases of carnations for exhibition only.

Theodore Miller, St. Louis, a table decoration of yellow jonquils and violets.

F. H. Meinhardt, fifty-seven varieties of cut flowers.

Alex. Waldbart & Sons, a group of beautiful specimen palms.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, had on had a number of artistic baskets, vases, etc., and must have made a decided hit with the visitors. Another firm had a small "greenhouse" made of smilax and filled with plants and flowers, forming a novel and handsome exhibit.

There were several choice exhibits of plants arranged for effect that were fine.

J. S. Wilson, of Vaughan's Greenhouses, brought down two beautiful specimen azaleas and several other plants. Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, had a fine show of bulbous plants and there were several exhibits of Japanese and Bermuda Easter lilies which were splendid considering how late all lilies are.

In the cut flowers the show of carnations was very good. A. C. Brown, of Springfield, had a fine vase of his new carnation, Gov. Deneen. Brother Brown is a sly dog and though a little deaf has extremely good eyesight. He had decorated his fellow townsman, Mrs. Arthur Canfield, with an immense specimen of the Governor and, as Mrs. Canfield was the "belle of the ball," it took the wind all out of the sails of the rest of us. However, the Gov. Deneen is an many courtesies which were extended us will cause us to always remember with pleasure the first exhibition of the St. Louis Horticultural Society. St. Louis is a good flower town, a city of well to do, appreciative people, and the exhibition cannot but have done much to add to the love of flowers. Thus it helps all in the trade and is worthy of all support.

C. L. WASHBURN.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is considerable improvement in conditions as compared with a week ago. A good supply of flowers of all kinds is arriving, but stock cleans out much better. Wintry conditions still prevail and we have plenty of snow, although clearer skies have been vouchsafed to us. Roses are in tolerably good supply except Brides, which are quite scarce. Beauties are in fair supply, but not in much demand, other roses and spring flowering stock having the preference. Richmond, Killarney, Wellesley and Chatenay are all of good quality. Some fine Brunners come from one or two growers.

Carnations are selling better. White ones are rather scarce and selling as well as the colored sorts. Violets are abundant, $2 per thousand seeming to be quite a general price, although good stock realizes up to 50 cents per hundred. Sweet peas are of superlative quality and sell better. Callas and Easter lilies are also doing rather better. Dutch bulbous stock meets with a more ready sale. There is no special change in adiantum or asparagus, but hardy ferns promise to be scarce and dearer unless snow soon disappears.

A good variety of pot plants is now arriving, including rambler roses, genistas, rhododendrons, bulbous stock, spiræas, etc. The sale on these is improving somewhat.

North Shore Jottings.

A. E. Parsons, at E. S. Grew's, finds lupins an excellent annual for winter flowering in benches. His carnation house looked remarkably well. Enchantress, of course, took the lead, but Patten, White Lawson and other sorts were all good. Fischer's Purity freesia was fine and preferred to all others.

fine shape. Melons were still being cut from one house. These are now grown here the year around. The first lot of nectarines were just setting. In carnations, Enchantress and its rose-pink and striped sports were all splendid. Lady Bountiful and White Lawson were also fine. A house of yellow and white antirrhinums was first-class and there were fine lots of schizanthus, geraniums, cyclamens and other decorative plants. Lupins were found a fine bench crop for Christmas. A good many orchids are grown. One house is devoted to cattleyas and considerable batches of Phalenopsis, cœlogynes, Vanda cœrulea and calanthes are grown.

Alexander Shaw presides at Judge Wm. H. Moore's estate. The glass here is not extensive but divisions are devoted to roses, carnations, violets, bedding plants and stove plants. The carnations, as elsewhere, were very good.

J. W. Duncan will address the North Shore Horticultural Society on shrubs at its meeting on March 15.

At W. B. Thomas', where Mr. Connolly has charge, carnations again looked well, Lawson, White Lawson and Enchantress especially so. Nectarines in tubs were coming into flower. A house of grapes and figs was just being per magnate pale into utter insignificance. Reading such articles will make the general public believe that seedling raising is a perfect Klondyke for the growers of the divine flower.

Horticultural hall is this week given up to a part of Boston's automobile show. The spring exhibition, which opens March 22, promises to be unusually interesting and attractive. Many entries are already to hand for it.

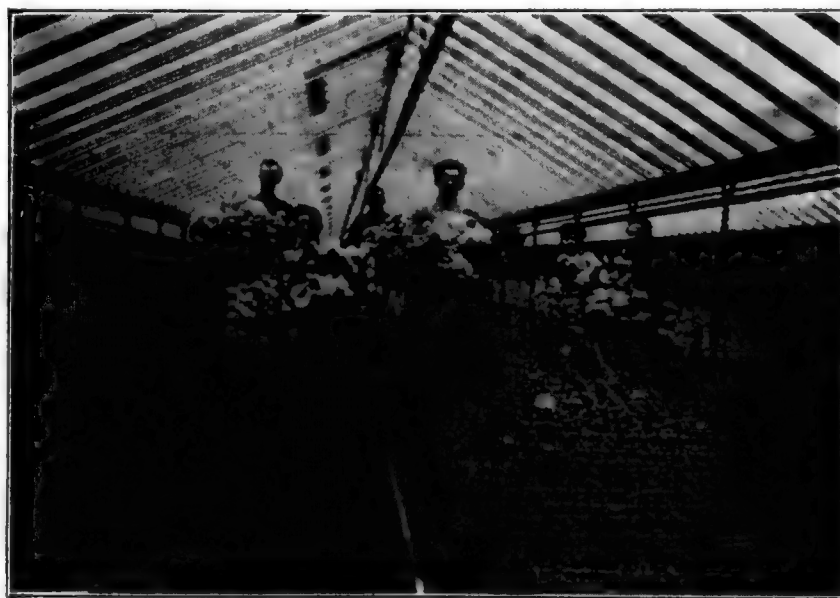

Tom Butterworth, at the recent presentation banquet, proved himself a first-class poet. His verbal bouquets for the club officers past and present made the hit of the evening. Tom is one of the few examples of the successful orchid cultivator and poet combined we have heard of.

William Sim visited A. C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., this week to see his new "creations" in sweet peas flowering. At Clifftondale the sweet peas are superb at present.

There is only a small delegation from this section to the meeting and exhibition of the American Rose Society in Washington.

William Nicholson is having a heavy sale for shamrocks. He grew some 50,000 this season.

At Dr. Sear's we noted some fine carnation seedlings raised by the head gardener, Mr. Mitchell. One, a white with a 4-inch flower, quite took our eye. Nectarines here were just coming into flower and promised well.

James Salter, at Mrs. Philip Dexter's, has several divisions devoted to fruit, including grapes, nectarines and melons. In carnations Enchantress looked fine. Some nice seedlings were under trial.

Two fine new houses, each 150 feet long and even span, are nearing completion for W. S. Paulding. They are located some considerable distance from his other houses and will be used mostly for fruit and vegetable forcing. At the older place the gardener, F. E. Cole, has a nice house of carnations and good batches of cyclamens. Primula obconica, antirrhinums and other seasonable flowers were noted.

At H. C. Frick's, George Wyness, gardener, the most extensive range of glass on the North Shore will shortly be started upon. A great deal of planting was done last season, including thousands of hybrid rhododendrons.

At R. C. Hooper's everything was in started. Roses fill one house and others are devoted to melons and a general assortment of useful plants for cutting and decorative effect.

Various Notes.

F. E. Palmer will open a discussion on carnations at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club March 19. A number of carnation experts will take part in the discussion. Exhibits of many of the newer introductions, as well as standard varieties, will be forthcoming and other attractive features are being planned.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day with W. W. Edgar & Co., Waverley, Saturday, March 23. Members and friends are invited to take the 1:30 p. m. electric from Park street subway station for Waverley. Easter flowering plants are the special features at this establishment.

Pierce Bros.' new scarlet carnation, Governor Guild, was the subject of an exhaustive and highfalutin article in the Boston Sunday Post of March 3. It made the story of the Lawson carnation at the time of its sale to the Boston cop-

DUTCH HYACINTHS FOR EASTER.

Will you tell me which are the best Dutch hyacinths, in different colors, to grow for Easter?

C. W.

Commercially, we consider single hyacinths much more desirable than double ones. A few of the best of the several colors are: Single red or pink, Norma, Gertrude, Robert Steiger; single yellow, King of the Yellows; single blue, Baron van Tuyll; single white, Grandeur à Merveille, Baroness van Tuyll, L'Innocence.

One or two fine double varieties are: White, Bouquet Royal; red, Bouquet tendre; blue, Charles Dickens and Bloksberg; yellow, Bouquet d'Orange.

E. T. BARNES, of Spencer, Ind., states that the dahlia growers of the middle states are talking organizing a dahlia society and invites correspondence from those interested.

A PLANT peddler in Chicago has a miniature greenhouse on his wagon. It is worth its cost as an advertisement, to say nothing of the protection it affords his stock.

THERE was from six to ten inches of snow over the north Atlantic states Sunday, March 10, extending as far south as Philadelphia.

EVERY florist should have a printed letter-head; many of the best houses decline to give wholesale prices to those whose requests do not bear this evidence that they are in the trade.

J. W. BARWELL, whose fertilizer factory was established at Leicester, England, in 1800, and located at Waukegan, Ill., since 1900, says a great many retail florists are doing a nice business in selling his packets of fertilizer for house plants.

IN the REVIEW of February 28 there were notes on a new race of peony-flowered dahlias. A. T. Boddington, New York, handles this novelty, although the editor did not know it when the article was published. Being wide awake, Mr. Boddington had in the next issue an advertisement of these new dahlias, and, in fact, the REVIEW had before the advertisement appeared received inquiries as to where stock was to be obtained. Advertisers have frequent opportunity to turn to good account the interest in their specialties sure to be created by articles in the REVIEW.

STATE OF BUSINESS.

prove. Dry goods, millinery, hats and caps, and, in fact, all wearing apparel, are in the forefront as regards activity, an early Easter making for an early opening of spring trade. In such lines as cotton goods, some of which tend to further advances, it is not a question of procuring business, but rather one of making deliveries on orders booked months ago.

"As regards manufacturing lines, it is the old story of heavily filled order books and of capacity being worked to the utmost, despite which deliveries are backward. Collections, though satisfactory in some lines, are, on the whole, backward, the tightness of money and the enormous volume of business outstanding being the main factors."

PITTSBURG has an all-night florist.

THE post-office department has rescinded its recent ruling against detachable advertisements and coupons in advertisements and will shortly promulgate a ruling with regard to their permissible size.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Mrs. Minnie G. Bunde.

Mrs. Minnie G. Bunde, wife of A. H. Bunde, St. Paul's oldest florist, died March 4, at her home, 162 Tenth street. The deceased had never known good health since the sudden death of her daughter, four years ago.

Mrs. Bunde was born in Dunkirk, N. Y., and removed to St. Paul in 1868. She is survived by her husband two sons, William G. and Philip C. Bunde. The funeral took place March 6, from the residence. Interment was at Oakland.

Arlene Ratekin.

Arlene, the 6-year-old daughter of J. W. Ratekin, Shenandoah, Ia., died March 4, of strychnine poisoning, a short time after taking some of the drug she had found in the house. When found she was dying, and although a physician was called immediately there was no chance of saving the little girl's life. J. W. Ratekin is a well-known seed merchant with a large establishment in Shenandoah.

Bartholomew Menke.

Bartholomew Menke, an aged florist at Hope, Ind., is dead, having expired March 7, after a long illness. Mr. Menke was a native of Prussia, but located at Hope in his early manhood, where for a number of years he was the florist and gardener for the Moravian college.

Lawrence Heint.

The passing of Lawrence Heint at his home in Terre Haute, Ind., occurred March 1. He was born in Austria in 1840 and came to America when 12 years of age. He located in Terre Haute in 1863. Mr. Heint was not only a veteran florist but also a veteran of the War of the Rebellion. He was a member of the Nineteenth Indiana Battery and served with credit until wounded at Perryville, Ky., when he was honorably discharged.

The funeral was conducted from the residence by the Terre Haute Commandery No. 16, Knights Templar; Morton Post No. 1, G. A. R.; Eastern Star, Terre Haute Lodge No. 19, F. and A. M., also attended. Mr. Heint is survived by a widow and three brothers: Joseph, of Jacksonville, Ill.; George, of Toledo, O., and John G., of Terre Haute.

William Griffin.

William Griffin, for years a member of the firm of Griffin Bros., of Frankford, Pa., died March 7 at his home, No. 4915 Willow street, after a long illness. He was 58 years old and had lived in Frankford all his life. He retired from active business some time ago and spent several months in Europe in search of health. He was a member of the school board of the twenty-third section and a vestryman of St. Mark's P. E. Church. He was buried on Monday afternoon with Masonic honors. The services were held in St. Mark's Church. A widow survives him.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market was decidedly weak March 6 and 7, but on Friday a large number of big orders for cheap stock for special sales served to clean up the accumulation in fair shape, and put a more encouraging aspect on affairs. Monday always is a day which gives the wholesalers high hopes for the week. Recently Tuesday and Wednesday have dashed these hopes, but the indications now are that the approach of Easter will have a stimulating effect. It may not be that the demand will at once increase appreciably, but already a reduction in supply is noted. It is stated that this is due entirely to crops having passed their height, but for the next fortnight it may be expected that growers will be bringing in nothing more than is necessary. They will, without doubt, do what they safely may to accumulate supplies for Easter.

Beauties are not abundant, but there is no great demand for them. While rose crops are slightly less than a week ago, the supply of better grades is slightly ahead of the demand, for the principal call seems to be for cheaper stock in quantity. The quality of roses is excellent with practically all growers.

The receipts of carnations are not so heavy this week as last, but are fully equal to all requirements. One wholesaler stated that last week he handled more carnations than in any week in June last year. It is no wonder cheap sales are made. The crop of splits is lighter now and quality generally is all that one could ask. Enchantress has brought no more than good white in the last week and the prospects are that white the latter part of this week, for dyeing for St. Patrick's day, will command a premium. The dealers in dye all report a large business.

The receipts of violets have fallen off, but quality also has retrograded. It looks as though the season will end shortly after Easter. Prices are just a trifle better than last week; the top prices no higher, but the low prices not quite so bad.

The crops of Romans and Paper Whites are out of the way earlier this year than usual. Few now are seen. No great quantities of daffodils or jonquils obstruct the market. Callas sometimes go to waste. There now are plenty of longiflorum. Sweet peas are doing well. Valley is abundant. Some fancy mignonette is selling well.

Green goods would better be ordered a day in advance, if possible.

Easter Prospects.

The wholesalers have been busy canvassing the Easter prospects. They find that most of the lilies will be ready; in fact, there are more plants that are a little bit early than there are which need hard forcing. Quality will be nothing to brag of in most cases. It looks as though good lilies might command a premium as Easter approaches but that there will be plenty others which will stand a long time awaiting a purchaser.

Several of the largest growers report that they will be ready with special crops of Beauties for Easter. Other stock will be in about the normal supply, but not in such heavy supply as a year ago, when Easter was two weeks later.

Reinberg Changes Base.

Several years ago Peter Reinberg, with an eye to the future, bought a farm a couple of miles northwest of his present location and it has been understood that eventually he would remove his base of operations from the old stand, where land commands a premium. Arrangements have been made for a sidetrack and 500 boxes of glass have been ordered for the start of the new range there. Plans have not been completed, but it may be foreseen that a big modern plant will be the outcome.

Various Notes.

The supremacy of the great central market and the possibilities which lie in united effort for the common weal were the themes Tuesday evening, March 12, at the banquet of the Chicago Commercial Association at the Coliseum, where 2,100 business men, each with a pink carnation in his buttonhole, attended what was undoubtedly the biggest banquet ever given in this country. The 250 waiters went on strike just as the guests were seated, but instead of giving in the diners repaired to the kitchens and served themselves, so the affair was thoroughly typical of Chicago.

H. N. Bruns sent a display of lily of the valley to the St. Louis show last week and, as usual, took first prize.

N. J. Wietor spent this week visiting Richmond, Columbus and Cleveland.

The wife of Duncan Robinson, of E. Wienhoeber's staff, is ill in the Passavant hospital.

The A. L. Randall Co. this week received a large importation of German Easter novelties. They came just in time, for some of them have yet to reach the Pacific coast.

Arthur Dietsch has sold the Winandy place to John Becker, a lettuce grower at Evanston, who took possession last week. Zech & Mann handle the stock as heretofore.

C. W. McKellar is receiving some nice spikes of the Beauty of Nice stock. They sell well.

Joe Beaver is now with J. L. Raske, on Jackson boulevard.

Bassett & Washburn have on exhibition some blooms of a longiflorum which Henry & Lee call the Togo lily. It is a longiflorum grown in the north of Japan and has a heavy texture and every evidence of health and vigor. It is to be regretted that the north of Japan does not produce lilies in quantity.

E. C. Amling says one of his growers will be ready with a special crop of mignonette for Easter.

Mons Olson is the latest addition to the staff at the store of the Poehlmann Bros. Co.

George Reinberg is almost ready to plant six houses of American Beauties. He expects to get at it the latter part of this week, rather earlier than ever before.

N. C. Moore & Co. say their lilies will be better than usual this year and that they are now carrying them as cool as possible, for they are in ample time.

C. M. Dickinson, at Hunt's, says that if the present demand for To-bak-in products is any indication, the growers will have a strenuous time this spring fighting insects. He says the call for To-bak-in comes from every corner of the country and is heavier than ever before.

This is club night. It is hoped there will be a large attendance.

John Sinner was at Joliet last week and was much pleased with the condition of stock with the Chicago Carnation Co. He says that Mr. Pyfer told him that by the end of the season they expect to have propagated half a million cuttings of Aristocrat.

The Benthley-Coatsworth Co. is experimenting with a cork linoleum table cover. It looks as though it would be just the thing for retailers to use to cover their work-tables.

W. E. Wadsworth, at one time with Lange and later in charge of Muir's Forty-seventh street store, has gone to St. Louis to enter the employ of Fred C. Weber.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, says they are well satisfied with the quality of lilies and that theirs are plenty early.

P. J. Hauswirth, secretary of the S. A. F., went to Philadelphia last Friday to be on hand for the executive committee meeting Monday and Tuesday of this week. Now he is at Washington, judging at the rose show. He will be home some time next week.

Peter Reinberg's people all stand by Chatenay. They may be credited with the discovery of its commercial possibilities.

One of the wagons of the George Wittbold Co. broke an axle last Saturday while on the way downtown with three rush orders for retail florists. The plants were badly broken up. The Wittbolds have some big decorations on this week, notably that of C. A. Stevens & Bro. and at the Altenheim, with a dozen smaller ones between now and Easter.

It isn't quite true that Winterson's never close, but E. F. Winterson person-

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott's, says they already are figuring on peonies for spring and expect to break all records for business done with them.

P. C. Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says the correspondence about Easter orders has begun earlier than last year.

Miss Hattie E. Carlson, on Jackson boulevard, is doing a nice business, and deserves it, for she is a hard worker and carries a good stock.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell's, was at Milwaukee last week and sold boilers to heat 90,000 square feet of glass.

Killarney is beginning to give its spring crop with Weiland & Risch.

They have sold out on young stock very quickly.

A part of the troubles of the manufacturers of greenhouse building material is in getting cars for prompt shipment. They all report orders received to date as being ahead of the business booked at this time last year.

John Thorpe takes his pen in hand to tell the readers of the Daily News all about Easter flowers.

There have been many visitors in town this week, among them Axel Aggerholm, manager of the Mosbaek Greenhouse Co., Onarga, Ill.; C. H. Chapin, El Reno, Okla.; Hermann Thiemann, the dahlia grower at Belchertown, Mass., who is looking for a western location, and several others.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

The market conditions were satisfactory last week. The retail trade, too, was good all over the city. Some of the large establishments say it was surprisingly large in all kinds of work. Among the downtown florists prices are low. Some claim they are disposing of some 4,000 or 5,000 carnations every day. Those located in the central part and west end are also using large amounts of stock each day and at much better prices.

One of the features of the market last week was that roses were more plentiful in all varieties, and the wholesalers report that from now on until after Easter they look for a large supply in almost everything. Prices are not so high on roses and carnations as they have been, only the extra select being up in price.

Carnations are plentiful in all grades at all commission houses and the demand is large. Violets were not so many Monday morning. It may be that the growers are holding them back for Easter. Bulbous stock is in large supply and of the finest quality. Callas and lily of the valley are too many at present. Dutch hyacinths are selling well, also Von Sion and tulips. Harrisii and longiflorum are scarce at present. More are looked for by next week. Smilax has a good call, also all other greens.

Various Notes.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, visited Edwardsville and Belleville last week, calling on the trade at those places.

Pierre Schneider, head man for the Oakland Floral Co., at East Kirkwood, reports that the company will put up a number of new houses for roses this spring. They made a grand success of carnations this, their first year.

The Foster Floral Co. will move, April 1, from its present quarters to 612 Olive street. The new location years ago was occupied by the Jordan Floral Co.

Frank Fillmore reports that he will give up growing roses after this year, as the surroundings are not adapted to successful rose growing. The big house will be put into carnations, as these are doing nicely in all the other houses. The growing of market plants will also be done away with. His retail store, a few blocks away, is now doing a nice cut flower trade.

Beyer Bros. have a fine lot of blooming plants for Easter. Their bulb stock is grand.

F. Meinhardt, father of Fred H. Meinhardt, has been very ill but is much improved.

Judging from the stock shown by our local growers at the spring flower show held last week, the local buyers will have a fine lot of blooming plants for Easter sales.

The Florists' Club meeting for this week Thursday afternoon should be well attended. A great amount of business is to be transacted.

George Waldbart's place is somewhat blocked up, owing to a large building being erected at the corner. But Mr.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

Business is brisk in plants at the market. Cut flowers are in good demand. Our roses are abundant and good.

O. Werner, formerly associated with F. & O. Ziegler, has moved over to J. Ponta's, opposite.

At a meeting of the Society of Southern Florists, held March 7, the business of the annual convention was terminated and after all expenses were paid Treasurer Joseph Steckler reported a nice balance in favor of the association.

J. A. Newsham has purchased C. Holst's place. The location is a choice one for business, being in the neighborhood of several cemeteries. No doubt in the hands of the new proprietor the place will prosper and that is the wish of his many friends. Mr. Newsham is receiving his first consignment of orchids from Central America. M. M. L.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

It is difficult to give an accurate idea of existing conditions. The market is fair; possibly a little better than a week ago. Prices are excellent, when obtained, but many really fine flowers deteriorate to lower grades through lack of active demand. Beauties continue extremely scarce, the price obtained being far in excess of that of any previous year in March. But it is doubtful if any of the growers is realizing as much from his Beauty houses at these fancy figures as he did in other seasons, when production was so much larger. The extra and medium grades are still conspicuous by their absence, though a few dozens can occasionally be obtained. Shorts are improving. Bride, Maid, Richmond, Liberty, Chatenay, Gate and Killarney are all very fine, especially the first three. But the stock does not average as high as listed quotations. Carnations have fallen in price. The quality is fine. Enchantress and white seem the best sellers. Red is difficult to market. There is no demand for Lawson. Sweet peas are extraordinarily plentiful and many lots of really good flowers remain unsold. Prices are absurdly low. Valley is fine, and very plentiful. The demand, though excellent, is hardly equal to the supply. Cattleya Schröderæ has made its appearance in quantity and is fine. Dendrobiums and spray orchids are also in evidence. Gardenias are deteriorating a little. Calla lilies are in good supply and Easter lilies are increasing in number. The situation in bulbous flowers is unsatisfactory. Many are wasted and many sold for a song. Curiously enough, greens appear to be selling better than cut flowers. Violets are not in especial demand; prices are low and irregular.

Easter Plants.

It is a recognized fact that the Robert Craig Co. has the largest stock of Easter plants grown in or near Philadelphia. Almost all its houses are devoted to producing blooming stock for this great church holiday. A visit to the place is full of interest. The staples, so to speak, are azaleas, which fill house after house.

They are chiefly in 6-inch and 7-inch pots, splendid plants, well furnished with buds. The timing is reduced to a science, so that it gives Mr. Craig little uneasiness. Next in importance come the lilies, which fill a couple of houses. They are stocky plants, well budded and in healthy condition. Spiræa Gladstone is probably the next most important of the blooming plants. The stock when I saw it was not sufficiently advanced for one to be able to tell just how they would look when finished, but Mr. Craig's skill, and the good qualities of this sterling variety make it easy to guess that they will be in fine shape before these lines see print. English hawthorn was one of the novelties that interested me greatly. A limited quantity is grown to good sized specimens. Among the roses, great interest centers in Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins, which are this season made specialties alongside the well-known Crimson Rambler. All three varieties were nicely set with buds, giving promise of fine specimens before Easter. A house that interested me very much was filled with daisies; Queen Alexandra was there in fine form, and opposite to it Nicholson's Pride, a long-stemmed variety, more useful for cut flowers than the Queen, but less shapely for pot culture. Hydrangea Otaksa, genistas, and bulbous flowers complete an assortment that is worth going a long way to see. Mr. Craig is, as is well known, making a specialty of Ficus pandurata, which he does in fine shape. Gardenias are also an interesting specialty here.

Various Notes.

The March meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was largely attended. Dr. Robert A. Huey gave a most interesting rose lecture, which was beautifully illustrated by lantern slides. Among the exhibitors were Edward Towill, Samuel Batchelor, Charles Davis and others.

Charles S. Ford was called home from Cincinnati last week by the sad death of his daughter, Miss Charlotte M. Ford, who was buried Saturday. Miss Ford was a stenographer at Henry F. Mitchell's. She was stricken with appendicitis while at work. Mr. Ford is now detained at home by his wife's condition. This is the fifth time in four years Mr. Ford has been recalled from the road by death in the family.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

78.—Will you aid in forming growers association? Our aim will be to secure better prices for our cut flowers. We believe that the wholesalers have not secured an advance in prices proportionate to the increased cost of production this season.

Ans.—Four years ago I did everything in my power to advance the interests of the Flower Market, believing that to be to the best interests of the profession. I am now satisfied that the growers cannot be combined as a unit. The wholesalers offer today the most satisfactory means for distributing flowers in this city.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its regular meeting March 1. W. B. Jackson was elected president pro tem. M. J. Callahan was elected a member of the society. The subject discussed was "Annuals Suitable for Forcing." A. E. Parsons was awarded a certificate of merit for a vase of lupinus. Mr. Parsons recommended growing lupinus for cut flowers. With a night temperature of 50 degrees to 55 degrees, seed sown in benches the early part of September will produce flowers for cutting by Christmas, and with feeding and ordinary treatment several crops of cut blooms can be secured. J. W. Duncan, assistant superintendent of the Boston park department, will speak at the next meeting.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

History repeats itself sometimes. It has been exactly nineteen years since the great blizzard knocked out New York. The anniversary was a repetition of the storm on a smaller scale. All day Sunday and far into the night the beautiful came down, but next Friday the ground-hog prediction will have been fulfilled and the winter over. Judging by the opening of the week, it might last a month longer and yet Easter is only a little more than a fortnight away. Little enough time to prepare for the great festival.

The sunlight of the latter part of last week filled everyone with hope. A few more days like Saturday and there will be no further complaint of short supply of roses. In fact, the growers now assert that there will be enough and to spare of everything for Easter and that prices cannot advance to unreasonable figures. Just now 40 cents looks large for violets and thousands of fresh ones go at 25 cents per hundred. Over the cleaning up process the morning after it is better to cast the veil of silence. Anybody could have afforded a pall of violets last week. There was not a funeral piece made that did not have violets in it. Most of the designs were violet wreaths and crosses and on the streets the Athenians certainly did their share in popularizing the modest flower.

The street merchants were offering valley in large quantities Saturday. The best was sold no higher than $2 and fine stock fell to $1.50. Narcissi were everywhere. The outdoor display made the corners of the principal streets very springlike.

Carnations show no improvement in price, though the quality grows constantly better. On Saturday the green carnation will close its career. At best, it is a mongrel, but there must be a call for it else the supply houses would not dispose of such quantities of dye.

All roses, except Beauties, displayed a downward tendency last week and yet $3 per hundred was about the bottom for the shortest. The best American Beauties held strong at $9 per dozen. They may double this for Easter if the short supply continues.

With such a supply of blooming plants as is already assured there can be no abnormal rise in cut flower prices and the picklers, if there be any left, will get what they deserve. It won't pay this year to ship aged goods of any kind to the New York market.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting Monday evening was one of the best. Over fifty members were present and many visitors. President Totty occupied the chair. Mr. Sheridan made the report for the dinner committee. The outing committee announced progress, with a palatial steamer secured and the date fixed, July 2, for the summer festival. A motion to appropriate $100 for contests at the outing, after a discussion participated in by Messrs. O'Mara, Atkins, Weathered, Scott, Guttman and others, was defeated. Four gentlemen proposed at the last meeting were elected to membership and Messrs. Geo.

Baldwin and Mr. Bolles were proposed.

Mr. Wallace, in behalf of the club, presented a handsome diamond pin to the retiring president, Mr. John Scott, as a token of the appreciation of his fellow members and a tangible recognition of his faithful service. Mr. Scott was completely surprised and spoke feelingly of the loyalty and appreciation of the club during his occupancy of the chair and of the pleasure it had afforded him.

The resignation of John J. Phelps was accepted with regret.

Julius Roehrs, Jr., the recently elected trustee of the club, made his maiden address, promising devotion and good service and expressing appreciation of the honor.

A. J. Guttman proposed that the board of trustees and the officers of the club be empowered to devise ways and means for providing a suitable home for the club. He was seconded by P. O'Mara and by President Totty, whose ambition is the comfortable and permanent housing of the club during his incumbency. C. B. Weathered also spoke in behalf of the enterprise.

John Birnie gave a practical and interesting address on "The Needs of New York as Regards a Plant Market, in which he referred to the remissness of the city and the "crying need" of a market in New York, declaring it is of vital importance to the florists' business and dwelling upon the missionary influence of plants in every household. He said 10,000 square feet of space is needed and a place where seasonable plants can be displayed and sold all the year around.

A. Jaenecke, of Floral Park, spoke of the fine plant markets in the large cities of Europe and declared it shameful that New York should be without one. Mr. O'Mara spoke of the Gansvoort market and the hope that the city would use the site for the erection of a large and suitable building in which a great plant market was to be included. Mr. Daly announced the impossibility of using the old plant market this year.

The award committee, which visited Anton Zvolanek's plant at Bound Brook, N. J., last month, reported the awarding of several certificates of merit to the new varieties of sweet peas investigated, Messrs. Duckham, Pye and Manda attending.

The award committee made its report upon the splendid exhibits of the evening:

Vase of crimson seedling carnations, from A. Demeusy, of Flatbush, already awarded a preliminary certificate.

Vase of Carnation Mrs. Robert Hartshorne, from Malachi Tierney, of Highlands, N. Y., scored eighty points, a beautiful scarlet, strong grower and perfect calyx.

Vase of Kaiserin roses, from E. H. Pye, Nyack, N. Y., cultural certificate.

Vase of pink roses, Aurora, from Paul Niehoff, of Leighton, Pa., cultural certificate.

Rose Queen Beatrice, from F. H. Kramer, of Washington, preliminary certificate.

Artificial calyx, from Maxfield & Dimond, Warren, R. I., vote of thanks.

Samples of dyed carnations, by W. C. Krick, of Brooklyn.

F. H. Kramer, of Washington, who brought 100 fine specimens of his new rose, Queen Beatrice, spoke interestingly of it, and said many of the roses had already been exhibited at the Philadelphia meeting a week ago and that none of the flowers shown had been out less than three days before. The exhibit was a remarkable one and under electric light the rose made a splendid showing.

H. Weezenaar, of Hillegom, Holland, gave a vivid address on bulb growing that held the interest of the audience to its close.

Mr. Coan, formerly with Bloomingdale, is manager. Mr. Duer is related to Clarence Mackay and other millionaires and expects to absorb some of their surplus funds. parture for Panama. The design was a magnificent horn of plenty containing over 500 American Beauty roses, 1,000 violets and other flowers in proportion. It was over six feet in height and gave great satisfaction to the distinguished recipients. Mr. Foley is on deck again, quite recovered from his long illness, and his hand has not lost its cunning.

F. D. Long, of Denver, proprietor of the famous Elitch Gardens, is in the city arranging for an additional 150,000 square feet of glass to his 50,000 already devoted to commercial purposes.

W. H. Donohoe had charge of the Berthelet funeral last week and many expensive and original designs were sent, including a casket cover of white roses and violets, an empire wreath nine feet high, a pillow with a violet crown in center and a bow of Enchantress carnations, and a victor wreath of valley and orchids with bow of violets, the whole aggregating close to four figures. John Brown has lately joined the force of Mr. Donohoe.

The sympathy of his many friends is extended L. W. Wheeler, treasurer of the New York Florists' Club, in the loss of his mother.

The Summit wagon express gave up the fight because of Sunday's storm and flowers from Jersey were late and had to come in by express. There was a large shipment of roses Monday and prices fell with quite a thud.

The retail windows are now things of beauty. In fact, decoration of this kind is now a necessity for any who would do a first-class trade.

MEDIA, PA.—Peter Vervaecker, a violet grower near this place, was severely injured March 2 by being thrown from the platform of a car of the Chester Traction Co. bound for Media. The shock resulted in a severe contusion, a broken collarbone and, it is feared, internal injuries.

TROUBLE WITH FERNS.

I am troubled with a small white bug on my fern plants. It works on the tips of young fronds and seems to kill them, some fronds having as many as ten bugs on them. I would like to know what it is and how to get rid of it.

L. L. W.

We do not know of any white bug which affects ferns in the manner described. The white fly, about which so much has been written, is sometimes very troublesome on nephrolepis and other species. Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas has frequently been described in the REVIEW, and, if carefully done, little injury need result. In summer when the temperature runs higher there is greater danger. If the pest is not the white fly we would like to have a sample sent in an envelope for identification.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, March 13.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.50 doz.; leaf lettuce, 25c to 30c case; radishes, 30c to 40c doz. bunches.

BOSTON, March 11.—Tomatoes, 30c to 40c lb.; cucumbers, $3 to $12 box; lettuce, 25c to 50c doz.; radishes, 25c doz.; rhubarb, 4c to 5c lb.; mushrooms, 50c to 75c lb.; romaine, 75c to $1 doz.; escarole, 75c to $1 doz.; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box; mint, 75c doz.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Mushrooms in active demand and market cleaned up closely with some sales slightly higher than quoted. Cucumbers quite plenty and prices show further decline. Lettuce poor and dragging heavily. Radishes firm under light offerings. Rhubarb held steady. Tomatoes in light demand. Cucumbers, 75c to $1.75 doz.; lettuce, 15c to 50c doz.; mushrooms, 35c to 50c lb.; radishes, $2 to $3 per hundred bunches; tomatoes, 15c to 75c lb.

THE LAST CROP OF LETTUCE.

If the last crop of the season has not been got into the benches, it should be done now, without delay. Where a general stock is grown this crop is usually omitted, as the room can be utilized to better advantage for general bedding material. A nice thing to have in a case like this is a good supply of cold-frames. In an average season lettuce can be planted about, or even before, this date in coldframes and kept comfortably warm by covering, but in a season like this, with so much zero weather even in March, not much could be gained by planting early. Though the sun is strong enough to heat the frames up well through the day, it would take a great deal of covering to keep the frost out, even if the frames were shut up early and all possible heat reserved.

The greenhouse crop will require a good deal more water now than it did earlier in the season and, although there is less danger of an overabundance of atmospheric moisture, nevertheless judgment should be used in its application. Water should always be applied early in the day, so that the moisture will be well dried up before night. On mild nights, a little air should be left on from this out, if someone is in close touch with the house, so that the ventilators could be closed in the case of a sudden change. March weather is an uncertain proposition and sudden changes must be looked for and guarded against.

Greenfly is apt to put in its appearance frequently and should be checked as soon as seen. Tobacco fumigation is about the simplest and easiest means of keeping it down, only it has to be done frequently to be effective. The variety of greenfly that affects lettuce is a big, fat, healthy-looking fellow, but he is not a hard one to destroy if taken in time. But if he once gets a good foothold, it will take several fumigations to get the pest under control. It is better to fumigate two or three nights in succession, if the fly is bad, rather than try to use the tobacco strong enough to destroy them with one dose.

Tobacco can be had in several forms, but we find the dust the easiest to handle. There is a kind of specially prepared for burning. When once this is started it will keep on burning for several hours. The smoke is never so dense in the house as it would be if stems were used, but the length of time it keeps on smoking seems to wear them down and do them more harm than a sudden filling of the house would, with a good deal less danger of damage to the plants. There are several liquid forms of tobacco extract that are applied by evaporation. They certainly do the work well and are used by many, but are more expensive to use than the dust.

W. S. CROYDON.

THE GRAND RAPIDS COMBINE.

In speaking of the new corporation formed by a number of Grand Rapids growers, a local paper says:

"Lettuce will probably be the principal crop raised by the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., the new $160,000 company which was recently organized for the purpose of consolidating several of the largest greenhouses in the city.

"Grand Rapids has long been supreme as a growing and shipping point for lettuce, and the organization will strive to uphold this supremacy. The market has been rather demoralized for the last year or two and it is believed that it will soon find its equilibrium.

"Nothing definite has been decided regarding a central plant, but the one most talked of is to use the greenhouses of E. E. Taylor, on the South Division street road, and make extensive alterations and improvements there.

"Although lettuce will probably be the staple crop, other vegetables will be grown, and flowers will form no small part of the business, chrysanthemums especially being grown in quantity to precede the lettuce."

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

As a result of the decision of the Illinois State Florists' Association to hold its next annual convention at Springfield, the Springfield florists are waking up, and a meeting was held March 7 in A. C. Brown's store with a view to a local organization. The following officers were elected: President, A. C. Brown; vice-president, George M. Brinkerhoff; secretary, George Jack; treasurer, George Van Horn. The organization starts off with a membership of thirty, with a good prospect of forty by next meeting, March 21.

The objects of the organization are: To promote interest in and prepare for the coming convention, to improve the city in a horticultural way, to inspire to civic beauty and to promote fellowship among the growers and tradesmen. It is expected that later the growers out in the county will come into the organization. F. A. F.

THE demand for Stone tomato is taxing the sources of supply.

SEED stock of the Early Ohio potato begins to look good to those who have a supply.

SEED travelers report competition so keen that profits will be but a side issue if business is booked by them.

It is reported that there are still a few pounds of onion seed available. White Globe, however, is said to be cleaned out.

THERE are yet some acres needed for pea planting for the coming year's seed crop and reports have it that they are getting hard to find.

NOTHING much is being said about the probable size of the pickle acreage for the coming year. But the pickle men will likely get busy later on.

THE idea that all garden seeds are sold by means of catalogues is a mistaken one. Every country newspaper is now carrying the advertisement of the local seed dealer.

It is reported that John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, who sold the Mayflower a year or so ago, is contemplating starting another "floral" paper, with D. J. Thomas, founder of Floral Life, as editor.

IF the sales of narcissus bulbs were based on the prices realized for the cut blooms since the latter part of February the demand would be considerably curtailed. Early prices were satisfactory.

THE accidental death, by poisoning, of the daughter of J. W. Ratekin, Shenandoah, Ia., is reported in our obituary column this week.

It looks as though the onion set growers will not plant as much seed this year as last. Onion sets are going at good prices, though, and perhaps this will stimulate things before the planting season is over.

A COMBINATION, or an agreement of some kind that would restrain one dealer from cutting another's prices, is much desired and talked about by the wholesale seed dealers, but they fail to do anything definite.

BOSTON seed houses report counter trade much behind that of a year ago at this date, due to the continued severe weather, and a congestion of business is sure to follow the breaking of winter. Mail orders have been over the average.

THE onion set is still holding its own and, by the way, if it is true as reported, that southern California shipped 1,000 tons of onion sets into Texas the past year, it is remarkable that so large a lot was overlooked when the crop reporter was sizing up the year's product.

SAMPLING.

Our congressmen have been setting an example for our seedsmen to follow, so that now we are getting free samples with at least one-half of the seed catalogues that come to our tables. These are all intended as baits to catch trade, and as such are a menace to square dealing and to the honest seedsmen. I take it that the honest seedsmen with an established reputation does not need to send out these free samples, and the honest buyer does not care to be worked in this way. The average buyer of seeds does not care to take the time and trouble to test these sample packets, but prefers to rely upon the reputation of the seedsmen for honest goods. Nineteen-twentieths of the sample packets thus sent out by our seedsmen were undoubtedly never intended to be tested, but are calculated as baits for a constantly wavering trade.

tral west has not experienced the cold weather that has prevailed at other points; consequently the smaller dealers throughout Illinois, Ohio and Iowa are well ahead of the rush. This will ease things up somewhat when the wholesalers are called upon to meet the requirements elsewhere. Mail trade is coming about as usual and counter trade is beginning to open up. An early spring is predicted in the central west, as there is little frost left in the ground. The demand for onion seed is not as brisk as it should be; the high prices seem to be a factor here, many of the planters being inclined to hold off for lower prices. It is thought that the conditions fully warrant the high prices, however, and no anxiety is felt by those who have onion seed to sell.

THE TULIP DISEASE.

The many complaints that have been received during the last few years through the seedsmen and the trade generally, in consequence of the fact that so often tulips in the beds of parks and private gardens failed to bloom, and even in many places failed to come altogether, now justify us in giving the results of our trials and investigations in this direction for the benefit of all those interested. We have for the last three years been making extensive trials based upon the discoveries of Prof. H. Klebahn, of Hamburg, who not only succeeded in finding the cause of the tulip disease, but also the fact that it shows its existence in two distinct forms caused by the fungi Botrytis parasitica and Sclerotium Tuliparum.

To make a long story short, we might as well refrain from going too much into the details, and we therefore only give the main points here. Generally the disease caused by Botrytis shows itself in the early spring, by the non-appearance or by the backward and sickly sprouts that come above the ground, and upon lifting such diseased bulbs one can easily find the cause of it in the shape of numerous small black fungi, about the size of a pinhead; or in the case of Sclerotium Tuliparum, by larger dark brown fungi, that adhere to the old bulb or what is left of it. These fungi are usually to be found in many hundreds together and under certain favorable circumstances in damp atmosphere, they spore freely in the spring, and thus cause a rapid infection of the soil or of the surrounding plants of tulips.

As these fungi keep alive in the ground and retain their vitality for at least two years, it is certainly not surprising that some grounds are so badly infected by the neglect of proper attention to decayed bulbs that no tulip bulbs can grow in them any more. It would be an easy matter to kill these fungi in the ground by the application of a good dose of carbolineum or similar disinfectant, but experience has shown that the cure is worse as the slightest spilling of any of the infected ground will cause more spreading and more infection.

The foregoing suggestions are based upon the results of our own trials so far, but may be improved upon in the future, as experience will teach us. The fact that there are two distinct forms of fungi, which cause almost similar results, may as well be left alone for the present, especially as sometimes the two diseases are mixed up together and thus make the distinction difficult.

THE BEST TUBEROSES.

The best tuberose bulbs are not necessarily the largest, but they should be heavy and solid in proportion to their bulk, and it is in the choice of bulbs that one of the most important points in successful culture lies. Another thing is choice of variety, says the Gardeners' Magazine. "The African form does not compare favorably with the American form, known as The Pearl, which is the best type on the market, being naturally dwarfer and stouter and producing fully double flowers of good form and sub-

TYPES OF CANDIDUM LILIES.

The bulbs of Lilium candidum are usually imported from the warm climate of the south of France, and are more or less liable to disease, against which there does not at present appear to be any really reliable preventive or remedy. Much of this trouble is caused through the bulbs being imported from such a warm climate, as the bulbs imported from Holland and North Germany are much more successful. Undoubtedly the finest bulbs obtainable, especially for early forcing, are those grown undisturbed for some years in England, and such as are obtained by dealers from small country cottage-gardens. Another cause of trouble is the drying the bulbs undergo in lifting and transit, for of all bulbs of plants, Lilium candidum most resents disturbance, and it is better treated as a green plant than as a dry bulb. Another cause of trouble is that many Continental stocks, and more especially the French, are of a different variety to the English and, although many persons would deny it, two distinct types of this plant exist. The less valuable, and the type to be rigorously avoided, is in growth much shorter than the other. The blooms are smaller, not so pure white, and are not so freely produced. The leaves are also much narrower and less numerous on the stem; the bulb can also be easily distinguished, as the scales are much smaller and narrower, while the bulb is inclined to develop a "neck," and is almost identical in shape with that of the old purple "tiger lily," Lilium tigrinum purpureum, whereas the English type has very fat, thick scales, and the bulb is perfectly flat on the top, with an entire absence of any neck.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

Dahlia growers, commercial and private, are now hard at work propagating from cuttings for the increase of stock. Some of the choicest and largest collections of dahlias in the country are to be found here. Hitherto the largest collections were in the possession of private growers; this year it seems that two commercial men have, by recent heavy purchases, become the leaders in this respect.

The ladies' night of the Newport Horticultural Society, March 5, was a decided success.

In years past several Newport growers experienced much difficulty in retarding Cattleya gigas so as to have them when the season is at its height and the flowers in greatest demand. This year the condition of a great many plants indicates that there need be no fear of their coming in too early.

William Jurgens and wife have gone to Philadelphia for a short visit. Mr. Jurgens is one of the pushing young men in the business, so much so that a short vacation is well earned.

Gibson Bros., despite the fact that their own cut of carnations was fully up to the average, purchased a great many more carnations from out of town this winter than ever before. Their

This charming addition to our greenhouse Primroses originated at the Royal Gardens, Kew, as an accidental cross between the small, bright-flowered Himalayan species, P. floribunda, and the sweet-scented P. verticillata, a native of Arabia. The plant is a strong grower, with bright green leaves, and numerous erect flowerstems, 10 to 18 inches in height, producing flowers in whorls at intervals along their whole length. The flowers are fragrant, bright yellow in color, with a slender tube and spreading limb, nearly an inch in diameter. As a winter-flowering decorative plant it is an acquisition; its floriferousness when in a very small state is remarkable. Per pkt., $1.00.

sales of roses have increased in equal proportion. This firm has one house full of Easter lilies coming in just right, but they have in another house a great many that will not be in, right or wrong. Gibson Bros.' greenhouses are located in the heart of the best residence part of the city, which has of late increased in value to such an extent as to cause the owners to think seriously of building residences on the ground and locating their greenhouses elsewhere. In the event of that taking place they will build several up-to-date houses.

John Marshall, in his "By-the-Sea" greenhouses, has this, the second, season demonstrated to his entire satisfaction that his new seedling carnation is superior to Robert Craig. In color and strength it is ahead of Robert Craig, while as a bloomer it is much freer and has stiffer and longer stems. The long continued cold weather is telling heavily on growers of early grapes. James McIrish lost nearly every vine in his grapery as a consequence of fumigating with hydrocyanic gas. This is a dangerous agent, even in the hands of experts, as the above instance demonstrates. Growers of grapes have in late years been able to keep mealy bug at a safe distance by frequent fumigations with Nicotinic acid, in the light of re-

Dealers in hard-wood ashes were here this week and booked a large number of orders. As a fertilizer hard-wood ashes is excellent, but great care is necessary in its application so as to avoid overdoing it. Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held March 11. Officers were elected as follows: President, F. C. Bauer; vice-president, M. Richmond; secretary, J. J. Perry; financial secretary, F. Talbert; treasurer, F. G. Burger; librarian, C. M. Wagner. The prize offered for the one who should secure the most new members during the year was won by J. J. Perry.

Prof. T. B. Symons, of College Park, gave a fine talk on Jamestown. R. Vincent, Jr., & Son will make a big display of dahlias there. E. A. Seidewitz, F. Bauer, R. Vincent, Jr., C. L. Seybold and E. Frazer were appointed a committee to keep up a floral display. J. Keur, of C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, was present and told us about bulb growing.

I. H. Moss brought some splendid roses and Stevenson Bros. some good seedling carnations.

Various Notes.

Shaw Bros., Dickeyville, Md., had 6,000 Lady Hume Campbell violets last Saturday which brought 35 cents to 40 cents a hundred, wholesale, and retailed at 60 cents a hundred. They occupied Mr. Brummeral's stall in the market. This was the first lot of double violets offered for months.

August Eberhardt had one of the most tastefully arranged stalls in the retail market. Many persons stood and admired the lovely blooms and business was steady.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The retailers in this city will be glad to see the last of this Lenten season. For several years Lent has not affected the trade to a great extent, but this season either religion has struck in deeper or the flower buyers were worn out with the busy, fashionable season and are resting entirely. There were several funerals of prominent men last week, which created an exceptional demand for that kind of stock and made a fair week in a general way. There was great complaint of the slow trade.

Among the wholesalers you do not hear so much complaint, for they seem to think it has a depressing effect on their customers and for that reason report business as all that can be expected, but the evidence is in the ice-boxes full of stock and the quantities of stock the fakirs are carrying around.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, March 5, and had a fine display of blooming plants on exhibition. The subject for discussion being "Easter Plants," there was a fair crowd present, although many were delayed so much getting home on account of the terrible snow storm and gale which came over the city at 6 p. m. that they were unable to get back for the meeting.

John Bader was a visitor in the east last week.

Miss Stoner, formerly with Miss Maxwell, of Wilksburg, was married last week. Hoo-Hoo.

OSWEGO, N. Y.—Patrick G. Campbell, whose greenhouses, consisting of 8,000 feet of glass, were established in 1900, is enjoying a good business. The store, located on West Bridge street, was started in 1905, and enjoys a good patronage.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The tide of European travel has again set in. It will gather volume as the spring advances and promises to be heavier than ever as summer approaches. Retail florists can add to their business with no greater trouble to themselves than the posting of a list of steamer sailings in the window. Or tell in a neat circular that you have facilities for the delivery of flowers on any outgoing steamer. Then mail or wire the orders to be filled to one of the Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

State of Business.

We are pleased to be able to report a continuance of great business activity and a market well supplied in the general lines. Everything under glass is showing a vigorous growth in response to the bright spring sunshine. Violets are a feast and anyone with "two bits" to spare can wear a bunch. No one has reason to regret having grown them, and the retailers find the home product more profitable than those imported from California. Not until this month was the supply of carnations equal to the demand and prices are holding up well.

Roses are maintaining the season's usual standard of quality, only a little shy in quantity. Bulbous stuff has been our salvation, for without it we would have been up against it, owing to the unprecedented call for design work. Never once has it accumulated, although handled in large quantities. Daffodils have been popular for festive occasions and we do not think there was any money lost on them at 75 cents and $1 per dozen.

Surely spring has come to stay, as Mr. Robin demands his breakfast at six o'clock, crocuses are blooming outside and, unless unfavorable symptoms set in, there should be an abundance of everything for the Easter trade.

Various Notes.

The building fever is spreading and several of our leading growers will add substantially to their respective places. George Betz tells us with great dignity that he has already commenced operations up the valley on a new range of 15,000 feet.

Charles Street, of Clackamas, will put some of his violet money into two new houses. Robinson Bros., of Woodstock, will do likewise.

Tonseth & Co. also announce that there will be more than one smoke stack on their premises a few months hence.

Clarke Bros. have outgrown the space they occupy and, surrounding property being too valuable for greenhouse purposes, we are informed that this firm will build a strictly modern range about seven miles from town.

We have not had the opportunity of interviewing Mr. Sibson recently, but we venture to say that he will need more room for Richmond and Kate Moulton another year. He reports a sale for everything and orders increasing from out of town. There are others talking expansion, but we have been too busy to call on them, so will refer to them later.

J. R. Fotheringham, representing the F. R. Pierson Co., spent last week with us, emphasizing the good points of all the new carnations. When giving the

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Lent is still with us and the weather has not been conducive to much transient trade, but notwithstanding these drawbacks we have had a fair share of business during the last week. Flowers are gradually getting lower in price, with the exception of roses. Violets are commencing to take on their spring growth and are getting scarce in consequence. The price has been advanced 25 cents per dozen bunches by the wholesalers.

Bulbous stock is not so plentiful as it has been and not much is seen except some late daffodils. Romans are out of the market. A few Dutch hyacinths are being used by the retailers. Tulips seem to have lost their hold on the public and few have been shown this year. Quite a quantity of freesias are being brought in and find ready sale at $2 per hundred.

Carnations are a shade lower than last week and the supply is good, but not in excess of the demand.

Outdoor stock, with the exception of bulbous flowers, is not in evidence yet and it will be several weeks before we have anything to draw from. Maiden-hair fern of the wild variety is plentiful and it has proven a godsend to the retailers, who have been woefully short of everything in the line of green stuff since the holidays.

The Market.

Trade has showed that we are in the midst of Lent, as outside of funeral work there is little doing. Everyone seems to have an abundance of stock and prices have declined, especially on bulb stock. Some fine Yellow Prince tulips were on the market during the week at $1 per hundred. The quality of all stock could hardly be improved and as the demand is light, some loss has been sustained.

Easter plants are slowly coming in. Easter stock with all of the growers looks promising and there is no anxiety as to having practically everything ready. While there are some lilies that cannot possibly be got in, a large majority will be all right.

Ralph Latham has enlarged his place considerably and is in shape for a good Easter trade.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE San Jose scale is reported at Grand Rapids, Mich.

C. S. HARRISON has issued a second edition of his Peony Manual.

THERE was a meeting of New England nurserymen at New Haven, Conn., March 4.

BAUDRY'S NURSERY Co., Chicago, has been incorporated, with $5,000 capital stock, by Peter C. King, Frank M. Burwash and John T. Booz.

A BILL has been introduced in the Minnesota legislature providing for inspection of nurseries at least twice a year and making it a misdemeanor to misrepresent in making a sale.

THE New England Nurseries, Boston, has been incorporated with an authorized capital stock of $30,000. The president is W. M. Richardson, Cambridge, and the treasurer A. E. Robinson, North Abington.

THE Red Bank Nursery Co., Red Bank, N. J., has been incorporated with $100,000 authorized capital. The interested parties are J. McColgan, of Red Bank, and E. Runyan, president of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J.

A HORTICULTURAL inspector makes the suggestion that the way to secure the spraying of trees in infected localities is to levy a tax of so much per tree on property owners, the taxing body then to see that the spraying is done and done properly.

WM. A. PETERSON, Chicago, says he feels that there has been no overdoing of the peony, as many have predicted; indeed, he thinks it quite the opposite and looks for a much wider demand in future. As a result he has just about twice as many plants in the ground as a year ago.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture, through the forest service, gives practical assistance to land owners in establishing commercial forest plantations, shelter belts, windbreaks and snowbreaks, and in reclaiming shifting sands and other waste lands by forest planting. In connection with this work, information will be given, when possible, to interested communities by public meetings. The department furnishes blanks on which application is to be made for its assistance.

A. J. PERKINS, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., after a winter in California, at the branch nursery of the Jackson & Perkins Co., has been for several weeks in the Sandwich Islands, and expects to sail March 15 from Honolulu for Yokohama. He will remain in Japan several months and will visit the leading nurseries and places of horticultural interest. Mr. Perkins is a well-informed botanist, which, along with his knowledge of commercial horticulture, should enable him to make the trip a particularly interesting and profitable one.

YUCCA FILAMENTOSA, Adam's needle, is evergreen and quite hardy almost everywhere. When planted in a group or bed it forms a unique contrast to most other things around. The foliage, although green, is decorative. It is also appropriate for use in borders and in corners or other parts of extensive shrubberies. In midsummer Yucca filamentosa pushes up long, straight stalks, covered at the top with handsome ivory-white flowers.

HARDY ORNAMENTAL SHRUBS.

One of the most satisfactory of large shrubs is the grand old snowball. There are several varieties of viburnum. The Japanese snowball is smaller than the common American variety, but is a fine bloomer. The highbush cranberry closely resembles the snowball in its foliage, and has an additional attraction in its brilliant clusters of red berries which sometimes remain through the winter. In the autumn its foliage turns to bright colors, which remain until freezing weather.

Philadelphus, also known as syringa and mock orange, has flowers which some think resemble orange blossoms. The foliage comes out rather late, but it is an extremely valuable shrub to have in a collection, especially where one has considerable room. It is as hardy as the oak and does well in the shade. The best varieties are grandiflora, which has large white flowers; flore-pleno, with double flowers, and Pekinensis, with fragrant white flowers.

The barberry is a pretty shrub for groups. Its red varieties are ornamental in autumn and winter. The purple-leaved variety makes a fine contrast with the green. Canadensis is the species native to America. Berberis Illicifolia has leaves like the holly and Berberis purpurea has foliage of purple. The National Council of Horticulture recommends these shrubs in one of its press bulletins.

INSECTS AND PLANT DISEASES.

Nature of Protection Afforded.

The principal protection afforded by any commission or board of entomology is in the inspection and certification of nursery stock, the best method of preventing the spread of most insects. Were it not for the inspection laws against the San Jose scale alone, it is doubtful if there would be a single large orchard in the United States unharmed by this insect.

The different state laws for the inspection and certification of nursery stock are fairly uniform. In brief, the requirements are that every nursery desiring to sell stock shall be inspected once each year, and in case any dangerously injurious insects or plant diseases are found therein, no stock shall be allowed to go out of this nursery, even as a gift, until same has been properly cleared of the pest. When the nursery is apparently free of the insects or diseases quarantined against, a certificate of inspection is granted the nurseryman, which entitles him to do business until July 1, following. Copies of the certificate of inspection are printed upon ordinary shipping tags, and at least one of these tags must be attached to every package or bundle of nursery stock leaving the premises.

How Commissions are Maintained.

The manner of paying for this inspection varies in the different states. For instance, in Illinois the expenses of the inspector are borne by each nurseryman according to the time required by the inspector to go over the premises. This is about the best system where the nurseryman has to pay the expenses himself, as the small nurseryman has to pay only his proportion of what the large grower does.

In Virginia, the arrangement is not quite so satisfactory for the nurseryman. Every person, firm, or corporation, selling, or shipping nursery stock into the state, must pay a fee of $20 annually, be he a large or small dealer. While the bigger nurserymen in the state can well afford this amount, the small nurseryman has to pay just the same amount.

In Louisiana the nurseryman pays practically nothing, as all expenses incident to inspection are paid out of the fund appropriated for the maintenance of the state crop pest commission. The only expense which the nurserymen have to undergo is the very nominal one of paying for the actual printing of copies of their certificates of inspection upon shipping tags, which tags are paid for by the commission.

Certificate an Advantage.

And in this connection, I might mention a direct advantage to the nurseryman, gained through the use of these tags. This is their value as advertisements. They are veritable health certificates, showing, as they do, that the stock to which they are attached, is grown by a reliable nurseryman, who has complied with all the requirements of law. While no certificates can be positive guarantees, they serve as the best possible indication that all stock to which they are attached is free of dangerously injurious insects and plant diseases. Buyers of nursery stock all over the country are beginning to realize the importance of these certificate tags, and nurserymen who succeed in shipping without them, are at a decided disadvantage with the trade.

Results.

A vast amount of good results have been obtained by this law alone. Many states, whose orchard industries would have been entirely ruined by the dread San Jose scale, now have their fruit businesses in more flourishing condition than before, while added confidence inspired by these protective rules and regulations have given tone to the nursery stock market. The work in Louisiana will serve as a good example of the advantage of these laws, for the nursery inspection work has been in force but two years, and the improvement in nursery conditions are easily noted. I will close by quoting from this year's report on "The Nursery Business of Louisiana," which I made to Mr. Newell several weeks ago.

"The second year of the nursery inspection work of the state crop pest commission of Louisiana has just been completed, and the nursery conditions throughout the state are very good.

"Forty-nine nurseries have been inspected, just twenty-one more than were inspected last season. In the case of fourteen out of this forty-nine, San Jose scale in slight quantity was found either in the nurseries themselves, or so close to them as to endanger the nursery stock by spreading, while chaff scale on orange was found in one. To date all, except five nurserymen, have followed the directions of the commission and have succeeded in eradicating the scale from their premises. In the case of the delinquent five, certificates of inspection have been refused until the premises are thoroughly cleaned up, kept under quarantine a sufficient time, then reinspected and pronounced apparently free of scale by the inspector. Most of these premises will probably be cleared of scale in the near future, as almost all of the nurserymen in Louisiana fully realize the importance of getting rid of these pests. Forty-three certificates of inspection have been issued.

"Since this inspection system was inaugurated last season the amount of nursery stock grown in the state has increased almost 400 per cent. Last season the inspectors of the commission examined 683,550 growing marketable trees and shrubs. This season the number has been increased to 2,172,632.

"In addition to the above, several thousand orchard trees, which were growing in close proximity to nurseries, were examined.

"On the whole, the status of the nursery business of the state is most encouraging. The extraordinary increase of salable stock in one season, the increased number of nurseries inspected, and the diminution in percentage of nurseries infested, all point to the fact that the protection and assistance given to both buyers and sellers of nursery stock by the commission, has had the effect of stimulating the state's fruit industries.

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, March 2, President F. Heeremans in the chair. The schedules for the June, August and fall exhibitions were read and adopted. This being carnation night, it brought out some fine exhibits. The following exhibitors were awarded first prizes: A. J. Loveless, for a fine vase of Robert Craig; F. Heeremans, for Enchantress; A. McConnachie, for Mrs. T. W. Lawson, also winning for a vase of mixed varieties. A. H. Wingett staged a vase of Stock Queen Alexandra which was much admired, some of the spikes being fully three feet in length, and was awarded a cultural certificate, also for two fine vases of President Carnot and Richmond roses. I may say that Richmond is doing remarkably well here, although we have had a dull winter, and all the growers speak highly of it.

Three silver cups were offered and accepted for competition at our fall exhibition by the following firms: Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia; R. & J. Farquhar, Boston, and E. Jaques, Lenox. The following firms have also offered premiums: A. T. Boddington, New York; Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; A. N. 3 NEW CANNAS

The flowers are large, of splendid form, and are borne very freely in immense clusters. The color is a deep rich shining scarlet slightly dappled with crimson. Foliage is a rich bronze. Height, 3 1/2 to 4 feet. We believe that Wm. Saunders is decidedly the most perfect Canna of this type that has been introduced. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

OTTAWA

Is a strong grower, very robust and 5 to 6 feet high. The flowers are large and beautifully formed, color is carmine with tints of old rose and deep coral, add to this the silken sheen and you can imagine the effect a few plants will produce.

NOTE—We had this Canna on trial among the Canadian experimental stations last summer and this is the official report of their expert: "Quite distinct and one of the most beautiful shades of color I ever saw in Cannas. Of 70 massed in one bed during the past season, this was the most floriferous in the collection, coming into bloom early and continuing until cut down by frost, as many as 18 expanded heads of blooms being counted at one time on a plant, and not a poor one among them, all being of immense size." 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

NEW YORK

Has the Orchid type of flower. They have much more substance than the flowers of the other varieties of this class, and will stand the hot sunshine as well as the toughest varieties of cannas. The color is a solid rich scarlet covered with a beautiful glowing sheen. The flowers are large and contrast beautifully with the dark bronze foliage. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Send for our list and prices of 60 other leading varieties of Cannas.

ROSES, are our great specialty. 2 1/2 and 4-inch pot plants we have in great variety — Philadelphia Rambler, Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins and other climbers in strong field plants.

SHRUBBERY, in variety. Viburnum Plicatum, Spiraeas, Althaeas, Honeysuckles, etc.

DENVER.

The Market.

Favorable weather the last two weeks made the cut flower and plant trade good. Dinners and parties are not plentiful but a large demand for funeral work helped to use up the accumulation of stock. The market is well supplied with a general line.

American Beauty roses, especially the select, long-stemmed ones, are not seen in any large quantities, but these, as well as tea roses, are beginning to come in much more satisfactorily. White roses, on account of funeral demands, have cleaned up nicely and Bridesmaids nearly as well. Both of these, as well as Richmond, Liberty and Chatenay, are of good quality.

Carnations are in good supply, but the prices remain about the same. They will be in fine condition for Easter unless they go off crop; some indications point that way.

Violets are plentiful and any number can be had at this time. It is said some sold under a dollar, but not first-class stock. All bulbous stock is in abundance, the demand not being quite so strong.

Various Notes.

Geo. M. Kessler, of St. Louis, has been called to take up the work of improving the park and boulevard system here.

N. A. Benson, the carnation grower, had a large bunch of Aristocrat, sent by the Chicago Carnation Co., on exhibition at the Park Floral Co.'s store, so that the growers and storemen might see it. It is certainly a good keeper and that seemed to be the one fact all were agreed upon.

The Western Bowling Congress, now in session here, with teams from all over the west, from Kansas City to Portland, opened March 7 at the Coliseum. The Florists' League had a five-men team entered, and bowled the first night. To Ross Mahan, of the Alpha Floral Co., belongs the honor of the first strike of the series. N. A. Benson had high score, namely, 213.

The Denver Dry Goods Co. contemplates opening a flower department in its new building. E. S. K.

ELYRIA, O.—The following gentlemen have incorporated the L. C. Hecock Floral Co., with a capitalization of $20,000: Louis C. Hecock, John E. Hecock, Louis E. Sutliff, Earl E. Smith and E. A. Phipps.

Announcement—Aristocrat

As we have not made all the deliveries of Aristocrat as promised, we beg to announce to our patrons that all orders are being filled strictly in rotation and all orders will be completed by the 20th of March, as we have 50,000 cuttings in the sand nearly rooted and 150,000 cuttings that have been put in during the past ten days. These will be ready for delivery before the end of March, which is not too late for Aristocrat, as it is a very rapid grower, free from disease and will do as well as earlier cuttings when benched in the fall. The variety is an easy rooter, but owing to the very unfavorable weather, cuttings did not root as quickly as we expected; besides we are growing them cool, which takes a little longer. All of the stock we have sent out has given the best of satisfaction, as it is our aim to see that every cutting is first-class in every respect.

We wish to thank our patrons for their patience and assuring you of our very best attention and that your order will be filled by the time stated.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Bright weather is helping the tardy lily crop along and if it continues most of the lilies intended for Easter will be out. There is no doubt about the Crimson Ramblers being ready, as the buds are showing color now. Hydrangeas will be in, but, as it were, at the eleventh hour. Some of the buds are showing color. Of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils there will be the usual big Easter crop. Violet plants in 6-inch pans, while in seeming good supply, will be exhausted before Easter arrives.

In cut flowers, roses are still scarce, although coming in more freely and of improved quality. Carnations are more plentiful but moving nicely, with white scarce. The plants give promise of holding out for Easter with generous cuts. Roses will be in better crop at Easter than now.

The West Michigan State Fair people were hot after the state legislature for an appropriation of $5,000 to help enlarge its educational scope and offer additional premiums, but were at the last moment turned down, and $20,000 voted for exhibiting Michigan industries at the Jamestown exposition. G. F. C.

ELBERON, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held March 4, Vice-president Henry Wood in the chair. Three new members were elected. The schedule of the second annual flower show, which will be held July 24 and 25, was adopted.

Some fine exhibits were staged, notably a vase of stocks, Queen Alexandra, shown by A. Bauer; vases of Proserpine and Belle Alliance tulips, shown by J. Kennedy; a vase of Marie Louise violets, by A. Greib; a vase of La France violets, by F. Dettlinger; cauliflower and lettuce, by P. Murray, and carnations, by W. Swain.

A delegation of the society recently visited the establishment of F. R. Pierson Co., at Tarrytown, and had a most enjoyable trip. G. M.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business was good during the last week and made up in great part for what slowness there was the week previous. Prices stiffened and the demand had some snap. While there was a plentiful supply of all kinds of flowers, still, after the morning's rush was over, there was little left. There was a scarcity of American Beauties; in fact, this flower has been scarce on this market all season. Red roses and white carnations are not equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

We are beginning to notice the usual comments on the green carnation for St. Patrick's day. That there are thousands of carnations so doctored for this day could be well realized if you could see the number of orders for the dye that are being filled by the various firms selling this stuff. The advance orders for white carnations for that time call for more than there will be any chance of getting. While there is a demand for them, there will be green carnations, and all that can be said will have little effect upon those who are meeting this demand. There is nothing that can be said in favor of this practice and a whole lot against it.

A meeting of the Florists' Society was held Saturday evening and while the attendance was light, those present made up in enthusiasm. The subject of flower shows was again talked over and it was decided that the society could not afford to have no show at all. As it had been found to be impracticable to hold a large mum show, as was at first talked of, it was decided that we will have a show next fall and it will be made just as big as we can afford. A committee was appointed to report at the next meeting, with full plans laid so that schedules can then be issued and distributed. Within a couple of weeks I hope to be able to give in these columns a full report of our plans for next season.

John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., sent three carnations to be exhibited at this meeting, but owing to some delay they were not received till Sunday morning. Nevertheless they were in good condition. They were Pink Imperial, on the order of Lawson; John E. Haines, a beautiful scarlet color, introduced last year, and Imperial, a pink variegated.

Visitor: E. J. Fancourt, of Philadelphia. C. J. OHMER.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

An Immense Stock of Choice EASTER PLANTS Blooming Easter Week or earlier if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment.

Come or mail your order direct to the headquarters. Our reputation over the entire country from the Atlantic to the Pacific in growing Easter stock for the wholesale market for many years past ought to be sufficient guarantee as to the truth of what we say and advertise. We have every house, nook and corner full of plants and they were never so fine as this year, 1907.

While laborers, merchants, jobbers, contractors, builders, etc., have increased their prices almost double as usual, we have not advanced our prices; but look, we sell our plants at the same old prices charged two or three years ago when the cost of producing plants was much cheaper.

What was my duty on my trip to Ghent, Belgium (the land of azaleas, araucarias and palms), last fall, 1906? Answer: Of course, the interests of my customers, not speaking of the 1100 souvenir cards which I mailed to my customers in America. For the benefit of my customers I also bought Azalea Indica for Easter trade, the cream of Belgium's production that money could buy.

AZALEAS

Now I am able to offer to my customers, and the trade in general, two houses full of Mme. Vander Cruyssen azaleas, the well known and much favored best double pink azalea that has given so much satisfaction all over America. Plants as round as an apple, just covered with buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, at 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.00 each. Other fine varieties adapted for American markets, such as Niobe, Bernard Andre, Alba, Deutsche Perle (double white), Prof. Wolters, Empress of India, Vervaneana (double variegated), and about eight more fine sorts, all covered with buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.00 each; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 50c to 60c. We have a fine limited quantity of azaleas, 50c to 60c each, such as Apollo (double dark scarlet), Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, and a few others.

Hydrangea Otaka (pink), 6 to 7-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; also $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Lilium Multiflorum and Japanese Longiflorum were never so fine as this year. All sizes, and can meet all wants, 6-in. pots, 5 to 8 buds to a plant, 10c per bud. 4 buds and under, 12c per bud. Raised from Henry F. Michell Co.'s special brand bulbs.

As we sell our lilies so cheap, some other plants must be taken with them. The cultivation of lilies is expensive.

Spiraea Gladstone, 6 to 7-in. pots, these plants are very large and bushy and unusually fine, full of buds, at 50c, 75c and $1.00 each.

Crimson Rambler Roses, 8 feet high and over, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

GODFREY ASCHMANN

Importer and Wholesale Grower of Pot Plants
1012 ONTARIO STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

In Philadelphia there's a florist noted,
Aschmann, his name, his plants beyond compare;

To a sweet girl his heart is all devoted,
Next rank his Araucarias, passing fair;
When seen together they're a pair so charming—
Brimful of beauty—both he cannot keep;
So to his heart he'll hold his winsome darling,
While you may have the Araucarias cheap.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, five years old, 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, width the same as height, very swell stuff, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, 4 years old, 4 tiers, 20 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Specimen Glauca, 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 5 tiers, 30 to 35 inches high, $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 4 years old, 6-in. pots, 20 to 25 inches high, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, one large plant in center, 3 small around, $1.50 to $1.75 each. Single plants 36, 45 to 50 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Cineraria Hybrida, have a house full all shades, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, $2.50, $3.00, $4.00 to $5.00 per doz.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, an immense bloomer, blooming the entire summer and winter, 5½-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Primula Obconica, 5½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Areca Sapida (palms), 6-in. pots, 50c each.

Dracaena Bruantii, 6-in. pots, 50c each.

Ferns. Nephrolepis Barrowii, 6-in. pots, 50c to 75c each; 7-in. pots, $1.00.

Scottil, 8-in. pots, very large, $1.50 each; 5-in. pots, 35c each; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 50c.

Boston Ferns, 7-in. pots, 75c; 6 in. pots, 40c to 50c each; 5-in. pots, 25c to 30c each.

Holly Ferns, 8-in. pots, $1.20 per doz.

Hyacinths, raised from first-class bulbs of my own importation. These bulbs cannot be compared with ordinary stuff flooding the market. King of the Blues, Lavender (blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (white), 4-in. pots, $12.00 per 100.

Touneol Tulips, red and yellow variegated, the best selling Tulips on the market. Will stay in bloom 10 days. 3 bulbs planted in a 4-in. pot, $12.00 per 100 or $1.50 per doz.

Double Von Sion Daffodils, the best double yellow narcissus in the world, will sell on sight. 8 double-nosed bulbs planted in 5, 5½ and 6-in. pots, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. pots. All bulbs are strictly first-class, of my own importation and are now outside in coldframe and will bloom in about two weeks after bringing in greenhouse.

Have about 200 pots Von Sion Daffodils, 5½-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, in greenhouse now, in bud ready to open for immediate sale at $2.00 per doz. This is a special offer, only good for a few weeks.

Moonvines, Ipomaea Noctiflora (A. W. Smith, originator), best pure white, largest and most fragrant moonvine in the world. I made a specialty of them for the past 15 years and am known as the Moonvine Grower of America and grow yearly about 20,000. In 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100. Now ready.

Directions to visit my place: Take Germantown or Willow Grove car at 18th and Market Sts. to Ontario St., or 8th and Market St., and take Germantown, Chestnut Hill or Willow Grove car to Ontario St. In going either route you walk two squares east on Ontario St.

Mention if pots are wanted with all plants. Cash with order, please.

All goods must travel on purchaser's risk.

LATROBE, PA., Feb. 18, 1907.

MR. GODFREY ASCHMANN.

Dear Sir—I received your plants in good condition, satisfactory to me. I am pleased in every way.

Respectfully,

EDW. LEIZMANN.

(Above order amounted to $86.25, for 55 azaleas, 19 kentias and araucarias and ferns.)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.

I have seen Mr. Aschmann's Easter stock and I can truthfully say that it never looked finer, and he never before had such a large stock. Am pleased to recommend our customers to Mr. Aschmann.

WASHINGTON.

Club Meeting.

The last regular monthly meeting of the Washington Florists' Club, prior to the convention, was held March 5, with a good attendance. All officers of the preceding year were unanimously reelected, as follows: President Peter Bisset; vice-president, Z. D. Blackistone; secretary, Charles McCauley; treasurer, W. H. Ernest; board of directors, George C. Shaffer and W. S. Clark; awards committee, Charles McCauley, W. S. Clark, John Robertson, Joseph Freeman, Jr., and Thomas Field. Much satisfaction was expressed by the club at the efficient work accomplished by each officer, and the reports were excellent. The committee on arrangements for the convention this week reported good progress. No stone has been left unturned to make the show one of Washington's greatest exhibitions. Advertising in local daily papers was resorted to and they have shown a keen interest and published much to attract the general public. F. H. Kramer offered a cup valued at $50 to be bowled for March 15.

Mr. Shaffer has the decorative work of the banquet hall at Arlington hotel.

Peter Bisset had on exhibition eight magnificent specimens of the newer types of primroses, which attracted much attention. James L. Carbery showed a vase of Enchantress and one of Flamingo carnations.

LOWELLVILLE, O.—The high wind of March 2 blew the sashes off the greenhouses of Reuben Darrow and broke them badly.

HOOPESTON, ILL.—Andrew Peterson, of Anderson, Peterson & Co., of Paxton and Hoopetston, and who recently transferred his residence from Paxton to Hoopetston, has been announced as a candidate for alderman in the First ward, with good prospects of being elected.

ALBANY, N. Y.—William C. Gloeckner has opened a store on State street, between Chapel and Lodge streets. He is the son of Mrs. Catherine Gloeckner, who for twenty-five years has conducted a greenhouse business on Cemetery avenue. Her 30,000 feet of glass will, as far as possible, supply the stock for Mr. Gloeckner's store.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, is preparing to put on the market a new size of its well-known hot water boiler. They call it the Jumbo, because it is built to heat 50,000 feet of glass to 60 degrees when it is 15 degrees below zero outside.

HEATING TWO HOUSES.

We wish to know how many flows and returns it will take to heat the following houses: No. 1, a north and south house, 18x98, and ten feet to the ridge; the side walls four and one-half feet high, glass ventilators in the east wall and a greenhouse on the west side. No. 2, an east and west house, 24x105, and twelve feet to the ridge; side walls four and one-half feet high, glass ventilators in the south wall; the north wall has no protection. The houses have a fall of eighteen inches from the end to the boiler-pit. The boiler is two feet lower than the lowest part of either house. We have a lot of 2-inch pipe and would like to use that if possible. We have 4-inch flows and returns attached to the boiler. Hot water is used. We wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees when it is 10 degrees below zero. B. F. Co.

To heat house No. 1 by the use of 2-inch pipe, twelve runs of pipe should be installed. This can be supplied by using a single 3-inch flow pipe or two lines of the twelve can be used as flow pipes, the remaining ten serving in two coils of five each as returns. House No. 2 can be heated by the use of 2-inch pipe if sixteen lines are installed. If a single riser is desired a 3½-inch pipe will be necessary. If 2-inch risers are employed, three will be necessary. The remaining thirteen pipes can be divided into three coils, thus throwing the extra pipe into the coil on the most exposed side of the house. L. C. C.

PIPING TWO HOUSES.

I have two east and west houses, each 22½x150 and ten feet to the ridge, with cement walls and sixteen inches of glass on each wall. Temperature outdoors has dropped to 30 degrees below zero. The north house is for carnations and sixty feet of the south house is used for roses, forty feet for ferns and fifty feet for bedding plants. The boiler-room is at the northwest corner of the carnation house, and the sixty horse-power steam boiler is set two and one-half feet below the lowest heating coil. I have a large boiler because I expect to add more houses. My feed pipe is 3-inch and return 2-inch. Can I use a reducing valve on the feed and a check-valve on the return with good results? I am rather short on 1¼-inch pipe, but have plenty of 2-inch. Can I use the latter with good results? How much less would it take? E. R. B.

To heat the house 22½x150 with steam by the use of 2-inch pipe, the house should be provided with a 3-inch flow under the ridge and twelve 2-inch returns, or eighteen 1¼-inch returns. The main return is a little small to supply the two houses. A 4-inch main riser would be better, unless you carry an independent 3-inch flow from the boiler to each house. You can use reducing valves on Club Exhibition.

The meeting of the Florists' Club February 28 was a success. We had a little carnation show instead of a regular meeting, and the show, being given to invited guests, drew quite a crowd. Carnations were given to the ladies as souvenirs. The exhibit, though not large, was good.

J. E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., showed a vase each of Imperial, Pink Imperial and John E. Haines. The Pink Imperial drew the attention of everybody. Its stem, and that of Imperial, could not be beat. The flowers also were immense.

Aristocrat, shown by the Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., was in a class by itself, and, as a good deal has been written about it, I need only say that it bore out all reports.

The F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y., showed a lot of White Enchantress that were all right and made the writer feel glad that he has a lot of them ordered. Their new Winsor is a beauty, and if we can do it the way they do, it will be one of the best things out.

W. E. Hall, of Clyde, O., showed his new red seedling. E. G. Gillett and a number of those present were disappointed because stock of it can not yet be bought. We hope it will be out soon.

R. W. Hartmann, of Napoleon, O., showed vases of Lady Bountiful and Lawson that were as fine as any.

Home products were shown by the following:

George Bayer had, besides the regular varieties, a few seedlings of his own.

John Gratopp had, heading his list of standard varieties, a large vase of Enchantress that took every eye.

E. A. Kuhnke showed a bunch of the newer varieties of carnations, also a few of his seedlings; but the biggest part of his exhibit consisted of cyclamen, Scottii and Piersoni ferns, Asparagus plumosus, and calla lily plants.

G. W. Haebich, florist at the State Hospital for the Insane, brought a vase of standard varieties, as well as his white seedling carnation, the latter showing up as a good commercial white, something that we need in this neighborhood.

Krueger Bros. showed only a vase of Enchantress in the carnation line, but a few vases of splendid roses made up for

HENRY A. DREER

DETROIT.The Market.

Business remains fairly good, but the market is glutted with colored carnations and a variety of bulbous stock.

A few years ago few orchids were used in this city, but they became more in vogue from year to year and this winter played an important part in the daily program of the leading retailers.

Beauties are scarce. A fair supply of other roses is arriving daily, but they remain well cleaned up. White carnations are just about equal to the demand. An attempt was made to clean up the colored stock by selling on the street, but the weather was unfavorable. Smilax is exceedingly scarce. Common ferns are arriving in fair supply, but the stock is poor.

Club Meeting.

The last regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held March 6. After the regular routine of business, a paper, entitled "My Experience in Carnation Growing" was read by A. J. Stahelin. The paper was well received and brought forth quite a discussion. Mr. Stahelin was given a vote of thanks.

The question of having to deliver flowers at the back door of apartment houses was talked over. Some of the members claimed they had given their drivers and boys instructions not to go around to the rear, as flowers were not for the kitchen, but for the lady of the house. This is one way of looking at it, but if our customers insist on it, we must, if we care for their patronage, abide by their wishes.

A spring flower show is on for the next meeting night, March 20. Mr. Unger, of Belle Isle, has promised to make an exhibit of some unusually fine cinerarias.

Various Notes.

After adjournment of the meeting March 6 the majority of the members of the club betook themselves to a nearby refreshment parlor and enjoyed the hospitality of Albert Pochelon, it being the occasion of his birthday.

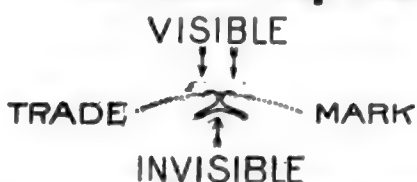

Sunday visitors to the horticultural buildings at Belle Isle are pleased with the unusually fine collection of cinerarias.

The decorations for spring openings have created a big demand for blooming plants. Schroeter is busy getting ready for the spring opening of Newcomb, Endicott & Co. H. S.

You can see plain enough that with this valley connection the U-Bar construction is just about as light as any construction can be, and be enduring. U-Bar greenhouses are the best greenhouses built because there's no other construction admits of such light connection, or makes such connection in as mechanical, yet pleasing way. The gardener likes the results these houses give—the owner likes both the looks and results. Send for catalog. and we will be glad to tell you the best way to reach our office and factory. We want you to drop in and see our factory, look over the immense stock of open air-dried Cypress and make a thorough inspection of our facilities. We shall be glad to show you how we handle our orders and the thoroughness with which we go into all the little details. It will be a pleasure for us to have you call and we will extend you all the courtesies we can. If you want to buy a greenhouse you will be well repaid for the visit as we have something interesting to show you. The trip will do you good whether you want to build now or next year—it will impress upon you the fact that our entire organization, from the president down to the teamster, is looking after every order no matter how small or insignificant.

FIX THIS IN YOUR MIND

that with our 40-foot wide Iron Frame House, two small columns at every rafter, 8 feet 4 inches apart, are all the supports needed. Just think what a tremendous factor that is in shade reduction, not taking into account the added convenience in working your beds.

You can't get that proposition in any other house. Get the exact particulars of this construction from our Iron Frame Catalog.

Great Grates.

As fast as old grate bars are burned out many growers are putting in the Martin rocking grate. The call for this grate is largely increased by the fact that the growers who have used it for one or more seasons are almost without exception equipping other boilers with it. The grate costs considerably more than the stationary bars, but is figured to make a decided saving in fuel, and that is what all the growers are after.

PERKINS & SCHUMANN

...WHOLESALE COMMISSION FLORISTS....

57 West 26th St., cor. 6th Ave., TELEPHONE 1009 MADISON SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

Thirty-five years in the Wholesale Cut Flower Trade of New York—a record to be proud of. Now we are located in the very centre of the greatest wholesale market of the world. We handle the finest Malds, Brides, Carnations and Cypripediums in the market. We are on the ground floor in everything—prices, quality, convenience. No one in the business can boast of better facilities. We are here early and late, every day and Sunday!

Growers will find it to their advantage to ship to us for EASTER

Our business has grown wonderfully this season. We can accommodate a few more growers of choice flowers. Give us a trial.

NONE OF OUR SHIPPERS EVER FIND IT NECESSARY TO MAKE A CHANGE

BOMBAYREED JARDINIERES

Are What The Florists Are Using Nowadays!

WHY?

Because they wear. They stand exposure to sunlight and moisture.

They are not made of grass or split willow, but from the genuine solid bamboo reeds, imported direct from India for our own use, which makes them admirable for decorating and hard usage.

No. 7—Japanese.

The BOMBAYREED JARDINIERES are quick sellers, too, because they are extensively advertised in the popular magazines. We create a big demand.

They are by far the most artistic and serviceable jardinieres on the market today.

We offer liberal trade discounts and solicit your inquiry as to our attractive freight allowances. All our jardinieres are made in nine styles and in all colors. Sizes from four inches up. Flexible pot covers in extra large sizes. Our prices are low and inviting.

Don't forget that our Foliage Green colors have made the hit.

See our artistic window boxes.

THE NEW PINK ROSE AURORA

....A Rose for Everybody....

This Rose is a seedling from Bon Silene and Souvenir du President Carnot. The flowers are large and full, and are produced on long and stiff stems, with a rich dark green foliage. The color is a beautiful pink with a deeper shading in the center. The keeping quality of the flowers is excellent, and it does not lose its brilliancy of color when kept in the cellar. The habit of growth is strong and vigorous; it has absolutely no tendency to go dormant during the winter and every shoot has a flower bud.

AURORA has inherited the productiveness of Bon Silene and has the free flowering qualities of this well-known, prolific variety. It is easy to grow, and does not need a high temperature.

Plants from 2½-inch pots, own roots, $6.00 per doz ; $30.00 per 100
50 at 100 rate. $250.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate

WE herewith quote you Easter prices, and we believe that stock will be extra good grade and plenty enough for all orders. Lilies are reported short in stem; and somewhat short in supply. We will have enough on all lines except American Beauties. Place your orders early, as all Holiday orders are filled in rotation as received. Regardless of quoted prices, stock will be billed at Chicago market prices at time of shipment, but in our best judgment the following prices will prevail.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

EASTER PLANT ARRANGEMENTS.

A Variety Desirable.

Probably every florist who sells Easter plants at retail will have use for more lilies than any other one item of his stock, but there is a great sameness in a store filled full of lilies, and a variety of plants, while it may show by contrast in the sales how important the lily is, will do a great deal to add to the attractiveness of the store and will be of much value beyond the mere profit derived directly from sales. Variety will bring to your store many people who would not enter one easily seen to contain little but lilies.

Even though you may not expect to sell many large plant arrangements, it is wise to have a few for purposes of display. The stock used in fixing up large show pieces usually is not all loss, for most of it can be used in making up work after Easter, and a good showing is worth all it costs; not a display beyond the point of reason, but one which will do you credit in a world where appearances count for a great deal. As the Sage of Corfu once advised some young men just starting in business, "Wash all you got, and hang out all you wash."

The Lily the Leader.

You will no doubt sell a great many lilies, probably the majority in pots with no other embellishment than a crepe paper pot cover, but you will find a good profit in varying the stock by making them up in a number of ways with other plants. The lily goes with everything. We have, indeed, seen Easter lilies and Crimson Rambler roses made up together in baskets and hampers, and, despite the fact that one might omit to mention these two as suitable to combine, they did not look misplaced.

In practically every case the addition of the accessories adds to the selling price, so that the profit on the baskets and ribbon is a better percentage than is made on the plants if sold unadorned. An inexpensive arrangement is the lily shown. If you sold the lilies alone $2 would be the limit for the eight flowers, and the chances are you would not count the bud, so you would get only $1.75. But with the addition of the birch bark box, the light blue bow and a few small ferns, it easily becomes worth $4.50 to $5, according to the kind of trade you cater to.

Moderate Priced Plants.

Speaking of prices, moderate and otherwise, even the "swellest" stores have to carry some stock which is well within the means of the ordinary purse, not so much for the cheaper transient trade as for the regular wealthy patron who wants something not expensive to send to an acquaintance whose station is just outside the charmed circle. Now, in a big city, where the fashionable stores are, you cannot afford to sell low-priced stuff except at a big profit; expenses of delivery, etc., are too heavy. We know one city retailer who thinks he cannot afford to deliver a purchase at Christmas or Easter if he does not make at least a dollar on the sale. Of course he profit in that and the plants looked well worth the money.

A Word About Baskets.

Nowadays the basket is used for every conceivable purpose. There was a time when the basket of flowers led at once to the thought of the sweet girl graduate. But in this later day they send the ward politician a basket of, cowslips, maybe, or flowering dogwood, when he is appointed poundmaster. But the basket never seems out of place when it is of proper color. Frequently the colors are too bright. They should never be of a character to attract the eye from the plants or flowers they contain. The basket should be in keeping with the flowers; light and graceful for cut blooms; heavier for plants and in pro-many times has it to do, but this is the way he fixed up his low-priced stock last year: He bought a spiraea (astilbe) for $1, added one of the adjustable baskets and a bow of chiffon and marked it $3. He did the same thing with the deutzia. There was good portion to their size. Don't try to fill a big basket with small plants by using more of them. You will only partly succeed.

The willow or bamboo basket is good where the material to be used is heavy, but the twig basket is hard to beat as a plant receptacle. It is offered in dozens of shapes and sizes and goes well with almost every flowering or foliage plant.

For Variety.

The bougainvillea is a plant which always attracts attention. It does not always please, but a few are useful. The one illustrated was a rather ungainly plant, and not especially well flowered, but it took the eye of every one who entered the store where it stood just before Easter last year: "What an odd plant," was the almost invariable comment. It sold for only $3, but it paid. The pot cover was deep green crepe paper outside, and inside a couple of folds of deep red to match the flowers.

Of course the rambler roses will be largely in evidence this Easter. Small plants of the Crimson Rambler, and the new ubiquitous Baby Rambler will be used by thousands to make up all sorts of baskets, hampers, etc. Larger, well flowered plants are best with little adornment; possibly only a stone jardiniere of some dark color.

The Omnipresent Plants.

You will never see an Easter without plenty of azaleas. There are those who vogue. You need little if any ribbon about an azalea.

Primroses and bulb stock are the staples of Easter stock, second only to the lily. You can make them up in a hundred ways, at any cost you wish. Several of these staple arrangements were shown in last week's REVIEW.

Inexpensive Novelties.

The average store will be able to sell a great many of the little things like lichen-grown shoes filled with ferns, the small Pompeian jars filled with selaginella, asparagus, etc.; indeed, many sales will be missed if more or less of these things are not shown, both at Christmas and Easter. What you don't sell at one holiday you can lay away for the other.

Last year the chicks and goslings were widely used. They went into practically every plant arrangement, whether it was a little one for a table center-piece or a big basket for window display. The department stores got hold of them and made them more common than they would become through florists' use, but that is not likely to injure their popularity outside of the extreme set, to whom few of us cater.

The ribbon used this season will be more largely chiffon than ever before.

COLOR COMBINATIONS.

The art of color combination is one of the priceless gifts to the florist who possesses it. There is nothing more valuable to the retailer than a knowledge as to how to handle colors. It is not only a tremendous factor in the success of made-up work and decorations, but employed in a window display it is an advertisement ahead of anything which can be achieved with no special expense.

When a window is filled with all sorts of flowers and accessories the result is never so good as it might be with those of one color, and its shades and tints. For instance, one of the most attractive windows in Chicago recently was arranged by O. J. Friedman, all yellow. The flowers were daffodils; the receptacles were golden brown; the ribbons were yellow; the green was light asparagus.

Another attractive display at the same time was that of the Fleischman Floral Co., which was all in shades of purple. The low pieces were filled with violets, larger ones with Dutch hyacinths, and the background was of purple rhododendrons. The ribbon used was purple and the whole effect was one which would appeal to any artistic taste.

THE VALUE OF SYSTEM.

Easter is like Christmas in a good many other respects than that it comes but once a year. It brings a rush that overtakes facilities designed for everyday purposes and brings out the value of system as no other test can show it up. You may have ever so good stock and do a splendid business, but if your system is at fault you will be hopelessly at sea when one of these rushes comes.

Because of the difficulty of securing capable help for only a couple of days, in most stores it is the custom for all hands to help sell during business hours and then turn in after closing time and work perhaps the better part of the night getting orders put up for delivery Easter morning. If you work it this way you will save a great deal of friction by having each clerk put up, or at least inspect, the orders he has himself taken. In a hurry time it is impossible to write down all the details of every order and a wide-awake clerk will be on the watch to see that he meets the slight preferences of the customer as he learned of them in making the sale. Where the orders are taken by one person and filled by another it is necessary to get every little detail down on the order if we are to give the fullest satisfaction to the customer.

We find order sheets more satisfactory than order books, for several reasons. Ours are fashioned after the charge tickets of a department store, but we make only one copy. The heading of the slips reads, "Deliver to; charge to; day; hour;" etc. We make a separate order for every gift a customer may have us send; the more the merrier. The cards are often a fruitful cause of complaint, but we avoid this by entering the word "card" as a part of the order, if one is to be sent. It is checked off like any other part of the order in filling. If we do not have the customer's card as a part of our regular stock the one that is left to go with an order is put in an envelope and attached to the order with a little wire clip. If a special plant is sold the order slip is made out as usual, tag written and attached to the plant, say they do not sell as well as they once did. They are best decorated only with a pot cover. Some decorators wrap crepe paper about them until it is an impossibility to see the flowers at all except from above. This is all wrong and fortunately is not often seen since taste for the natural has come into

The use of ribbon is increasing steadily, but the tendency is moving from the heavy material once so commonly employed and toward lighter effects.

CATSKILL, N. Y.—Henry Hansen says that from all indications Easter trade will break the best records.

The Bougainvillea is a Novelty to Most Flower Buyers.

the order checked as filled and the package placed on the delivery counter. We charge from the filled order slips.

When we are selling for a holiday, like Easter, when some stock is wanted for delivery Saturday and some for Sunday morning, we set aside space for each day's deliveries. If a plant arrangement is sold for delivery Saturday it goes at once with Saturday's deliveries, if for Sunday then with Sunday's lot. Of course we divide each lot into smaller lots, according to the part of town they are in, so that they won't get a longer ride than necessary.

One great fault with many retail florists, and with a good many of their employees, is a lack of appreciation of the value of promptness. You have to be there on time or there soon won't be any occasion for going there at all. A 20-dollar funeral design is not worth two whoops in the hot place after the late lamented is on the way to the cemetery, and excuses in such a case are about the most futile things on earth. What if the wagon did break down, or the messenger boy stop to see a dog fight! You must allow for the unexpected. A lily delivered Sunday afternoon, after you have had three telephone calls about it, is a poor substitute for the one promised at 9 a. m. Devise a system that will get you there on time.

NEVER TROUBLE TROUBLE.

Trouble, trouble, let me be,
Trouble, trouble, twenty-three!
Trouble, trouble, prunes for you,
Trouble, trouble, oh skiddoo.

"You will have no trouble if you buy your plants at Roselawn Greenhouse. All of our plants are grown south and fully acclimated. New plants coming right along every day."

This is the advertisement of H. L. Neal, Seguin, Tex., printed in his local paper. He says that he believes one should "Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you," but it wasn't much trouble to get this next to the society column, "a good place for a florist's adv.," and "by night everyone around town was repeating the nonsense verse." Mr. Neal writes: "I change every week and have no standing adv. I read and read again everything you publish about advertising. It is a fine art and your paper has helped me greatly."

EASTER HINTS.

How the time does fly! Here we are again, up to Easter time, with its hard work and cares, and another cold winter, with its lessons of successes and failures, behind us; another year's experience gained, which, if properly assimilated, should enable us to step up to a little higher standard than we have attained in the past.

Of course Easter time is practically the close of the violet season; near enough, so that we can draw our conclusions as to the season's profits (or losses, which we hope have been nil) and clearly outline our plans for the coming season, that we may have been formulating during the winter, only waiting for the outcome of this season to make us sure of our demands and opportunities to dispose of a larger or smaller crop next year. It is to be presumed that in view of your probable desire to increase, that you have been propagating sufficient stock so that there will be no need of buying, even if you devote considerable more space next year to violet culture.

If by any chance you have not as much stock as you wish, if you have taken proper care of your houses, we would still prefer to increase our stock, by separating the crowns, to running the risk of buying stock from other growers, although, as a rule, this is a poor way, as you are so likely to have weakened plants which will be more liable to diseases, etc. However, by careful selection and proper care, it will, as a rule, be much better than the stock you will purchase from unknown parties and which has been shaken about on the cars.

A word of caution may not be amiss here to some in regard to the houses and blooms; while, as I said, this practically closes the season, still, if the weather continues so much colder than is seasonable you should be able to keep the plants in blooming order for some time yet. Every flower picked after Easter, in a way, might be considered clear gain, at least, aside from the time spent in picking them. However, it will take but a little carelessness, or neglect in ventilating, watering, etc., to speedily ruin the flowers, which, at best, will be growing lighter colored and smaller.

In sending out your retail order for Easter, or, in fact, any time, be extremely careful of the color tone of any accessories in the way of ribbons, cards or what not. It must be just right, or it is worse than nothing. For instance, the shade that would do for Marie Louise would never do for Lady Hume Campbell, or vice versa. If you desire a contrast in shade, never use anything darker than the flowers themselves, for the result, if you do so, will be to cause them to look faded and old; but this is enough to jog your memory about this.

Again, in your hurry remember that they are very susceptible to odors of all kinds, and your helpers must not let them lie around, even for a short time, in contact with anything but the regular vases or dishes that you employ especially for them. The same care must be used in regard to the receptacle that they are packed in for delivery. Don't forget the waxed paper and suitable box and cord, or ribbon, with which it is tied. All of these little things are large factors in making pleased and perfectly satisfied customers, and these are what we all desire and must have to make our business a success, even at some trouble and expense on our part.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

FERNS FROM SPORES.

Perhaps a few notes on the art of fern growing as practiced by growers for Covent Garden, London, may be of some interest to the readers of the REVIEW. No doubt many American florists have, when visiting England, paid a visit to the garden, and personally witnessed the vast quantities of ferns disposed of during the course of a morning. To those who are interested from the pecuniary point of view, it may be stated that small ferns, chiefly of the pteris family, are put up in trays containing fifteen 2½-inch pots and sold at 24 cents to 36 cents per tray; some growers selling at the latter price from 200 to 300 boxes during the hours from 4 a. m. to 9 a. m., at which latter hour the market closes.

The first care to the successful raising of ferns from spores is to get a supply of spores from fronds fully matured and of perfect form, and collect from plants that have shown vigorous growth from the commencement. You may possibly find the spores overripe, in which case they are hardly worth taking. To determine when they are just fit, one must be guided by the color. Of course different species have different colors, such as yellow in Polypodium aureum, dark brown in pteris, and so on; but in the majority of instances it is easily discovered by passing the finger over the spore-cases and if the spores adhere they are usually in a fit state to collect.

The fronds, when collected, should be wrapped in a piece of paper, named and dated and laid upon a hot pipe for a week or so, by which time they ought to be quite dry and in a fit state to shake out and sow. Prepare quite new 5-inch pots, sterilize the soil and burn or bake some virgin soil black. Don't burn it brown, for two reasons: It holds too close together, and black soil, by showing the spores as you are sowing, enables you to determine how thick they are. The query may arise, why use burnt soil when the soil is sterilized? First, to assist in sowing the spores, and, second, because it does not take the dreaded moss and fungus so readily.

Crock your pots well, place the sterilized soil therein, carefully make firm and even, put your burnt soil on top, place the pot in a clean saucer and fill the saucer with water drawn from the main and not from a tank, thus avoiding the risk of getting the spores of aliens. Make quite sure your pot drinks well before sowing; that is to say, see that the pot gets thoroughly saturated and the mold gets wet upward from the bottom and your burnt soil on top is quite moist all over.

Now everything is ready for sowing. Be careful there are no draughts, else you will lose thousands of spores, besides getting them hopelessly mixed. One slight tap under the paper is usually sufficient to distribute enough spores to cover your pot; don't overdo it; it is easier to sow too many than too thinly.

Place a glass over the top of the pot, and if you place the pots just under a hot pipe in a greenhouse, you will find that there will be very little condensation on the glass in the morning. Should there be any water, however, under the glass, turn it over.

The next stage, when the prothallus appears, calls for your greatest judgment; for it is now when the success, or otherwise, of your efforts will be determined. Your pots will be covered with prothallus, which, when examined under a microscope, looks truly pretty.

It is advisable at this stage not to keep the saucers constantly filled with water, as you are liable to have damping off take place, and it is exceedingly difficult to prevent it when once started. Rely upon the appearance of the pots themselves and watch your prothallus and water accordingly. Should you by an oversight allow a pot to become too dry,

The Azalea as it is Usually Sent out by Retailers.

A Symphony in Yellow.

by no means dump it until you have given it a trial; immerse it in water up to the rim until it is quite wet, but don't let the water overflow.

When the little fronds appear in places, immediately prick off in flats, not flats large enough to prick off seedling quercus into, but handy flats two inches deep, $7\frac{1}{2} \times 14\frac{1}{2}$. This size you will find quite deep enough. By the time the roots reach the bottom they will be large enough to pot on. Don't make the mistake of letting your plants get so large that the roots require to be torn apart when potting, and have your loam mixed with a third of sifted peat with a dash of sand; this prevents the soil from caking.

The other stages must be described at a future date. Finally, attend to shading. Your pots won't hurt if under a stage near a pipe, but you must bring them into greater light to harden them off a little before they are fit to prick off, and at all times protect them from brilliant sunshine. LANGLEY TUDOR.

CONVENTION HINTS.

At the annual convention of the Society of Southern Florists, held at New Orleans, February 14 to 16, there were some interesting discussions, more or less spontaneous. In one of these discussions B. M. Wichers gave a remedy for destroying cutworm on nephrolepis. The formula is as follows: One level teaspoonful of Paris green, one teaspoonful of lime diluted in five gallons of water. Sprinkle the plants and foliage at intervals of a week.

A remedy for shot-bug, an insect pest so troublesome in the south, was highly recommended by R. Lockerbie and W. B. Patterson, Jr. It consisted of bran or corn-meal, Paris green and enough syrup to make it sweet, the mixture to be spread alongside the plants and around the benches.

On Friday morning, the last day of the convention, R. Lockerbie, referring to the growing of carnations in the south, said that a different style of house, such as is used in the north, should be established here. More attention should be paid to ventilation, so as to get the benefit of fresh air and protection from insects.

The closing discussion Friday evening was in reference to two important shrubs of Louisiana—Magnolia fuscata and sweet olive. Thus far the propagation has been made from layers, which make good plants, but the process is slow. E. Baker and others thought that the plants can be grown successfully from cuttings, grafts and seeds.

Several members wanted to know how to keep Aspidistra lurida from reverting to green. P. A. Chopin and B. M. Wichers advised giving the plants rather poor soil, starved plants showing more variegation than those in rich soil.

To hear J. A. Newsham tell it, orchid culture is the simplest thing imaginable. He is just now starting in to supply the south with cut blooms of orchids, and we hope he finds it the simple matter his talk on the subject would indicate. In speaking of growing mums, he said that no doubt protection must be provided to finish the flowers perfectly, owing to the climate and the number of insect pests one has to contend with in the south, but a good grade of commercial flower can be raised in New Orleans if grown outdoors and protected by glass as soon as the buds appear.

Paul Abele told of his method of growing Harrisii lilies in pots, which he has tried for the first time this year, and which has turned out a perfect success. He expects to have his stock in fine shape for Easter. M. M. L.

SPACE FOR MUMS.

Will 9x9 inches be sufficient room to produce a good grade of commercial mums, two flowers to a plant, of such varieties as Eaton and Chadwick, planted about June 1? How much headroom should Monrovia have if buds are taken about August 1? _____ G. J. B.

I would say that a distance of 9x9 inches, planting chrysanthemums to grow two stems to a plant, will produce a fair grade of flowers, but not the best. Personally, I grow most of my kinds that distance and take up only one shoot. That flower I expect to wholesale in the neighborhood of 50 cents. Whether or not G. J. B.'s market runs that way, is for him to say. My own idea is to grow the very finest grade of flowers, but I realize that, in many cities, such a grade cannot be marketed at a profit. I sold the White Duckham (Miss Clay Frick) at $1 each, wholesale, in New York last fall, but I question if any other city in the country would pay the price, or even New York for a great quantity. Varieties like Ivory, that have very small foliage, can be grown much closer than the average kinds and, if G. J. B. is familiar with his sorts, he can save much space and still produce a fine grade of flowers.

Monrovia, planted June 1 and the early bud taken, should have ample room in three feet six inches of headroom. If plants were very small it might not need even that, while, if plants were in good shape at planting time, it probably would need fully that space. Monrovia brought a phenomenal price last year and almost every florist has his calculations made for a batch of it this year. Whether they will all succeed in getting it early is another question, and whether the market will be so bare of other flowers as it was last fall is still another.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.—WEST

Propagating.

The chrysanthemum is our grand fall flower and it is now getting time to make preparations for another season. We must see that we will be well supplied with good stock to plant on the benches when the proper time is at hand.

If you have retained stock plants from last fall they should be in a good position and should by this time have made good, strong growth. Most varieties should have a second batch of cuttings ready if properly taken care of. They grow very rapidly as spring approaches and from now on will go ahead fast.

Every grower is interested in knowing how to get the best cuttings. They are generally produced by potting the earliest batch of cuttings in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots and when well started planting the young stock out on a good, light, airy bench. Set them about four inches each way in four or five inches of almost any kind of good, rich soil.

If you have bought cuttings of new and expensive varieties and have them in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots, when well rooted around they can be shifted into 4-inch pots and if desired can be later used to plant in the bench for blooming, in case you are short of stock. But I prefer 2-inch to 2½-inch stock for planting on the benches.

If you have your young plants in a good place on the bench they should be producing fine cuttings by this time. As soon as the cuttings reach the usual length, cut them with a sharp knife. Trim up your cuttings by removing one or two of the bottom leaves. This depends much on the variety or character of the cuttings, as on some it is not necessary to take off any of the leaves, only to tip them up a bit so as not to use up too much space in the bench.

Now they are ready for the sand and ought to get in at once. Never let the cuttings lie around after having been taken from the plants. We have known growers who left them for hours, but they should be out of the sand only the shortest possible time, as they wilt very fast and it is a great drawback in rooting.

The sand that you have been using for rose and carnation cuttings will answer for the chrysanthemums providing there is no fungus in the sand. If there was fungus, it cannot be used. It must be taken out and replaced with fresh, clean sand, and this is always safest.

If you have sufficient space in your propagating bench do not crowd the cuttings either way. The cuttings of each variety should be graded, keeping each size by itself. Firm your sand well and see that your cuttings are well pressed in. After this a fair watering should be given them and on every bright morning give them a light sprinkling to keep them fresh and cool. Never allow them to weather down; safeguard that point. The watering, shading and ventilating must be well taken care of. Under proper treatment nearly all varieties will root in from twelve to twenty days.

When well rooted pot up in 2-inch or 2½-inch pots, the latter size being preferred for varieties of strong growth. Use good, rich soil.

If the sun is out the first day or two after potting them up, a little shading will be a great advantage in carrying them through without a check.

Specimen Plants.

The enormous specimen plant exhibited at the Chicago show last fall, probably the largest and finest plant ever exhibited, has caused several growers to write me regarding the ways and means necessary to produce such wonderful results.

The very largest plants are produced by taking an old stock plant and, by retaining all the suckers that are thrown up and encouraging the plant by repotting whenever necessary, the foundation of the plant is quickly assured. Some schedules call for an inch of clear stem between the soil and the plant and such plants, while they may show a really higher degree of cultural skill, do not make such large specimens, for the simple reason that all the growth must be produced from one single shoot or cutting which is generally rooted in November or December.

Granted that one has at this time nice young plants that it is proposed to grow into specimens, the chief object should be to induce them to make all the growth possible, by seeing that the plants are always liberally supplied with water, never letting them become pot-bound for a moment, and by pinching. This pinching is where the art of the cultivator comes in, as by this means he conforms the plant to his model of shape and also produces the hundreds of shoots, each of which eventually produces a flower. The pinching, or stopping, is carried on from the time the plant is about five inches high. First, the tip is pinched out. This causes the plant to produce three or four shoots, and these in turn are stopped after they have made two or three joints, and this process, with slight modifications, as a plant may grow a little more on one side than another, is kept up till the last week in July.

I will endeavor, in the seasonable notes in these columns, to follow the specimen plants right through to the flowering period, but just at this time attend to the pinching and move the plants along from 4-inch to 6-inch pots as soon as they are ready for it.

Soil, good soil, and properly prepared is the chief essential for pot culture. I do not believe that the black prairie soil of the western plains will ever produce such plants as the fibrous loam of the east. The black soil may contain as much plant food and even more; it certainly contains the humus, but its mechanical condition can never be the same as the rotted, turfy loam. There does not appear much difference, perhaps, in a bench where a large mass of soil is handled, but it would appear in pot culture, where plants may easily become waterlogged if not carefully watered. The prairie loam, so far as I have seen it, is deficient in fiber and would become clogged up with heavy feeding much sooner than would the sod loam. I mention this because I think that a grower, who has only the black soil to work with, is handicapped and should use lots of coarse sand and leaf-soil to make his soil porous and open. Lots of plant food is not necessary in the early life of the plant. That can easily be supplied later on in liquid form. One must have a soil that will stand feeding and watering without getting sour, or success is impossible.

General Suggestions.

Cuttings root readily at this season of the year and, with a rush of other work, are often left in the sand longer than they should be. Get them out as soon as the roots are half an inch long and put them into a cool house after potting up. An attenuated, miserable little plant, in the early stages of growth, does not give one much chance for later success. Neglect is at the bottom of most of our failures, anyway. Not many florists bother with shelves in the houses, but a shelf a foot wide grows better plants than can be produced down on a bench. The air is all around the plants and they make a much more stocky growth.

Get all the early varieties into the sand if you have not already done so. They should be planted in May to give you fine flowers early; also the very dwarf kinds, Beatrice May, May Seddon, etc. Perhaps no variety ever sent out has given the satisfaction Beatrice May has. It appears to have done fine in every section of the country and the demand for it is enormous, now that it is down to a popular price. If the foliage were a little better I should say that Beatrice May is as near perfection as we can hope to come in a chrysanthemum.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

MOSCHOSMA RIPARIUM.

This plant, flowered last winter probably for the first time in America, is a new introduction from South Africa and should be destined to play an important part in midwinter decorations in the future. I have been informed that it was a plant discovered by some of the British officers serving under Lord Roberts in the recent Boer war, but this may all be a drummer's yarn. In any case, the plant is a beautiful thing in flower and I see no reason why it should not be largely grown as a Christmas pot plant, or for conservatory decoration by private growers.

The growth of the plant is on the order of the salvia family, free, kind, and not affected by mildew or any insect pests and, so far as I have seen it, I consider it one of the most easily grown plants in cultivation. The plant illustrated is flowering in a 9-inch pot and stands six feet high and is three feet across at the base.

This plant was from a cutting rooted solid mass of color. The color of the flower is white, with a faint shade of lavender imparted by the stamens. Seen at a little distance the plant looks like nothing so much as a gigantic spiraea. The flowers have a slightly pungent but not unpleasant odor.

Grown in a cool house with a night temperature of 50 degrees and ample air days (a carnation house, as a matter of fact), the plants were in full flower by the middle of December and kept in fine condition till the middle of January, after which time the flowers began to drop off. If forced to any extent the flowers might possibly drop sooner, which would militate against it as a Christmas pot plant; but properly handled and grown in a normal temperature, it will make a far better keeping plant, at least, than the Lorraine begonia. If it were only pink or red it would soon sweep the decks as a Christmas plant, in my opinion. But we do not wish to be always measuring flowers by the yardstick of the mighty dollar and, as a in the garden and lift them early in September, as I would chrysanthemums, and I have no doubt they will grow away with hardly a check, for the plant makes a mass of fibrous roots, and should lift easily.

In conclusion, I would say that there are few plants that will make the showing with a minimum of care that the moschosma will, and I see no reason why it should not give satisfaction and pleasure to a large majority of flower and plant lovers. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

GETTING TOGETHER HELPS.Conference of Shippers and Carriers.

The program committee of the Florists' Club of Springfield, O., arranged for a somewhat novel, interesting and practical conference at the March meeting.

The city is particularly fortunate in that it enjoys the advantages and keen competition of five leading express companies, which maintain offices here, each one of which is alert for business, and the agents and employees are uniformly accommodating and courteous, always on the lookout for as large a share of plant shipments as possible, the plant trade standing first in importance with them in volume of business.

The companies were severally represented by their local agents as follows: H. E. McOwen, Adams; Walter Warner, American; E. C. Edmondson, Pacific; M. E. Tyler, United States; L. H. Whitehead, Wells Fargo. Mr. Whitehead, a veteran in the service to the extent of filling the description implied by his name, but just as active as any of the younger agents, might be termed the dean of the group, and was delegated to act as spokesman and quite capably performed this duty.

A careful explanation was made as to the application to plant shipments of special discounts under "General Special" and "Scale N" of the express tariffs, varying from twenty to thirty per cent off regular merchandise rates. Under the provisions of the interstate commerce law, the shipper is held equally responsible with the carrier as to correctness of weights, it being a misdemeanor to report a shipment at anything less than actual correct weight.

A pasted label for baskets and pasteboard boxes was recommended, rather than a tag attached by means of a string, which frequently gets torn off. For wooden boxes a tag or card tacked on the end and marked in full with waterproof crayon on the top is considered the surest method.

A slip inside each package showing address of consignee is held to be a splendid safeguard in case of the entire loss or obliteration of all outside marks through accident, exposure, wreck or fire, as this inside mark may frequently be the means of enabling the carrier to make delivery to proper consignee, whereas the time otherwise necessary for tracing back to shipping point, even though this might be possible from any information at hand, would frequently be sufficient to allow the stock to perish.

The retail catalogue florists present were inclined to think that the special discounts should apply to baskets as well as boxes, but the agents explained that the liability to damage in handling is much greater when packed in baskets than in boxes.

The question of overcharges was in April and was one of a dozen raised with no particular care or culture beyond such as was given to a batch of chrysanthemums in pots, growing alongside of it. Later stock, rooted even up to August, flowered with equal freedom in 3-inch to 4-inch pots.

The flowers individually are tiny, but they are produced in such extraordinary profusion that the plant looks like a beautiful picture, I do not think I ever saw anything that pleased me more than this batch of moschosma when in full flower.

There are hundreds of small conservatories where flowers in midwinter are highly prized that would be greatly beautified by the addition of one or two plants of this easily grown subject. This year I propose to plant a quantity out quite freely discussed, this evil occurring chiefly with agents at country stations who seldom receive plant shipments and either do not know or care about the special discounts, or are paid on a commission basis and naturally are interested in collecting as full an amount of charges as possible. The shippers are desirous of having some plan adopted whereby each shipment may carry marks showing weight and correct amount of charges to be paid by consignee on arrival at destination, and to this end a committee consisting of Roy McGregor, of The McGregor Bros. Co., and Leman Bradford, of The Springfield Floral Co., was appointed to confer with the express agents and endeavor to formulate a plan for the use of the members of the club. While some of the shippers are accustomed to notify each and every customer by means of a postal-card of having made a shipment and stating the amount of charges to be paid, others thought this an unnecessary waste of labor and postage and that the express companies should devise such safeguards against overcharges as to render such a notice unnecessary. The agents present expressed a willingness to take up the matter with their respective companies, only one of the offices having authority in the matter at the present time. It was stated, however, that the extra work involved would probably necessitate the employment of an extra man in each office in order to properly mark each shipment, the calling and billing now being done in a very rapid manner during the busy portion of each day.

As a return favor, the agents inquired as to the possibility of the express companies carrying a considerably larger portion of the 10-cent, 15-cent and 25-cent packages which are being sent quite generally by mail, the argument being advanced that they give a receipt for each shipment, which Uncle Sam does not do, and carry it just as quickly and more safely for 2 cents less on the average shipment under four pounds weight. The larger shippers practically stated that the express companies were welcome to help themselves to whatever they might find in their mailing rooms which could be carried to advantage.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the agents for their presence and free discussion of the various subjects touched upon, and the joint conference was conceded to have been decidedly beneficial to all concerned. GE DALE.

CHURCH DECORATIONS.

The accompanying illustration shows a typical Easter church decoration of the better class, such a decoration as many florists are called upon to put up in more or less elaborate form every year in one or more houses of worship for the Sabbath morning when all nature dons its spring attire. The illustration is prepared from a photograph made by the George Wittbold Co. Easter morning, 1906, and now used as a means of securing orders for similar work for the approaching Easter. It gives not only an idea of how they treated the auditorium, which is such a one as is not easily decorated, but it suggests the thought that any florist who has facilities to spare for outside work at Easter can easily get this kind of orders by suggesting the subject in good season to the church people of his neighborhood. It also brings to mind the remark of a certain wholesaler who was arguing that the price of lilies should not be greatly advanced this year simply because Easter is early and some growers will not have their stock ready. Said he: "The bulk of the lilies are used for church decorations, and church people are not those with the most money, or the freest spenders. Put your prices too high and you shut off the buying and use of lilies." The usual retail price of lilies, 25 cents per bud, is about all that can be expected if any quantity are to be sold, and in large decorations it is often necessary to shade this considerably. But the decorator should always make a profit on the stock he uses, on his time and facilities and have something left to compensate him for his special abilities in the line of artistic work.

GROFF'S HYBRID GLADIOLI.

In Mr. Childs' comment on my remarks before the American Breeders' Association he goes on to say that if perchance one should happen to find a good color among my hybrids, the same color could be found among Lemoine's hybrids. I passed this over in my reply, but who ever heard that any originator had a monopoly of color when all have access to the original species, the source of all existing colors and combinations of color?

Mr. Childs seems to have forgotten that my early hybrids were awarded the prize at New York in 1900 by the Society of American Florists over his combined sections of Lemoine, Childs and Gandavensis. Surely such a competent jury found some other quality than color against the exhibit of the world's largest grower, at home.

In 1901 the Pan-American exposition gave my hybrids a gold medal over competition well known to Mr. Childs. Their judges, too, chanced to discover the good colors—and something else.

M. Philippe de Vilmoren, of Vilmoren, Audrieux & Co., Paris, France, one of the best informed men in the world, whose firm is an extensive handler of Lemoine and other high-class French hybrids, came repeatedly to the exhibits of my hybrids at the Pan-American exposition and St. Louis world's fair. I also met him by invitation at the French pavilion at the latter exposition. He there repeated his remarks on my purpureo-auratus hybrids, better known as the Lemoine section, and said: "Mr. Groff, I am specially interested in your improvement on the Lemoine type, the great number of new varieties, the high quality and beauty of the colors, but above all the strong spikes of handsome, wide-open flowers as compared with the usual cowed types of that section." H. H. GROFF.

SWEET PEAS.

It is important for the successful cultivation of sweet peas that the seed be sown as early as possible. As it is well known that sweet peas are fond of good food and drink, the best time to lay in a stock of both for them is before the seed is put in the ground. And the way of doing that in the most satisfactory manner I have found to be to dig a trench, at least eighteen inches in depth, filling it in afterward with well-rotted manure and soil in equal parts, with the addition of a sprinkling of bone meal, to within about four inches of the grade, whereon I sow the seed.

Treated in that manner and cared for throughout a prolonged season of flowering, I sold $150 worth of flowers from four rows, each twenty-five feet long, selling the flowers at 40 cents per hundred.

When the peas are well up above the ground, a little soil may be drawn up to them and the process repeated at intervals as growth proceeds. The supporting brush should be put down before the plants show signs of falling over; in fact, the sooner after they are up they are brushed the better.

The rows of sweet peas should be at least four feet apart, and six inches more will do no harm. Keep the soil, between the rows and right up to the plants, well worked continually and never allow weeds to get a hold, chickweed in particular, because once it gets a hold it is hard to make it let go. If the season is very dry it will pay to apply good drenchings of water to the soil and this is doubly beneficial if some fertilizer is previously applied to be washed in by the water.

Keep cutting all the flowers as they appear and expand. R. R.

time of cutting will not hold the blooms up when fully developed and must be supported. To shove them down into deep vases will crowd the blooms too much, so we have invented a wire contrivance which has served us well. Make a wire ring that will fit into the inside of your vase; then make another ring about eighteen inches across. Run three wires about eighteen inches long from the one to the other. Set this support into the vase and the blooms inside of it. You can make the upper ring larger or smaller to suit your case and the upright wires the same, but we find that a ring the size mentioned will encompass about 150 blooms without crowding them. Your vase can be quite shallow if you use heavy wire and, in fact, we prefer to use vases or buckets which are not over twelve inches deep, as it allows the air to pass between the stems and among the blooms.

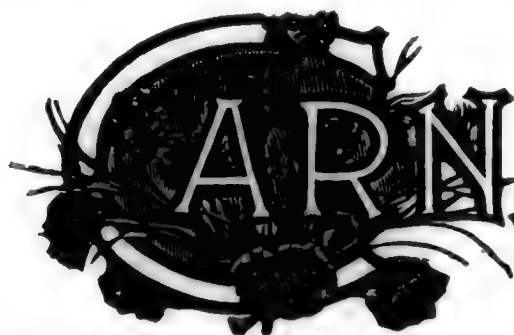

Look the blooms over carefully every time you cut the stems, and if you have any doubt about any of them keeping in first-class condition, get them out and sold while they are yet in good shape. In tying the bunches, wrap the string around the bottom five or six times to hold the bunch; then tie a string loosely around the bunch just below the blooms, to prevent the blooms of one bunch getting mixed with those of other bunches. This will save many broken stems when taking them out of the vases to pack up.

A. F. J. BAUR.

A MILLION CUTTINGS.

The illustration on page 1351 will perhaps give some idea of the immense proportions to which the rooted cutting business has attained with western growers. The photograph was made at the establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet, Ill., and shows the propagating house 30x150 feet filled with its third batch of cuttings. There are 300,000 cuttings in the sand and it is the third time this season the house has been full of stock. A. T. Pyfer, manager of the establishment, states that they have in all propagated over a million cuttings this season.

Most of the cuttings in the house at present are Aristocrat and White Perfection, the latter variety being in their estimation only second to their season's novelty. They say Aristocrat has been a wonderful producer with them all season, that the crop has been remarkably

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Storing Easter Stock.

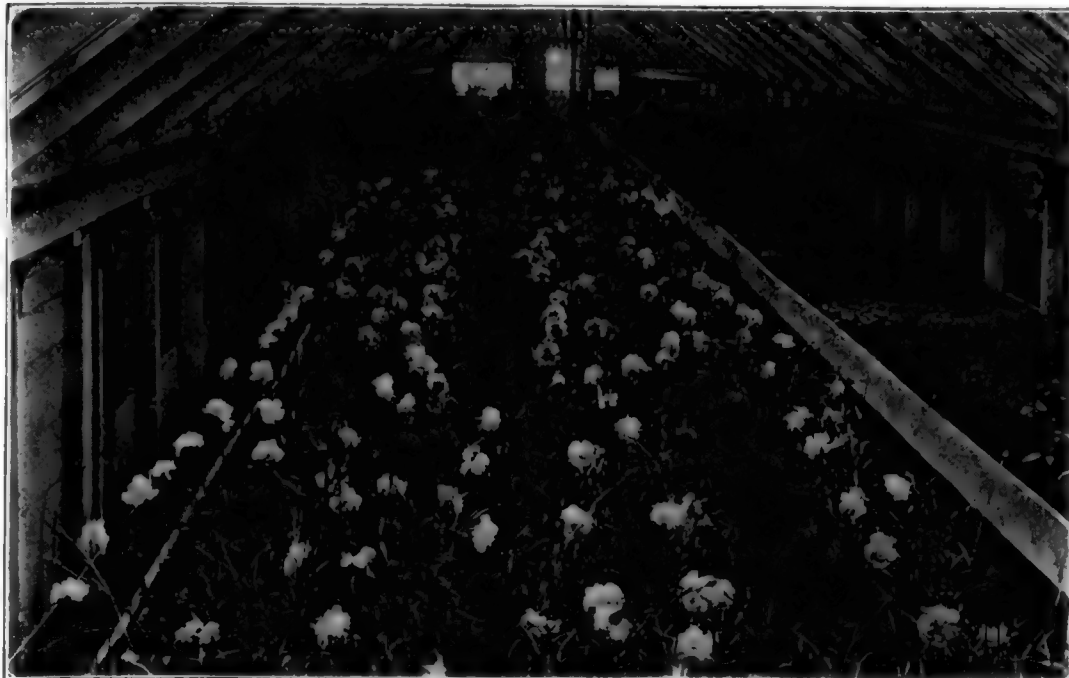

It ought not to be necessary to say a word about pickling stock, but every year we hear of a few who have made the mistake. To the credit of the craft it can be said, however, that as a rule it is done by inexperienced growers who simply were unable to judge reasonably how long a cut bloom can be kept in a salable condition and how much handling a bloom will stand after being kept a certain length of time. To those I want to say a word about how to handle the cut in order to keep as many blooms as possible in first-class condition.

To begin with, I will say that there is a great deal of difference in varieties and you can keep some of them several days longer than others and keep them better. For instance, Enchantress can not be kept nearly as long as Lawson and when it is fully developed and water-soaked it will not stand much handling without bruising around the edges and becoming unsalable. You need a place which will run about 48 degrees in which to keep the blooms. In this temperature development will go on slowly and the blooms will be better than if kept too cool. It should be about half dark and well ventilated, though not draughty.

A week before Easter cut every bloom that is open, whether you need it or not, so that you will not be tempted to put away a lot of blooms that will be sure to be overdone long before you want to use them. Then cut everything that is far enough along to develop in water. Varieties differ some in that respect, too. Grade them into bunches so that the blooms in each bunch will be just about alike in regard to development. Tie in bunches of twenty-five and put the same number of bunches in each vase. This will save much handling later on, and the less they are handled the better for them. Put a tag on each vase with the date of cutting and when you need blooms during the middle of the week you will have no trouble in finding the oldest ones. Gather the blooms every day, so that all will be in nearly the same state of development, and none will be too far developed to keep well. Cut the stems every second day and don't crowd too many in a vase.

Most varieties we grow these days have strong enough stems to hold them upright for some time, but those that are inclined to be a trifle weak at the steady and the flowers of an even quality. They recently have exhibited some magnificent vases of Aristocrat and say that it has produced good stems all through the winter in spite of the unfavorable weather which prevailed for months. The plants now are full of cuttings and they might largely increase their output of stock had they more room to propagate them.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Rambler Roses.

If you make a point of growing rambler roses it is time to think about securing and potting up stock for use another season. A good many growers pot up field-grown plants in the fall and force them, often with disappointing results. We see far too many of them in the markets with puny heads of flowers and sickly looking foliage. This is not to be wondered at. If you want first-class ramblers to force they must have the pots well filled with roots. Then they will break strong and with judicious feeding and attention to other details, will give you trusses of bloom of which you will be proud.

Now is a good time to secure and pot up a batch of any of the ramblers needed for another season. Pot them firmly in good compost and stand around in any out of the way place until your Easter rush is over; then cut them down to within six inches of the pots and give them a light position on the bench of a house such as you would grow bedding stock in. They will soon break away. Allow not over four or five of the strongest shoots to grow. Tie them up to stakes securely. Grow indoors until the end of June; then plunge outdoors in straight rows, string one or two galvanized wires along the rows and tie them to these. Keep syringed to hold red spider in check. Gradually reduce water supplies towards fall to ripen the wood and you will have canes good to look at.

While Crimson Rambler is a great seller, it is very common and in some markets the pink sorts, like Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Farquhar, are in eager demand. These make much longer shoots than the crimson varieties and, having Wichuraiana blood in them, are more prone to lie prostrate, so will need rather more tying up.

Bedding Geraniums.

While the rush of Easter preparations is on, do not on any account neglect the geraniums. If they are allowed to mat the small pots with roots they will become stunted. Try and find time to shift them into 4-inch pots, using good loam with a little bone meal. Do not mix a lot of manure in the soil; it will produce rank, leafy growth at the expense of flowers. Plants carrying a good truss of bloom sell better than larger and more luxuriant plants devoid of flowers. Give the plants what room you can and just as soon as Easter flowering stock is out of the way give them an additional spreading out.

Acacia Armata.

Acacia armata usually sells well at Easter. Like the rest of the family, it resents forcing into bloom and must be brought on slowly. Better not to have them too fully open, for when the little round flowers are open a few days they turn brown and a very few of these disfigure a plant. To attempt to pick them off will be found a nerve-racking occupation at this increasingly strenuous season. They want an abundance of water, a light, cool, airy house and if nicely opened they will carry well in a pit just clear of freezing, where the atmosphere is dry.

Propagation of Bedding Plants.

The propagating bench should be kept well filled with alternantheras, coleus, ageratums, heliotropes and other bedding plants. They root quickly now and they should be potted off before they become hard and spindling. To ease the overcrowding now so general in our houses we rely on hotbeds for raising many of these plants. A foot of warm horse manure which has been mixed with leaves will give a steady heat for some weeks, providing it has been moist and well trampled upon. The use of frames from now on will materially relieve the crowding in the houses. If you raise cucumber, tomato, egg plant or any other vegetables to sell, the hotbed will be found far superior to the greenhouse.

Shading.

The sun is becoming increasingly powerful and many plants will demand shade, if you have not already given it to them. It is unwise to put on a heavy coat of shade yet. We may have a long spell of dark weather in the next two months, although clear skies ought to be our lot after what we experienced in December and January. Palms and ferns should have shade without delay, if not already given. A thin coating of kerosene and white lead can be laid on with a brush, or sprayed on with a force pump. In the latter case be sure to close the ventilators before applying it.

Easter flowering stock, of course, should be in a cool, shaded and airy house when sufficiently advanced. Cinerarias, gloxinias, begonias and cyclamens, all need shade. To keep the dark blue color in your late frame violets some shade should also be applied. It is also necessary where quantities of young seedlings are being raised. A thin coat only, however, should be given just now.

Seed Sowing.

Successional sowings of asters, ten weeks' stocks and Phlox Drummondii can be made. The following can also be sown: Zinnias, Cobaea scandens (place the seed on edge), nasturtiums for boxes and vases, balsams, Gypsophila paniculata, Pyrethrum Golden Feather, marigolds, maurandia, annual coreopsis, salpiglossis, musa, Lavatera arborea variegata and impatiens. Many small seedlings will be making rapid growth now and time should be found to prick them off in flats before they crowd and spoil one another.

Easter Preparations.

The busiest time of the year is approaching for both growers and retailers. See to it that you have such additional help hired as may be needed. These novices will be unable to wrap up plants and do similar work as your Stake the lilies if they need it. Don't forget to give all a liberal supply of water some time before they are sent to the store, or to your retail customers.

It is difficult to prognosticate weather conditions. Possibly we may have cold, frosty winds, in which case a good deal of wrapping will be necessary. This means considerable additional labor and cost, but must be done if you want plants to reach your customers unharmed.

The decoration of many plants is heavily overdone. Well-grown and flowered plants are little improved by a lot of trimming, but often a rather poorly formed plant can be materially improved by a little judicious "fixing up." Be sure not to use loud decorative trimmings, or any which do not harmonize with the plants you wish to sell.

Do not tell your customers you will deliver the plants and flowers they buy "right away quick" when you have no idea of doing so. Plan, however, to send as near the time you promise them as possible. Punctuality in this respect may mean many dollars in your pockets another season. A satisfied customer is the best advertisement you can have.

Dahlias.

While there still is ample time to start your dahlias and have them bloom well, if you desire to work up a stock of any special varieties they should be started right after Easter. Cuttings taken off when a few inches long will root freely in sand and make even better flowering plants than the big roots themselves. Late planted stock will give fully as fine blooms as the early batches. Keep them trained to a single stem after planting outdoors, or pinch the plants back as far as the first leaves. It will then throw up several shoots, will have a neat branching habit and need no staking.

SEEN AT CLIFTONDALE.

One of the finest floricultural displays in America at present is undoubtgrown between the peas until quite recently. It is a truly magnificent sight to walk between these long avenues of sweet peas smothered with bloom, stems running up to two feet in length. From 7,000 to 10,000 sprays have been picked daily for some time, but Mr. Sim expects to have 60,000 from this house alone for the Easter trade. Another house of similar length but somewhat narrower contains other varieties in almost every imaginable shade of color. Many are A. C. Zvolanek's varieties; others are Mr. Sim's own selections. Beautiful lavender, soft pink and other colors many of these are, but their sale is somewhat limited, as the retail florists seem afraid to handle more than one or two shades. They get into a rut and imagine that their customers don't want novelties, whereas these are just what critical customers most desire.

Single violets are a great specialty here, the whole establishment being planted with them and followed by sweet peas and tomatoes, the sweet peas themselves being followed by cucumbers. We were particularly interested in the new single violet, Boston, which occupies half a house 30x360. The leaves are heavy. The flower stalks are dotted with hairs. The flowers are of excellent form, immense in size, carried on stiff stems and a little paler than Princess of Wales. A bunch of fifty flowers more than equals one of seventy-five Princess of Wales. The habit is quite distinct from Princess. The plant is vigorous and a persistent bloomer. At the time of our visit it was smothered with magnificent flowers. It will be largely grown another season and introduced, we believe, in 1908.

The largest house containing Princess of Wales is of the ridge and furrow type, 63x200. As many as 117,000 flowers were picked from this on March 13 last year and it is fully as good this season. The Easter pick of single violets is expected to be 200,000. A number of frames are planted for a late crop. These were still covered with meadow hay, snow and ice.

Some 30,000 tomatoes were in 3-inch and 4-inch pots to follow the violets. Comet is the only variety grown. A batch of 2,200 plants of an improved selection was noted. In addition 20,000 are grown outdoors, all again being Comet. These were just pricked off in flats and being strong plants when set out yield an early and profitable crop. As usual, everything at Cliftondale was in apple-pie order and it is worthy of a long journey to see how well everything is done.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Exhibition Notes.

The exhibition hall, located, as it was, several feet below the street, made an admirable temperature for the flowers, the weather being murky and warm. The spacious floor was well filled with the most magnificent cut blooms and plants ever seen in Washington, but there was room for more. The entries of roses and of carnations for the local club's prizes were especially fine. F. H. Kramer, of Washington, was probably the most successful exhibitor, receiving about thirty first and second awards on his entries.

Among the most attractive displays were twenty-five plants of rambler roses, shown by M. H. Walsh, of Wood's Hole, Mass., and an exhibit of hydrangeas made by J. W. Dudley & Son, of Parkersburg, W. Va.

Edward S. Schmid exhibited vases, gold fish and aquatic plants.

Among the cut flowers was a vase of fifty Richmond for which W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., received a special prize. They were the admiration of all.

H. Weber & Sons Co. showed a fine lot of the newer carnations. One, a rose-pink Enchantress, was of special merit.

F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y., exhibited Winsor, White Enchantress and other novelties.

Gude Bros. Co., of Washington, had a corner devoted to an old Dutch windmill, the fans of which rotated and were filled with various colors of electric lights.

F. H. Kramer made a fine display of his new Queen Beatrice rose.

A beautiful mantle decoration by Z. D. Blackstone, of Washington, was awarded a first prize.

There were two fine exhibits of ferns and fancy caladiums by the Agricultural Department.

F. Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, was on hand with a model boiler.

Final Awards.

Late staging made it impossible to conclude the judging until Thursday, the day after last week's REVIEW was printed with the awards of Wednesday. The following were announced on Thursday:

Fifty Killarney, Robert Simpson, first, the Dingee & Conard special premium.

American seedling rose, E. G. Hill Co., first, the H. O. May silver cup.

Specimen climbing rose in tub, M. H. Walsh, both first and second.

Six plants in pots, M. H. Walsh, first.

C. S. Briggs, four firsts, amateur classes.

Hybrid Wichuraiana, M. H. Walsh, first, the Pierson silver cup.

The Banquet.

The Washington Florists' Club entertained at a banquet at the Arlington hotel Thursday evening, March 21. The service was late, for the guests did not reach the hotel until 8:30, because of the interest taken in the discussions at the closing session of the Rose Society. Peter Bisset, president of the local club, occupied the chair, while Toastmaster Joseph Freeman introduced the speakers in flowery language. Prof. Charlemagne Koehler's tragic recital of "The Horse Race," an imitation of comic opera and "Lockery Setting a Hen," provoked prolonged applause. Robert Kift sang a comic song, a take-off on the Rose Society, which was received with much hilarity.

The speakers were as follows:

"Washington, the City Beautiful," by Commissioner McFarlane.

"The Department of Agriculture and Its Work for Horticulturists," by Dr. B. T. Galloway.

"Our Country," by Simon Wolf.

"The American Rose Society," by President Robert Simpson.

"Washington Parks, Past and Present," by George E. Brown.

"The Gardener and His Work for the Rose," by Patrick O'Mara.

"Horticulture, Past, Present and Future," by Wm. R. Smith.

"Our Parent Society," by Wm. J. Stewart.

"Our Guests," by Wm. F. Gude.

"The Ladies," by Robert Craig.

Friday afternoon the society was received at the White House by President Roosevelt.

In the bowling contest held at the Rathskeller between Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington teams, the Washingtonians were victorious and received the cup, valued at $50, offered by F. H. Kramer.

TWO DAYS IN WASHINGTON.

The Rose Meeting.

The exhibition of the American Rose Society held in the Light Infantry Armory last week was one of great interest to every rose grower. The feature of the exhibition was the wonderful improvement shown in the production of Richmond. There were a number of vases of fifty or 100 flowers each that surpassed any rose, excepting only American Beauty, that I have ever seen at a show. The flowers were large, perfect and richly colored, the stems extra long and heavy, while the foliage, one of this rose's chief glories, was ideal. The whole Richmond exhibit of several hundred flowers was an inspiration to every grower present. Killarney, too, was in finer form than I have ever seen it. The flowers were large and beautifully colored, reminding one of the Cottage Maid tulips in this respect, but the stems were most extraordinary, for with most eastern growers Killarney comes with rather short stems and here were stems thirty to thirty-six inches long. They were said to be from grafted plants, precluding the possibility of bottom breaks, as in Richmond, and investigation proved they had in some cases been twice disbudded. The rules expressly say that such flowers shall be disqualified. The judges evidently thought differently. I heartily endorse their action.

The general scarcity of American Beauties was evidenced by there being but one vase of fifty flowers.

From a plantsman's standpoint the Wichuraiana hybrids alone were worth going miles to see. Perfect specimens probably three and a half feet high clothed with their hardy foliage down to the tub and covered with clusters of tiny blooms that were a sight. The new roses, especially E. G. Hill's red, were very interesting.

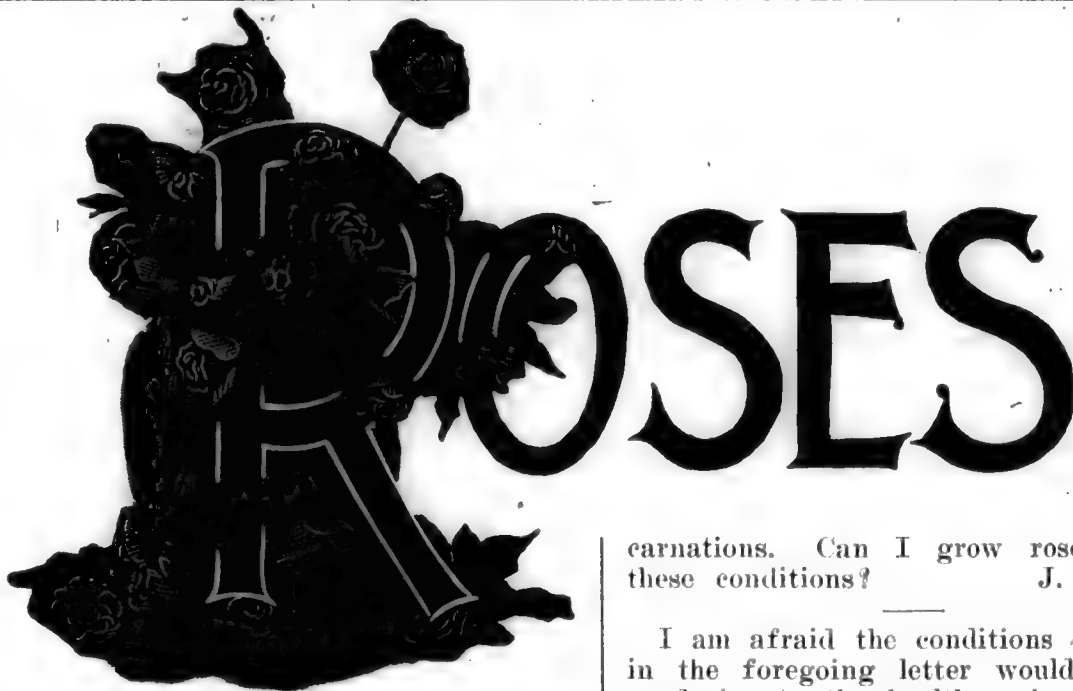

Queen Beatrice.

Thursday morning F. H. Kramer took a large party in an electric bus to see his own place and that of Gude Bros. The two places lie side by side in what was formerly Anacostia, but is now included in the city of Washington. The object of the visit was to see Mr. Kramer's new rose, Queen Beatrice. It is wonderfully strong, producing heavy canes from the base, as thick as your finger. The plants looked clean and healthy and even the lighter stems held the buds erect. The rose cannot be classed with Bridesmaid, the color, which may be described as a rose pink shaded to a light pink, being much deeper, appearing to better advantage, I thought, under the artificial light of the Armory than under natural light. The buds are full and fragrant, but rather flat. Mr. Kramer has a good rose, with many strong points, and some weak ones.

The President's Reception.

It would not have been possible for the Washington florists to please their guests more than they did by arranging for them a reception at the White House. This was shown by the large crowd that gathered at the Armory at half-past two on Thursday afternoon. Almost every florist in Washington was there. The party, led by Messrs. Bisset and Simpson carrying an immense vase of the finest Richmonds, marched up the street into the White House. A short halt to see that there were no outsiders among us and we were ushered into a large reception room and ranged in a semi-circle around a door, the Richmonds in the center, then the ladies and the men around the outside, probably seventy-five in all. It was more like a play than real life. We waited for a few minutes until the hour set, when the door opened and the president appeared. Robert Craig acted as spokesman and after a few words of introduction he presented E. G. Hill, the originator of Richmond. The president and Mr. Hill have a mutual friend in the city of Richmond whom they both esteem. Then the president made a happy little speech. He was much pleased with the handsome roses. He thought them the finest he had ever seen. He was glad to see us in Washington and glad some had brought their better halves. He was glad Richmond was home-grown and not imported. He wanted everything home-grown and with the hope that we would enjoy our stay he said, "Now let's shake hands," which was done with a cordiality that was unmistakable. The president shook hands with everyone, saying a word to each as he or she was presented by name. He said "de-light'ed" to P. J. Lynch. He said "de-light-ed" to Robert H. Pyle. He said "de-light-ed" to every man, whether he hailed from Philadelphia or from Fishkill-on-the-Hudson. You can see the wisdom of avoiding variations. When you have a good word stick to it. Everyone was "de-light-ed." One young man said "That was the proudest moment of my life." Another, "Don't speak to me; I feel two inches taller;" a third, "Better wash your hands and save the water." This savored of orientalism rather than democracy. It was an honor especially appreciated, as the relief measures for Wall street were occupying the president that day.

PREPARING THE SOIL.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the selection, collection and preparation of the soil for planting should be commenced. To have this in a nice, mellow condition, and all the elements thoroughly incorporated, requires considerable time and care and, as we are nearing the time when the early stock will require planting, no time should be lost in getting the soil prepared.

The question of what constitutes a good rose soil is frequently asked and as frequently replied to. The ideal soil seems to be a good fibrous loam, with a slight clay mixture, taken from old pasture land where there is plenty of root fiber. This should be taken to the depth of six or seven inches and put in a pile, adding one-fifth of decomposed cow manure.

The pile should be allowed to lie for, at least, ten days, to allow the gases from the decomposition to thoroughly impregnate, or leaven, the mass. The soil should then be chopped up, but not too fine and allowed to remain for a week or so and then turned over. All these operations should be performed during bright, sunny weather, as there is nothing more calculated to put life into the soil than frequent exposure to sunshine, and the opposite effect will be obtained if these operations are conducted during rainy weather, or when the soil is in a sodden condition.

Additional fertilizers, such as bone meal, wood ashes or lime, can be added when these turnovers are being made, when there will be a certainty that they can be incorporated equally.

These piles should always be placed on ground a little above the general level, so that the drainage may be perfect, and allow no water to accumulate to create sourness, which is a very undesirable condition in rose soil.

RIBES.

TOO COOL FOR ROSES.

I have a bed over some pipes in one of my houses, which is the warmest place in the house. The house has Lawson and Fiancee carnations in it. We have practically no split Lawsons and but few split Fiancees. The house can be kept at about 50 degrees, but on real cold nights, with a wind, it will run down to 45 degrees. However, this does not occur often.

I would like to grow some roses on the above mentioned bed, but I do not begin firing until it is time to fire for carnations. Can I grow roses under these conditions? J. A. F.

I am afraid the conditions described in the foregoing letter would not be conducive to the health and prosperity of any of the varieties of roses at present cultivated under glass, because at a lower temperature than 56 degrees they will not produce blooms in winter and, if firing is deferred until required by carnations, there is every likelihood that the roses would, by that time, be so weak and unhealthy that they would not produce anything at all.

The best thing to do under those conditions is to plant the whole house to those varieties of carnations which do well at a lower temperature than 55 degrees, and buy the rose blooms you may require. You will find it much more profitable to do so.

RIBES.

ROSE RHEA REID.

Rose growers who have had the opportunity of inspecting Rhea Reid, the new rose of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., have all been favorably impressed with it. As no great proportion of the total number of growers have as yet had the opportunity of seeing the rose, the accompanying illustration will be of interest; also the note, which said:

"We are mailing today a photograph of a bud of the Rhea Reid rose, which we think shows its character nicely. It is a variety that throws strong, heavy canes, is quite continuous in bloom, extremely free, opens well in dark weather and seems to have all the qualifications for a first-class red forcing variety. It is a seedling of American Beauty crossed with pollen from one of our own red seedlings."

CLIMBING AND TRAILING ROSES.

[A paper by M. H. Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass., read before the annual convention of the American Rose Society, at Washington, D. C., March 14, 1907.]

The popularity of climbing and trailing roses is increasing yearly as their valuable qualities for garden decoration become known. It was in the year 1893 that Wichuraiana was first introduced into the United States. Shortly after the Crimson Rambler was also brought to this country. The Wichuraiana and Crimson Rambler are the two parent plants from the many varieties of rambling and trailing roses and these may properly be called Wichuraiana and multiflora hybrids, a new race of hardy garden roses.

Their vigor and constitution make them desirable, as they prove hardy in the coldest localities. The freedom of growth, fine foliage, and easy culture place them within reach of the amateur as well as the professional gardener.

They adapt themselves to the varied conditions of soil and climate; of course, the better the soil and more attention received, the finer will be the growth and profusion of flowers. They grow in light, sandy soil with less attention than most any other roses.

Variety of Treatment.

The various ways in which these plants may be grown as decorative plants in the garden are several: They may be trained in pyramid form on posts set in the ground about eight and one-half feet high, or in bush form. They can be grown as windbreaks on a trellis. They also make fine specimens when grown as standards about four feet high. They are being used largely at the present time for pergolas and archways and, when necessary, may be grown as ground roses trailing on the surface. They are admirably suited for covering rocks and stumps of trees.

When used for pergolas, the posts should be set about ten feet apart and eight and one-half feet high. For quick effect three plants to the post will reach the top and partly cover over the first year. Two plants usually are sufficient unless immediate effect is desired.

Effect of New Race.

In 1903 there were few climbing roses which proved satisfactory, Queen of the Prairie and Baltimore Belle being the two varieties mostly called for. While these made rapid growth and gave fine effect they were subject to the attacks of insects and, unless sharply looked after, shed their foliage and became an eyesore. The hybrid Wichuraiana and multiflora are more desirable, being less liable to the attacks of insects, and they produce hundreds of blooms more to the plant than the old varieties of climbing roses.

The effect in the hardy rose garden produced by this new race of roses is marvelous and bewildering, almost beautiful beyond description where fine specimens may be seen in the various colors, single and double flowers. This effect could not be attained until the advent of these roses. They are ornamental when out of flower, as the foliage is distinct and shiny in many of the varieties, some having the appearance of being varnished, as it were. Another most valuable consideration is the second crop of blooms produced by a few of the varieties, in September, continuing until the frost sets in.

To Obtain Best Results.

To obtain the best results when planting ramblers it is well to dig the hole two and one-half feet deep and about three feet wide, enriching the soil with decomposed barnyard manure. Plants five feet long, set out, produce flowers the first season. The young shoots should be tied occasionally as growth requires; this keeps the wind from swaying them about.

Where insects attack these roses a slight dusting of hellebore is usually sufficient to stop their ravages. It is easily applied and no injurious results follow from its use, as is often the case when tobacco water or whale-oil solution is used, as many amateurs have found out to their sorrow.

Varieties.

The earliest variety to bloom is Wedding Bells, semi-double, pink and white flowers; this is a seedling from Crimson

New Rose Rhea Reid.

Rambler. Next to flower is Debutante, soft pink and double; the flowers are borne in large pinnacles. Sweetheart comes next. Carissima then follows. Dorothy Perkins, a beautiful, soft pink, flowers about July 1, as do Wichuraiana, Crimson Rambler, and Lady Gay. Then follow La Flamma, single red; Hiawatha, bright crimson, base of petals white; Minnehaha, large, double, dark rose color; Paradise, single and a most vigorous grower, well adapted for parks and driveways and trellis work. Coquina is a delightful shade of porcelain pink with the base of the petals yellow, flowers from one inch and a quarter to an inch and a half in diameter. Delight is considered by some to be one of the best of recent introductions. Its color is crimson with base of petals white and has dark, shiny foliage.

Jackson Dawson raised valuable and most desirable varieties, such as The Dawson, W. C. Egan, Farquhar and others. W. A. Manda, of South Orange, New Jersey, has furnished such grand varieties as Manda's Triumph and Favorite; and others have added many valuable ones to the list. So we have a good list of varieties in wide range of color. It is a matter of choice as to color. In planting, however, varieties should be selected which harmonize and not clash with each other, for at this time the effect from an artistic point of view adds much to the beauty of the garden.

Pruning.

A few varieties bloom quite freely in September by pruning. Cut back the shoots which have flowered in the early summer to within two inches of the main shoot and shorten the long shoots a few inches. Hiawatha, Debutante and Delight treated in this way will produce a nice lot of blooms.

When the shoots are too crowded, cut out the old ones, leaving shoots of the previous season's growth to produce the blooms. The number can best be determined by the space it is desired to cover and the vigor of the variety.

This class of roses, owing to the hardiness and their adapting themselves to varying conditions of soil and climate, commend themselves to the consideration of the amateur.

New and meritorious varieties in white, porcelain pink and yellow are expected and will shortly be ready for distribution. It is possible we may see perpetual blooming ramblers as free as the hybrid tea or monthly rose. Then, indeed, we shall have realized our highest expectations. The American raised hybrids give great satisfaction in Europe and the continent and are marvels of beauty when in bloom, almost baffling description.

EXPRESS RATES.Hearing at Washington.

The Society of American Florists appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington Friday and Saturday of last week, March 15 and 16. Some twenty or twenty-five officers and members of the society were present and evidence was offered by Frank L. Moore, Chatham, N. J.; L. M. Noe and Robert Schultz, Madison, N. J.; Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa.; F. H. Traendly, New York City, and W. J. Stewart, Boston. The evidence was for the purpose of proving rates which were charged prior to and after a date upon which the United States Express Co. arbitrarily raised its charges for handling cut flowers in the vicinity of New York. Two hours and a half were consumed in presenting the evidence. On the following day representatives of the express company presented their side of the case, seeking to show the perishable character of the goods and the high value, combining to render a rate higher than that charged for merchandise justifiable.

Those who attended the session give it as their opinion that the three members of the commission who listened to the evidence were favorably disposed towards the florists. The express company now has fifteen days in which to file a brief and the S. A. F. has ten days to reply, so that no decision may be expected inside of thirty days.

PACKING PLANTS FOR EXPORT.

Every year, as the season for the sale of soft-wooded stuff comes round, says the Horticultural Advertiser (English), we hear grievous complaints as to heavy losses among plants received from abroad and also exported from this country. Many nurserymen say that they have so many complaints and that the business is so unsatisfactory that they now decline foreign trade, unless done upon a cash-with-order basis, with a repudiation of all responsibility.

From our own experience we are convinced that apart from such accidents as being placed too near the boilers, and similar risks of travel, a large proportion of this worry and loss may be avoided by proper care and system. The trouble arises mainly from two causes—immature plants and improper packing.

When we were in this line we had regular customers for new zonals in the States and elsewhere, to whom we sent soft-wooded plants annually with inviolable success; so much so, that some of our customers used to have plants sent to us from other raisers to be dispatched with our own goods. Our first point was to select healthy, forward plants, which were kept without crowding, well exposed to the light until May, when they were placed outside to harden, but in such position that lights could be run over them on a cold night. After a week or two of this treatment the plants assumed a hard, woody appearance at the base and were then ready for dispatch.

In packing, the plants were taken out of the pots and the balls well secured either in paper traveling pots or by tying up in moss; this done, they were placed in a box, one layer on each side, with the tops meeting in the middle. This operation requires a little care to make a firm job, but is not really difficult if one row at a time be placed firmly in position and then secured by fixing a square lath over the shoulder of the balls; the lath being nailed through the box ends. A few ventilating holes for the tops of the plants must not be forgotten. Bore these with a brace and bit before doing anything else, and tack a patch of perforated zinc over each to exclude vermin. The processes described demand time and care, but it pays better to receive a consignment with ninety-five per cent alive and ready to start than a mass of half rotten stuff, even if the packing charges are a little heavier. Also, it goes without saying, that if the buyer who cuts prices down to cost of production expects his plants to be cared for as above described he will probably be grievously disappointed.

THE DEATH ROLL.Charles W. Seeley.

Charles W. Seeley, of Rochester, N.Y., died March 10 at the residence of Edward Hannah, 226 Merriman street. Mr. Seeley was born at Greenwich, Saratoga county, in 1829, and removed to Rochester in 1835 with his parents, two brothers and three sisters. He became associated with the late James Vick on the editorial staff of the Genesee Farmer. In 1844 he established the Union Nurseries. Later he again became associated with James Vick, his brother-in-law, acting as editor of Vick's Quarterly, which was superseded by Vick's Magazine.

Mr. Seeley had quite a reputation as a botanist. Among the things he possessed was a fine collection of ferns. He was also greatly interested in grapes and once owned a fine vineyard at Vine Valley, on Canandaigua lake. He is credited with having originated several varieties of this fruit. He was a landscape artist of some repute. He drew the plans for Rochester's most beautifully planted street, Portsmouth Terrace, which was made after the death of James Vick, twenty-five years ago.

As a writer on horticultural subjects, Mr. Seeley was widely known. Among his productions were "Language of Flowers," "How to Make a Lawn," "Farmer's Handbook" and a popular card game designed to teach botany. He edited "How to Grow Flowers," published in West Grove, Pa. He was a charter member of the Western New York Horticultural Society, which he joined in 1857.

James Draper.

James Draper, who died at Worcester, March 13, was one of the best known of the pioneer market gardeners, nurserymen and all around horticulturists in Massachusetts. He was born in Worcester, August 31, 1842. At the age of 18 years he began doing business as a market gardener and at this was very successful, becoming one of the largest producers in the Worcester section. He grew small fruits on a large scale and finding a heavy demand for stock of the sort he grew, he branched out and established the Bloomingdale Nurseries, issuing his first catalogue in 1867, which was then quite a unique affair. A general variety of nursery stock was grown and the reputation of his nurseries spread all over New England.

The deceased also manufactured cement drain and sewer pipes and was one of the originators and constructors of the Worcester and Shrewsbury railroad. He was an active member of the Worcester Horticultural Society for many years, was one of the originators and first president of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers' Association, trustee of the Massachusetts Horticultural College and held a number of civic appointments at various times. He was also past-master of the Massachusetts State Grange. The interment on March 17 was largely attended, a delegation from the Worcester Horticultural Society being included. W. N. C.

John C. Garden.

John C. Garden, a gardener of Anacostia, D. C., died at his home on Minnesota avenue, March 11, aged 57 years. He came of a family of Scotch florists and was educated as such in the old country, but changed to the vegetable industry after coming to America, though much attention was given to growing bedding plants. Deceased was a son of the late Alexander Garden, and half-brother of Alexander B. Garden, the well-known grower of Washington. J. L. C.

BOSTON.The Market.

Flowers are now shortening up quite perceptibly. Growers are holding back as much stock as possible and as a consequence prices have stiffened somewhat all around. Roses are equal to all demands, but are realizing good prices. Brides continue a little scarce. Beauties are improving, but do not sell so readily as Richmond, which has displaced the older rose to a large extent with many buyers. Killarney is coming extra fine, as is Chatenay and Wellesley. Carnations are making much better prices, whites continuing to sell as well as the colored sorts. Enchantress is still the leading sort on the market. Violets are abundant. Good stock averages 50 cents per hundred, poor grades going lower. Higher prices will prevail in a few days.

Sweet peas are of superlative excellence and more abundant than in June and July. Mont Blanc and Earliest of All continue the leading sorts, few of the other shades being seen. Prices on these have improved. In addition to the general run of narcissi, tulips and hyacinths, which are clearing out better, there are ixias, white and scarlet anemones, tritomas, and other spring bulbous stock seen. Callas and Easter lilies are just enough for demands and higher prices are being asked. Many growers, in spite of the warmer weather, will miss getting many of their lilies in season and indications are that there will be none too many of these to go around. There is a good supply of fine valley. Gardenias also are more plentiful. Catleyas are scarce, a few Trianae and Schröderiana only being seen. Green supplies remain about the same.

Carnations at Ellis.

The new scarlet, Beacon, is the leading attraction at Peter Fisher's this season. Some 20,000 plants are grown and while many plants have been used for cuttings rather than bloom production, it was easy to note that this new scarlet is a wonderfully prolific variety. Color, stem and general habit seem to be ideal. Mr. Fisher's own sales amount to 100,000 and it is evident that Beacon is going to be the dominant scarlet in 1907-8.

Salesroom in the New Store of Welch Bros., Boston.

In seedlings are one or two new sorts which Mr. Fisher thinks may even beat Beacon. In whites, Lady Bountiful was not doing so well as in the previous year. White Lawson was excellent. White Perfection will be more largely planted. Its habit is rather poor, but the flower is of magnificent size and substance and absolutely pure in color at all times. Alma Ward was pleasing, immense flowers of excellent form carried on fine stems. It should displace Prosperity. Evangeline, one of Mr. Fisher's seedlings of a lovely salmon pink color, is found a profitable sort to grow for cut flowers. Enchantress is still grown in quantity and a number of the rose-pink sport will be benched next season. A good batch of Winsor also will be planted. Elsa Struss was not doing especially well. For dark pink, Nelson Fisher is grown and does finely. For variegated Mrs. Patten is grown exclusively. Young stock in pots and flats and the stock in the cutting house were all in fine condition.

Club Meeting.

Carnation night brought out a splendid attendance to the club meeting March 19, 125 being present. There were a good number of exhibits, but these would have been even more numerous but for the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society coming three days later, for which growers were saving their blooms. W. W. Rawson staged exhibits of lettuce and radishes. Wm. Sim had sixteen vases of sweet peas and was awarded a report of superior merit. Peter Fisher received a report of merit for Alma Ward carnation and also showed Beacon and Evangeline. A. Roper was given a report of merit for his carnation, Bay State, and also showed other seedlings. E. B. Beals had several seedlings. H. A. Stevens Co. had a splendid lot of flowers, including several seedlings. Wm. Nicholson received a report of merit for a splendid lot of Afterglow. Elijah Wood had a fine scarlet seedling. F. R. Pierson Co. staged White Enchantress and Winsor. Daniel Iliffe had a revolving iron plant stand on exhibition.

F. E. Palmer read a report from the committee on boiler legislation, speaking of the State House hearing and the work done by the committee. The report was accepted and the committee thanked for its labors. The question of a club banquet came up. The executive committee recommended holding one in April, as was done in 1906. It was voted to do so.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar and W. J. Stewart spoke on S. A. F. matters and the Washington rose show. J. W. Duncan proposed Jackson Dawson for honorary membership.

There was an animated and prolonged discussion on carnation growing. F. E. Palmer preferred indoor culture all summer. M. A. Patten considered the two systems about equal in results. Peter Fisher said indoor culture has proved far superior with him. F. R. Pierson said that he has found indoor culture best in roomy, airy houses. W. J. Stewart and W. N. Craig advocated that more attention be paid to fragrance. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, James Wheeler, H. A. Stevens, A. Roper and D. Finlayson spoke on other phases of carnation growing.

Eight new members were elected. The secretary announced the death of one of the club members, Neil B. Glass, February 26, in the Boston city hospital. President Westwood urged a large attendance March 23 at the field day to W. W. Edgar's, Waverley. The sum of $25 was voted for a special prize to be offered at the chrysanthemum show in November.

Refreshments were served, as usual, and the meeting did not adjourn until quite a late hour.

Various Notes.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club are reminded of the field day at W. W. Edgar's, Waverley, Saturday, March 23, leaving on 1:30 p. m. electrics from Park street station. A cordial invitation is given to non-members to join in the excursion.

The spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which will open on Friday this week, promises to be well up to the average. The near approach of Easter will affect the displays from commercial growers to some extent. A full report will be given in next week's issue.

St. Patrick's day, which was officially observed March 18, caused an active demand for shamrocks. A good many green carnations and roses were also in evidence. It is surprising how people can be led to buy these abominations, but the dyeing process seems to increase each year.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have, as usual, grand lots of lilies, ramblers, spiræas, bulbous stock and other Easter plants of first-class quality.

Tailby & Sons and other growers are bringing in nice Spanish iris which finds a ready sale.

E. Sutermeister, C. J. O'Brien and John J. Fee are handling quantities of fine bulbous stock and will have a splendid lot of cut blooms as well as pots and pans for Easter.

While winter still lingers somewhat in the lap of spring, conditions are a little more congenial. Seed merchants are now doing a heavy counter trade and will be kept on the jump from this time onwards.

A. H. Hews & Co. report pot trade as phenomenally brisk and they are having hard work to keep up with their orders.

PITTSBURG, PA.—H. B. Beatty, treasurer of the S. A. F., has returned from a southern trip.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Easter will be only a week away when this issue reaches the readers in New York. If the delightful spring weather of the first of the present week continues, florists cannot ask for a more helpful temperature. No plant wrapping, no unsatisfactory deliveries. A great Easter for all and the best, let us hope, that floriculture has ever known from one end of the broad land to the other. Every department of the florists' business deserves it. The growers have had a strenuous winter, light supply, continuous cold, tremendous coal bills and now low prices for their products. May Easter put them all back on easy street again.

The retailers feel, more than any other industry in this big city, the panicky conditions in the stock market. Outside of New York it is not easy to realize the immense difference in flower buying which this occasions. Wall street is the New York retail florists' barometer. A rising market and prosperity there mean good buying and optimism in the flower shops of the metropolis. If the president and Lawson will devote themselves to the country's weal and to new carnations, the railroads, the crops and the markets will take care of themselves. Everything will look brighter by March 31. Every good plant is already ordered. Wherever I go I hear the same story and see the evidence of it. Really, I do not believe there will be one perfect plant in any greenhouse within fifty miles remaining unsold four days before the Easter festival begins. To specify the centers of the plant industry here and do each one justice would use up every page of this big number. Of the excellent results achieved by our expert growers the past speaks with no uncertain voice. Shipments from here go to every part of the country. There may be a scarcity of ramblers, for many have failed to bud and bloom, especially the Dorothy Perkins. Prices are about the same as in 1906. The size at $2 is the most popular and brings easily $5 a plant at retail, ribbons and pot covers included.

Lilies have all been booked at 12 cents per bud; very few sold at 10 cents and these only the smaller flowers. From now on the belated buyers will pay 15 cents and I will not be surprised to see the price soar to 20 cents before Good Friday. So much for a movable Easter. In addition to plants of lilies and roses there are lilacs, ericas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas, acacias and azaleas in endless profusion.

I note a year ago the prophecy was fulfilled, as to the two dull weeks before Easter, and it was stated that similar results might be expected in 1907, and here they are. A year ago roses were selling at $10 a thousand and good Beauties were quoted at $2.50 per dozen, Brides and Maids at $5 per hundred. Violets and carnations receded to the lowest of the year and the quality of everything was superb. After all, you see we are ahead of last year and things are not so black as they look. Nothing like comparisons to create contentment, especially if it can be shown that progress is being made and the sun is still shining.

Carnations will be scarce for Easter and prices will advance. This is a free tip, the same as the one I gave on lilies. Roses will be abundant, Beauties especially, and of violets, as of the stars, no man can number them. Beauties fell to $5 a dozen March 18, the best of them. All roses went down, and violets surely touched bottom for the season. Some of the wholesalers closed out as high as 50,000 at a clip; as to what he got for them, I refuse to answer. There have been a lot of "brain storms" of late in the wholesale district.

Of bulbous stock there is no end. Like a river wide and deep, the tide flows in. There is a great abundance of valley. Orchids, a dozen varieties, are announced at headquarters and many orders from other cities are coming in. Orchid growing is rapidly increasing in this vicinity and yet the demand grows more rapidly.

Various Notes.

The New Yorkers who attended the rose convention have given glowing accounts of their enjoyment and its success. Messrs. Traendly, Guttman, O'Mara, Sheridan, Langjahr, Coddington, Sawyer, Moore, Bagley, Schultz and Manda represented the metropolis. The call upon the President, the interview with the interstate commerce committee and the banquet were the pleasantest memories.

Among the distinguished visitors in the city last week were Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit, and Peter Crowe, of Utica. As usual, Harry Bunyard guided them through the intricacies of "the great white way."

George Powell lectures at the American Institute, this week Wednesday, on "The Culture of Small Fruits, How to Start and Manage Strawberries, Raspberries, Blackberries and Currants." Next week Wednesday Henry Siebrecht, Sr., will give an illustrated lecture on "Easter Plants and Home Decoration."

Traendly & Schenck's lieutenant is very ill with pleurisy.

U. G. Scollay, of Brooklyn, who endured an operation for appendicitis some weeks ago, is slowly recovering.

There is a fine new five-story building about completed at Jacobs & Son's, on Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, where everything in greenhouse material will have abundant room and convenience. This firm reports a great increase during the last year in every department of the industry.

F. R. Pierson, former vice-president of the Rose Society, was so enthralled by Winsor and its requirements that he was obliged to cut out the rose convention. So much for the new carnation that the Beauty king has added to his harem.

The auctions are on at Elliott's twice a week and prices are declared satisfactory. Importations are arriving daily. So far there is no opposition. There is some talk of an auction mart uptown, near the wholesale district, also a plant market. The latter is one of the "Lily King's" ambitions and he has a good place for the venture, at 1 West Twenty-eighth street.

Anton Schultheis intends tearing down half a dozen of his smaller houses this summer and building three fine, modern ones in their places. His valley, gardenias and bulbous stock are handled by Jos. S. Fenrich.

Charles Fraser, of Richmond Hill, has sold his business to Charles Wiese, who has been for nine years in the bulb and seed department of J. M. Thorburn &

Co. Mr. Fraser will give his attention to landscape architecture and civil engineering.

David D. Howells is now in charge of the flower and plant department at the Knickerbocker hotel, one of the finest hostelrys in the world. A splendid roof-garden is to be added this spring and Hiram T. Jones, of Elizabeth, has been fortunate in securing the contract for its construction.

S. Masur, Brooklyn, will remove on May 1 to larger quarters, next door to his present store, and will fit it up to compare with any of the flower stores of the City of Churches. Mr. Masur last week had some very handsome designs for the Trowbridge funeral, aggregating close to four figures.

It is reported that one of the large wholesale cut flower houses of Brooklyn has decided to eliminate that department altogether and devote its entire space and energies to the florists' supply business, for which Brooklyn and Long Island provide an unlimited and rapidly increasing field.

W. H. Kuebler finds his big store already limited in room for his growing business, which he says has more than doubled since Easter, 1906. Brooklyn is loyal to its own.

St. Patrick's day was celebrated by many of the florists with artistically decorated windows in green, with ribbons, flags and harps much in evidence. J. J. Foley, on the Bowery, especially threw himself. Mr. Foley is a native son of the Emerald Isle and 1863 is the year of his birth. He is a graduate of Alex McConnell's. His business is an extensive one and he has ambitions towards the swell uptown section. Mr. Foley has a handsome home in Madison, with horses, autos and all the modern accompaniments of persistent devotion to duty.

Alex McConnell will enjoy his first Easter this year in his new store, in the Arcade. Two vacant stores in the same building will give him all needed room and he has every reason to expect his greatest sales volume.

Wm. H. Donohoe has added an extra store for Easter to his conveniences, on Twenty-ninth street, close to Broadway. His progress has been continuous during the year and he is ready for the anticipated increase in Easter orders in the city and out of it.

For extent and showiness of window decoration and extensive conveniences no firm enjoys greater opportunities than David Clarke's Sons, at 2139 Broadway, close to Seventy-second street. This firm has a venerable record. Fifty-eight Easters have come and gone since the house was established.

Jos. Leikens wears the same smile he sported a year ago, only a little broader, and no wonder, when his Belmont hotel and Newport branches are considered and the nearness of his departure for millionairess realized. The Newport season begins with him early in April.

If anything on Broadway will stop the promenaders and take away general attention from the Easter bonnets, it will be A. Warendorff's windows. They are always artistic, novel, entrancing and never so striking as at Easter time. Mr. Warendorff has been very close to the border since Easter, 1906, but now looks good for another half century.

Young & Nugent's windows, on West Twenty-eighth street, with unique lighting and daily changes of arrangement, are always a credit to the artist whose ability and culinary surprises stamp him as an expert in both departments of public service. Mr. Nugent had a big decoration at Delmonico's on Monday.

Robert G. Wilson still holds the fort as the bon ton florist of Brooklyn. His Fulton street store is a dream in white bark decoration, his conservatory an added beauty and his big range of glass and branch store on Greene avenue an added asset of permanent value since Easter, 1906.

Thos. Young, Jr., still maintains his three elegant retail stores, on Fifth and Sixth avenues and West Twenty-eighth street, and makes a success of every one of them. No man can be in three places at the same time, but Mr. Young comes as near accomplishing it as any man in the business.

Myer, on Madison avenue, is rapidly building up a fine clientele. His windows are always attractive. The year has been one of uniform prosperity.

Bonnot & Blake have had a busy year in their new store, on Livingston street, Brooklyn, so much so they are already complaining of lack of room. They have many Jersey and Long Island growers and handle splendid stock that appeals to the best of the Brooklyn retail trade.

Harry Crawbuck still holds the stage as the only green goods man in Brooklyn. He has built up a permanent business. At his home, in Chatham, he is adding a nursery to his enterprises. He says Brooklyn can use all his importations of galax and wild smilax.

Messrs. Weir, Phillips and Mallon still stand in the front rank of their profession in the City of Churches, where several hundred florists live and prosper. Probably no city in the world can total as large a number of retail florists as this great home center, this place where most of New York sleeps.

Arthur T. Boddington has completed another record year. Every year is getting to be a record year with the "busy bees." H. A. Bunyard is back from a splendid trip.

F. W. O. Schmitz is another importer whose year at Prince Bay, on Staten Island, has been phenomenal. He thinks the future promises a hundred fold greater results for floriculture and that the business is only in its swaddling clothes.

The Rose Hill Nurseries are rounding out, at New Rochelle, their fortieth year, H. Siebrecht, Sr., having commenced his career in this city in 1867. To look at him you would declare he hadn't been over forty years on earth, so well has he braved the vicissitudes of all these eventful times.

Thorburn & Co. are now perfectly established in their headquarters on Barclay, the street of bulb importers and center of the industry in New York. All the great seed houses of the metropolis are within a stone's throw and close to the great terminals that will make this section the busiest spot ultimately on Manhattan island when the tunnels are complete.

Weeber & Don are only a block away on Chambers street, and Rolker & Sons and the Yokohama Nursery Co. are close at hand. Uptown Bridgeman's and the Rickards Bros. and Arthur Boddington do their share to cater to the people "higher up," and all of them have no cause for complaint.

Bobbink & Atkins have had a phenomenal sale of azaleas for Easter. Their greenhouses are filled with lilies, also, and choice palms and ferns, and they are so near the city that personal selection can be made with ease and visitors are always numerous.

Victory, grown by Chas. Weber at Lynbrook, is just as popular and in as great demand as ever, Mr. Weber says, while at A. J. Guttman's wholesale house the cut blooms command the highest price for scarlets and give the same general satisfaction as when first introduced.

The Market.

The general volume of business last week was large and the total amount of sales footed up well, but when one considered the large quantity of flowers handled the average price was not so good. The bright, warm weather we have been having is making itself felt and the cuts of all the growers who send their produce to this city have increased a great deal. The prospect of a glut on both roses and carnations by the middle of the present week is good and prices are likely to reach rock bottom.

With the tide of blooms coming this week it would seem that there is occasion to feel a little uneasy as to what is in store for us at Easter. A number of growers have already reported that there will be a scarcity at that time, and it would appear from the present indications that they are correct in their surmise. It is a great pity that we had to get in this great cut of flowers at this time. If they could only have held off for just two weeks more, what a great feast it would have been. With flowers scarce it will mean higher prices and many orders filled only in part. Even lilies will be scarce and the price will rule higher than last year. Bulbous stock should be plentiful enough to take care of the demand. This is the time of all times for the bulbous flowers and they will never be in better demand than this year. Orders for Easter delivery are coming in fast.

Storm and Flood.

Wednesday evening, March 13, this city was visited by one of the heaviest storms in its history. The rain fell in torrents and was followed by a severe hail storm. The rain has caused another flood in the Ohio river and the water reached a height of almost sixty-two feet. The hail was heaviest on College hill, where there are several florists' establishments, and a great deal of glass was broken. Among those who have reported losses are the following: Walter Gray, Harry Corbett, George Corbett, Max Rudolph and Geo. Magrie, the latter's houses being vacant and for rent at the time. The loss to each was about the same, being in the neighborhood of fourteen boxes of glass each. As the weather was warm, little damage was done to the stock.

During the heavy rain the drain-pipes in the boiler-pits of the Hyde Park establishment of George & Allan failed to carry off the water and the pits filled up to the depth of about four feet. The warm weather alone saved them from a severe loss.

Mr. Witterstaetter's Place.

A recent visit to Richard Witterstaetter's carnation breeding establishment proved to be one of great interest. Stock was in first-class shape, blooming freely, and the quality up to the usual standard. The older favorites were there in good shape and among the new sorts Aristocrat was fine. Afterglow, which Mr. Witterstaetter intends to put upon the market shortly, I believe will prove to be the best he ever has disseminated.

Among the seedlings are many that show great promise. C. J. OHMER.

WASHINGTON.

The latter half of the Lenten season has not stimulated trade. As a result of the warm weather, flowers are still overabundant and will remain so until Easter sales lessen substantially the supply on hand. The warm, bright days are forcing azaleas, etc., rather too fast.

Saint Patrick's day was a marvel of its class and brought sale for some of the minor novelties, chiefly green carnations and shamrocks.

Some of the retailers are going to Philadelphia this week to select Easter stock and indications so far would seem in favor of that season being satisfactory to florists here. J. L. C.

EASTON, PA.—Arthur L. Raub & Co. will move their store from 17 South Fourth street to a building opposite, now occupied by the Easton Furniture Co.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—J. Papadakos, who has a little shop on Walnut street, although notified five times, persistently refused to vacate the premises. Now, the construction company, which has the contract to build a block on the site, has built a high board fence around the shop, completely isolating the Greek.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Autumn Exhibition Not Postponed.

P. J. Hauswirth, secretary of the Society of American Florists, states that the action reputed to the executive committee in last week's REVIEW was not correct. He states that matters concerning the proposed national flower show at Chicago in the autumn of 1908 stand just where they have stood since the last meeting of the executive committee at Chicago last November. The matter is entirely in the hands of ex-President W. F. Kasting and the committee of fifty. Secretary Hauswirth states that since the Philadelphia meeting a week ago Mr. Kasting has been steadily adding to his guarantee fund until it now exceeds $9,000.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

THE spring demand for Boston ferns will develop a pronounced shortage of good plants.

A FULL report of the rose show at Washington was published in last week's REVIEW.

THE retailers like their Asparagus plumosus, especially the bunched sprays, to be light green instead of dark.

No florist, even if he be a grower with no business relations with the public, should be without a printed letter-head.

THE weight of the white paper used in printing this edition of the REVIEW was 7,460 pounds, or only slightly less than four tons.

SEE that wholesale lists go only to those entitled to them; it is an injustice to those in the trade to fill orders for outsiders at other than retail prices.

JOHN S. SCHLEIDER, Owosso, Mich., has a seedling carnation, pink in color and of good form, which for size outclasses every variety now grown commercially.

THE date of Easter, 1908, is April 19. It does not come on so late a date again until 1916, when it falls on April 23. In 1910 Easter falls on March 27, and in 1913 on March 23.

THE selection of Benjamin Hammond as secretary of the American Rose Society a year ago was a most happy one. His work has been such that his reelection at Washington was a foregone conclusion.

JOHN G. ESLER reports that the first hail losses of the season were reported from College Hill, Ohio, and Shelbyville, Ind. George Corbett, Henry Corbett, Joseph Linfoot and Walter J. Gray are the sufferers at College Hill, and Mrs. E. H. Martin at Shelbyville.

WILLIAM FENIGER, manager of the Youngstown Floral Co., is quoted in Ohio papers as stating that "The green carnation was first grown about five years ago. Luther Burbank, the wizard of horticulture, raised the first green carnation on his ranch at Santa Rosa, Cal. Since then others have tried to grow green carnations, with varying success." Poor Mr. Burbank! "Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, while others have greatness thrust upon them."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has been good in the last seven days, in the sense that a large quantity of stock has been handled. Warm, bright weather has done much to increase the crops and the supplies in all lines have been the heaviest so far this season. White has had the call. Prices on everything but white roses and white carnations have had to be shaded heavily to affect any sort of a clearing. Shipping trade has been excellent, many large orders going out. Local trade also was good last week but this week the principal local buying is by the cheap-sales people.

The Bride has led the rose market. Maid has been accumulating in a way that has afforded wholesalers some concern. Richmond sells fairly well, but of course the quantity on the market is small compared with the quantities of Maid and Bride. The promised increase in the supply of American Beauty is only just beginning to materialize. Killarney is abundant and not making the average prices it did a short time ago. It must be cut right and sold right to retain its value. It opens quickly and then is not wanted. Other roses are grown in such small numbers that the cut does not figure in the market.

Were it not for the near approach of Easter the carnation market would be in a bad way. Last week white was in special demand, but other sorts were abundant and dragging. This week, while white still sells best, it has retrograded to a normal position and all colors are plentiful. Enchantress has no special value because of its abundance. Were it not for the thousand-lot orders it would be impossible to clear the market at any time. Nothing more could be asked as to quality.

There are plenty of violets but not nearly so many as in recent weeks, and growers evidently are holding for Easter. It does not speak for superlative quality at that time.

Bulbous stock of all kinds is abundant. The supply of Easter lilies has multiplied many fold within a week. Those handled now are the ones the growers have forced out too early for Easter. They are not bringing special prices. Callas, too, are in oversupply and more or less are wasted. Tulips are not especially abundant, but equal to all requirements. Daffodils and jonquils are accumulating at all the wholesale houses and the growers are doing nothing to bring on more stock, for the market cannot be cleared at anything like a price which will pay the growers.

Such special items as sweet peas and mignonette are equal to all requirements. Some fancy mignonette is bringing as much as $1.25 a dozen. A few pansies are seen.

There is the usual demand for green goods. All requirements can be supplied if made known the day before. Sometimes the market is bare of an afternoon.

Winterson's Plans.

It has for some time been known in the market that the E. F. Winterson Co. has leased the three stores on the street floor, immediately above its establishment. Mr. Winterson now authorizes the following statement of his plans:

"The E. F. Winterson Co. has taken a long term lease on the stores at 45, 47 and 49 Wabash avenue, directly above its present quarters and where it has been located for a number of years. It is the intention of the firm to use the newly obtained space partly as a florists' supply store and also for the sale of seeds, plants, bulbs, etc., in a retail way. The store is probably the finest on the Chicago market and when occupied will give the Winterson Co. the largest floor space of any like concern on the street. The moving out of the supply business and office from the basement will give the wholesale cut flower department much needed added space. The entire basement being retained, the store proper will be conducted under the name of Winterson's Seed Store, E. F. Winterson Co., proprietor. The present tenants will give possession to the Winterson Co. March 25, one week before Easter. No change will be made in the financial affairs or management of the company."

St. Patrick's.

St. Patrick not only is the patron saint of Ireland, but this season became the patron saint of the white carnation market. As early as March 13 the price of white carnations began to stiffen and it is a conservative statement that in the four days preceding March 17 the market value of all white carnations was increased one-third by the call for stock which would take the green dye. The price advanced to $3 to $4 for all varieties and $5 per hundred for special fancies. The demand for the coloring liquid proved far beyond expectations and it was hard to find Friday afternoon.

That the growers and wholesalers profited does not signify that the retailers got much more than an advertisement for their share. Quite a number say the green flowers did not sell to the public as they had expected, although thousands of people stopped to look at them as shown in the windows. Nevertheless, large numbers were used one way or another.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting March 14 was not so largely attended as the February meeting but proved to be one of the most interesting of the year. The speaker of the evening failing to appear, President Bruns demonstrated his special fitness for the chair by drawing out a discussion that beat anything the club has listened to for a long time.

Andrew McAdams said that he found disease in this year's lilies about as usual but that the extra forcing he had used to get his in had caused many to come blind, or with fewer flowers per bulb than usual. He said he had visited Sam Pearce's, Wittbold's and Frank Oechslein's and found the same state of affairs, also as much as thirty to forty per cent of disease in some lots.

P. C. Schupp said his observations verified Mr. McAdams' report of less flowers than usual; the range is two to four this year instead of three to six.

E. C. Amling said he thought his growers must have been especially fortunate in their bulbs, for they have much less disease than usual and for each 1,000 bulbs bought will market more flowers than last year. Asked about prices, he said that around Chicago lilies will be ready in time and in as large supply as ever but that through the country it is different, so that prices on good stock, now $15 per hundred, may go higher on later orders. He said that if one would be satisfied with lilies on stems eight to fifteen inches long, they can be had at from $6 to $12. E. F. Winterson confirmed this and said there will be lots of short lilies but thinks they will sell after the first-class stock is all booked.

The opinion was that roses will be in good supply but carnations rather off crop. J. F. Klimmer said he had observed that the heaviest crop of the year always comes between April 15 and April 25, and predicted it will be so this year. But the Easter carnations will be fine.

The retailers said they look for an especially heavy sale on plants this year. Mr. Amling asked if it is not a fact that pleasant weather the days before any holiday tends to help the sale of plants, while bad weather helps cut flowers. Mr. McAdams said he couldn't support that, but had found cold weather does not hurt his telephone trade, but helps it, and he at all times gets two-thirds of his business over the 'phone.

John Degnan brought up the subject of the green carnation and it was well spoken of by all as a profit maker for the trade.

J. T. Helbok, A. C. Benson, Van Zimmerman and T. E. Waters were elected to membership.

The club members were all invited to attend the informal dance of the employees of C. A. Samuelson at the Unity Club April 6.

Watch the Temperature.

The up-to-date theory of growing is to give all the air possible, all the time, but maintaining the proper growing temperature. It takes a little more coal, but the expenditure pays good returns.

Following this policy, at the plant of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. there are four good growers who are called "temperature men." All they have to do at night is to walk from house to house comparing the readings of the thermometers with the temperatures posted beside them for their guidance. There are few nights when they do not keep at least a crack of air on.

Various Notes.

The wholesalers say orders for lilies for Easter are heavy for this early date but that buyers seem to have little anxiety as to anything else. The present warm weather is not liked. It is feared it will rush stock in and cut down supplies at Easter.

H. F. Halle has completed arrangements for opening a store on the north side May 1, at the northeast corner of Sheridan drive and Clarendon avenue. This is directly opposite the Albert Fuchs store that Mr. Halle would have taken had not the terms of Henry Koropp's lease prevented Mr. Fuchs from letting for flower store purposes. Mr. Halle will continue his west side store as heretofore.

C. L. Washburn says that Bassett & Washburn will have many more lilies than they had expected to be ready for Easter. He says that the lilies have come along very fast in the last few days. They have some short ones, like all growers, and are selling these in pots.

run of orders for large designs last week. Nearly every day brought its order for something out of the ordinary. One day he made a horseshoe standing six feet high of Richmond roses, for the opening of Streeter's new shoe store. It was sent as a good luck emblem by a wholesale shoe house. Another day he made a cross seven feet high and the next day a star six feet across. Friday he had an order for a double spray six feet long of the best white roses, the two sprays being joined with a tie of violets, imitating a big bow, and used as a casket cover.

J. F. Kidwell & Bro. report that a large proportion of their lilies will miss Easter.

J. E. Jensen carries his left hand in a bandage. He says a dog mistook it for a beefsteak.

The west park commissioners have awarded the contract for the new conservatory at Garfield park to C. E. Carson & Co., a firm of general contractors with offices at 109 La Salle street. Lord & Burnham Co. and Hitchings & Co. were the only horticultural builders to put in bids; there were a number from local general contractors.

N. J. Wietor, who has been at Columbus, Dayton, Springfield and Cleveland for a week or more, reports that everyone he met was prosperous and looking forward to the biggest Easter on record. Wietor's Beauty crop is large.

Leonard Kill says Alderman Peter Reinberg is taking more interest in the Easter crops than he has at any time since Carter Harrison inveigled him into politics. The reason is that Mayor Dunne, who seeks reelection, made speeches for Mr. Reinberg's opponent when Mr. Reinberg was himself a candidate for reelection a year ago. Being too good a democrat to work for Busse, Mr. Reinberg has time to take note that business is good at the store and rose crops heavy.

Philip J. Foley has been elected president of the Millmen's Association, a trade organization of the firms engaged in turning out mill work.

L. Coatsworth is busy these days studying the catalogues of the motorboat makers. He says an automobile is all right for some people, but he prefers to do his speeding where the telegraph poles are not so thick.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he thinks all stock will be plentiful for Easter with the possible exception of carnations.

John Ebert will plant all his place in mums for fall and is busy propagating for an early start.

E. T. Wanzer, at Wheaton, sends the A. L. Randall Co. some fine carnations. He has had exceptionally good results with Victory and will plant more of it next season. He says it looks to him as though Enchantress might be considerably overdone next year and he thinks of cutting down on it.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weber lost their baby March 17. The child was three months old.

Will Kyle, of the Deamud Co., was at home all last week, ill with the grip, and has not yet got the ache fully out of his bones.

Joseph Foerster, of George Reinburg's, says that he has no fault to find with business during Lent. It has held up better than usual, and their heavy crop is just coming on.

The George Wittbold Co. will not have as many lilies this Easter as last, but will have no trouble getting most of them in; in fact, one lot is so far advanced that they are holding back strong. They will have a splendid lot of Rambler roses.

Philip Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says he thinks they may count themselves fortunate in the timing of their crops all season. He says their heaviest cut will be over before the anticipated glut following Easter.

E. H. Hunt has a fine lot of lilies coming daily from "Big Pete" Sroczyrski, who is said to have 20,000 geraniums and much other spring stock ready to move up into the space the day after Easter.

The city has not yet come to a settlement with the Rogers Park Water Co., but is operating the plant and the growers on "the ridge" are getting better service and cheaper rates.

C. W. McKellar includes valley in the list of stock which is not selling as well as it should. He says orchids will be abundant for Easter and the weddings which will follow.

As usual, Vaughan & Sperry will have quite a few Easter plants to dispose of for their grower at Grand Rapids.

Arnold Schaffhauser, formerly with Wietor Bros. and later foreman for Adam Zender, is taking a vacation before taking hold of a new job.

Current Comment.

Business during the last week has been good, everything being cleaned up. A rushing business was done in green carnations, not only the Irish but everyone buying. It's not so bad a trade as some writers would have us think; it helps pay the rent.

All the retailers are in good shape for Easter and are looking forward to a record trade.

Bertermann Bros. expect to add to their Cumberland range this summer. John Bertermann says it doesn't pay to have boilers sitting round doing nothing.

The chances for Easter lilies are excellent. Most of the growers will get theirs in just right; and there will be plenty of spiræas, with bulb stuff of all kinds in abundance. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The expected glut has not yet made its appearance at the wholesale houses, although there is plenty of stock in all lines. The retailers are buying heavily these days, which goes to show that Lent has not been noticeable with them. There have been a number of large weddings this month, plenty of funeral work and many dinner parties. The good demand for cut flowers in the downtown district also is noticeable.

Roses are fine and should continue so right up to Easter. J. F. Ammann's and F. C. Weber's stock is fine. Monday morning some extra Ivory, Richmond, Killarney, Bride and Maid were seen from these places. Extra long Beauties are somewhat scarce; shorts, plentiful.

Violets are not abundant. Bulb stock is coming in fine. This will be most plentiful for Easter. Carnations are plentiful, but they seem to clean up almost every day. Stock is of the best and all varieties are selling well.

Wild smilax is having a good call, so are all other greens.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting, which was held March 14 in the Burlington building, was not well attended, as most of the local growers are busy at home looking after their Easter stock. President Irish opened the meeting at 2 o'clock, with the majority of the officers present. After routine work, the flower show committee was discharged with thanks for its good work in trying to raise the big guarantee fund in the face of the great opposition placed in its way. President Irish reported that the Engelman Botanical Club is soon to hold its spring exhibition of wild flowers. The club at once voted to loan them its vases and tables, which it has in storage. The club will no doubt attend this show in a body.

The club decided to hold its annual rose show during the April meeting and voted $50 in prizes. The trustees will have full charge. The prizes are to be competed for by local growers only. Growers of new roses will be appealed to to send their new varieties for exhibition.

The trustees were instructed to arrange some suitable entertainment for the club's twentieth anniversary, June 28. The sum of $100 was set aside for the expenses. Theo. G. Brown, a grower,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business conditions show a decided improvement, the demand for all kinds of flowers being heavier than for some weeks past. The wholesalers agree that Lent has been dull, but now business is quite up to their expectations. The feature of the market is the increase in American Beauty roses, which are now coming to town in fine form from nearly all the growers. Prices are falling, with indications that they will go still lower at Easter.

Carnations have been selling well, especially white; the poorer grades have been bringing better returns than for some time past. This is due partly to funeral work and partly to St. Patrick's day, for which many flowers were dyed, probably more than usual. Most of the dye, by the way, comes from the west. Sweet peas are fine, bringing widely ranging prices, the higher grade being much easier to sell at top figures than are the ordinary flowers at low figures. Valley has been too plentiful and in poor demand. Orchids are in moderate supply, Cœlogyne cristata having reinforced cattleyas and dendrobiums.

Easter lilies are gradually becoming more plentiful, while callas are received in great quantities. Southern daffodils have made their appearance, but do not appear to affect the price of home-grown stock especially. Greens continue in wonderfully active demand.

Easter Prospects.

The indications for the Easter cut flower market are that American Beauty roses will be sufficiently plentiful to meet the demand at reasonable prices. Clever judges say that $6 a dozen will be about the figure for the fancy stock. There is no probability of many flowers that will grade between these and the shorts. Cut lilies promise to be rather scarce, so far as the higher grades are concerned. Indications point to $15 a hundred as the market price for good stock. Tea roses will be fine, with the probability of a slight increase in price. Kaiserins will be in strong supply. There will be a good stock of carnations, and on this flower the price is likely to advance fifty per cent. Violets, double, will be in good supply; $1 to $1.25 will be about the price for choice stock. There will be a fair lot of single violets should the weather continue favorable. Cattleyas will be in fair supply; quality very fine. It is probable that greens will be rather scarce.

The Executive Committee.

The executive committee of the Society of American Florists met in this city, as stated in this column last week. They selected Horticultural hall as the place for the trade exhibit at the society's meeting in August. Broad street theater, which is directly opposite the hall, was chosen for the meetings, while the Hotel Walton, adjoining the theater, offers accommodations for the delegates. David Rust has been selected superintendent of the exhibition.

The executive committee, consisting of Wm. J. Stewart, president; P. J. Hauswirth, secretary; Samuel Murray, Theodore Wirth, W. H. Elliott, Frank Traendly, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, W. F. Tuesday evening the Florists' Club entertained the visitors at a banquet given in the foyer of Horticultural hall. Sixty guests assembled. Among the visitors, besides the executive committee before mentioned, were J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago; E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y.; Peter Crowe, Utica, N. Y.; Thos. Johnson, Providence, R. I.; G. X. Amrhyn, New Haven, Conn.; Felix Mense, Glen Cove, N. Y.; E. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; Harry C. Sim, Riverton, N. J.; Col. Castle and J. L. Congdon, Boston, and Edward A. Flood, Atco, N. J. Samuel S. Pennock presided, and Robert Craig acted as toastmaster. Speeches were made by W. J. Stewart, John Westcott, J. C. Vaughan, P. J. Hauswirth, W. F. Kasting, E. V. Hallock and Robert Kift, and songs were sung by P. J. Lynch, J. F. Hogan and A. L. Campbell. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Kift, who spoke for the horticultural press, made the point that while the other speakers were telling of the benefits various societies gave their members at their conventions, the press had a weekly convention, which was far more beneficial and far reaching in its effects.

Rose Show Gleanings.

Philadelphia captured fifteen prizes at Washington last week, including the Lord & Burnham and Michell cups.

The victory of George Burton, who won the Lord & Burnham cup for the second time, was notable in that Mr. Burton was able to bring fifty fancy blooms at a time of such scarcity.

Edward Towill's success in winning the Michell cup was a popular victory. It took fifty fancy Richmonds to do it.

It was stated that Wm. Kleinheinz was in an automobile accident while seeing the city. Fortunately, nothing more serious than an hour's detention resulted. Mr. Kleinheinz and his friends were then borne back to their hotel by a red devil.

Among the Philadelphians at the show were David Anderson, George Burton, G. E. Campbell, A. B. Cartledge, D. T. Connor, Robert Craig, W. P. Craig, J.

H. Dodds, A. Farenwald, Wm. Graham, Joseph Heacock, Robert Kift, Wm. Kleinheinz, Wm. A. Leonard, F. P. Myers, J. Lidden Pennock, S. S. Pennock, Edward Reid, Martin Samtman, Robert Schoch, Edward Towill, Clarence Upton, G. C. Watson and Israel Resnowsky.

The dinner given by the Washington florists to the members of the Rose Society at the Arlington hotel on Thursday evening was considered by those fortunate enough to be present as the handsomest affair of the kind ever held. The room was elaborately decorated with palms and flowers. Fully 150 guests sat down to dinner, including a number of ladies. There were many speeches and songs, among the latter an original one by Robert Kift, which was especially happy.

On Friday teams representing Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia rolled a series of three games for the inter-city championship. Philadelphia was represented by D. T. Connor, J. H. Dodds, William Graham, Robert Kift and Robert Schoch. I will allow the Washington correspondent to give you full details of this melancholy affair. The second series will be rolled in Philadelphia Thursday, March 21.

Various Notes.

The new officers of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., are: President, Robert Pyle; vice-president and manager, Antoine Wintzer; secretary, Roland C. Satterthwaite; treasurer, S. Morris Jones.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving fine Cattleya Schroederiana and Celogyne cristata. Wild smilax is handled in quantity.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. will have a fine lot of Brunners as an addition to the many choice flowers for Easter.

Edward Reid says that Robert Scott & Son's lilies are extremely well finished; with Ramblers they are king bee.

Eugene Bernheimer is handling some nice Harlowarden carnations.

A. L. Campbell has received his first shipment of Faust lilies. They are very fine.

John McIntyre says that with good weather there will be plenty of choice single violets at Easter.

Smith & Van Aart, of Indianapolis, have purchased the greenhouses of Henry Whalen, at Newtown, Pa. They will change the place from a rose plant to one devoted to greens, carnations and bulbous stock. Both partners are hard workers and should make a success of their enterprise.

M. Rice & Co. have received a new shipment of lace bouquet holders. There were not enough to fill all orders.

Among the visitors in town recently looking over the Easter stock in "the rising eastern market" were Henry Pfister, Washington; Harry Shroyer, Lancaster; Thomas Johnson, Providence; Smith & Feters, Cleveland; Mayberry & Hoover, Washington; M. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, Baltimore; Radcliff & Tanner, Richmond, Va., and Barney Myers, of Lancaster, N. Y.

J. Stern & Co. are getting the last shipment of Easter baskets and Easter novelties in by this week's steamers.

Saturday saw the beginning of the great spring rush in the seed stores. Dreer's, Johnson's, Michell's and Stokes' stores are working overtime to keep up with orders. PHIL.

"TELEPHONE YOUR ORDER EARLY AND AVOID THE RUSH"

This is the substance of a notice that a large New York florist is sending to all his customers. He has several telephones in his store and caters to telephone trade.

If you haven't a telephone, order one now before the Easter rush begins.

It pays others, it will pay you.

COLD STORAGE LILIES.

How shall we treat Lilium giganteum taken from cold storage from now on to get the best results? W. J.

After potting they should be placed on the floor in a frost-proof shed or cellar, where temperature fluctuations are less marked than in the greenhouses at this season of the year. All lilies prefer a comparatively cool location while making their roots and during the early stages of growth. As soon as the pots are well filled with roots they can be moved to a warm house. If placed under a greenhouse bench at the present time growths will appear above the pots before many roots are made, which means a failure so far as flowers are concerned.

Some successful growers have tiers of shelves on which they stand the pots around the sides of the shed or cellars. They can all be readily reached with the hose when necessary. They are kept rather dark, and this prevents the drying out of the soil. After being housed, the benches in almost any of the houses should do for them now that the sun is at so much higher an angle. We consider one of the greatest secrets of success in growing cold storage, or indeed any other bulbs, is to fill the pots with roots in as cool and equable a place as possible. C. W.

LEOMINSTER, MASS.—Nellie G. Stone has sold her homestead in Nelson street, consisting of an apartment house, stable, two greenhouses each 200 feet long, and eight acres of rich soil, to Joseph Fuller, who takes possession April 1.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I enclose some samples of geranium leave. The plants did well up to the first part of March, when the spots appeared. They were rooted in November. I have not used anything in the soil except sheep manure. The plants did not show the disease until they were changed into 4-inch pots. The trouble is mostly among the John Doyles and Ricards. I have Poitevine and S. A. Nutt in the same house, but they are not affected. The geraniums are in the end house, quite shady, and the temperature is about 50 degrees. I do not think I have overwatered them. The disease seems to be spreading. J. F. D.

This trouble, which is not at all uncommon, comes from a variety of causes and, once started, spreads very fast. It is due to several causes: Too much nitrogenous manure in the soil, too much moisture at the roots and overhead and too little sunlight on the plants. We would advise giving the plants all possible sunshine; they need it and will not do nearly so well in a shaded as in a sunny house. They may grow and appear green, but the growth is soft in comparison to what it would be in direct sunlight and the plants will not flower so well.

We have not found any advantage in spraying for the mildewed foliage, and we think the only successful remedy will be a light, sunny house, care in watering and the use of fine bone in lieu of sheep or cow manure at future pottings. The latter manures promote rank growth; the former makes the plants hardier and more floriferous.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE California seed growers would like to have a little fair weather.

SPRING weather in the central states has started a freshet of orders pouring in on the seedsmen.

It was 102 degrees in the shade in Oklahoma March 19 and the whole southwest is having a hot wave.

FRANK BLAKEFIELD is working in the Sister Bay region in Wisconsin making pea growing contracts for the John H. Allan Seed Co.

THE canners seem to have found all the seeds they need; at least they are not calling for stock the way they were a few weeks ago.

W. A. WHEELER, Brookings, S. D., is making contracts for the growing of the stock with which the Dakota Improved Seed Co. will start in business at Mitchell, S. D., next season.

IN spite of the troubles and delay in getting their catalogues in the mails, the seed department of Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago, has been working to the limit for some time.

THE E. F. Winterson Co., Chicago, will engage in the retail seed and horticultural supply business at 45 to 47 Wabash avenue, having leased the three store spaces on the street floor for the purpose.

A FIRM of Hamburg importers and a London jobber of longiflorums are "lawing it" to find out who is responsible when cold storage bulbs do not flower satisfactorily. It appears that all growers who bought the bulbs were given credits in settlement by the jobber and he seeks to pass the responsibility back to the importer.

THE Holland bulb salesmen, whose name is legion, are again centering on New York after covering the west. Most of them sail for home or for England early in April. Not one of them fails to report that orders booked this year have been the heaviest on record.

THE J. C. Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Ia., has just completed its corn drying plant, which will be busy from now until the season is over drying seed corn for planting. It has a capacity of about 100 bushels per hour. A public demonstration of its work was given March 19.

THE breaking of winter has brought a rush to the seed trade and houses in all branches of the business are as busy as they care to be. Mail orders are coming

SEED SHORTAGES OF 1907.

Now that the seed catalogues for 1907 are published and distributed, our customers and the trade are wondering what all the excitement about seed shortages, that occupied the minds of the entire craft such a short time ago, was for. One would gather from a close perusal of the seed catalogues this year that never in the history of the trade were there such quantities of seeds and of such splendid qualities.

The real fact of the case is that the day of absolute shortage of seeds, so acute that planters must forego their plantings, has forever passed in this country. Our great diversity of soils and climatic conditions makes it an impossibility, to say nothing of the seeds we can get from Europe. When there are no seeds in one section, there are in another. It is wholly a question of price, and even this season prices have not been nearly so much affected as the "shortage howl," at the time our seed catalogues were started last autumn, would lead buyers to suppose.

There are many reasons for this. In the first place, most of us who do any business at all annually carry over from one year to another seeds in quantity sufficient to carry us a long way on the road of the next year. Now let no one misunderstand just what I mean here; I refer especially to those seeds that are just as good, and in many cases much improved, by being two or three years old. For there is now no question but that vine seeds of practically all varieties are better three or four years old than they are the first season after being harvested. I will go no further into this matter at this time, but no one who reads this article must misunderstand my position in regard to carrying over seeds. I am not referring to such seeds as parsnip and others that go into the dirt-barrel at the end of each season, and which even immediately after harvesting often germinate poorly. I am telling you about carrying over seeds as a matter of not only business policy, but in order that the customer may get the most for his supply; and in a season like the present, when some things are really quite short, you will find that other varieties of merit are pushed ahead of supposedly popular favorites.

This brings up another great question, and that is, do we not push unduly, year after year, certain varieties to the exclusion of others that may perhaps be really quite as valuable? You will say that this takes us into another great question, and that is, that seedsmen are obliged to carry in stock and sell to their customers those varieties of seeds that custom and an especial local market demand. Granted in a way, for no one knows better than the writer how true this is; but, on the other hand, I fully believe that few seedsmen realize how much dependence their customers place in their opinions and advice. Seedsmen can and do control the varieties of seeds that shall be planted in certain localities, possibly more than they themselves have realized.

It is only in a year of seed shortage that many of these questions I have raised appeal to us at their true value. When seeds of every kind are plenty and, perhaps, a drug on the market, it is so easy to give a customer what he will buy the quickest and easiest, and that is always what his father, grandfather and neighbors have planted. The average man will keep on planting what he always has, without regard to the fact that another variety might bring him half again as much profit or pleasure. I have a specific case in my mind, where a customer, in a short crop seed year, took several varieties against his own wishes—I can hardly say judgment—and the results were that the crops gathered were so much more satisfactory and profitable than the kinds the same customer had always planted, that ever after he would have none other than those varieties which his seedsman would recommend to him.

I am afraid my thoughts have taken me away from my original subject, but so many things enter into the making of a seed catalogue—how varieties should be offered in a short seed year especially—that it requires the greatest tact and knowledge of your customers' needs and wants to not only meet those needs, but also to sell your own seed stock in a proper manner. No matter how much pains a seedsman takes, he will be confronted at the end of the season with two serious propositions: First, he will have a surplus of many things that should have been sold; and, second, he will not have enough of other things to

For forcing I can recommend it as being almost equal to the best named varieties generally used for that purpose.

It contains named novelties of merit, and hybrids bred especially to supply the needs of Florists requiring light colors.

Having for many years experimented extensively to the end of supplying a White and Light Mixture especially adapted to the Florists' trade, for Funeral and Decorative work where light colors alone would be appropriate, I am now prepared to furnish my Meadowvale Florists' Light Mixture, which I can guarantee to contain the best quality obtainable in the world at the price. There is such a variation in Florists' Mixtures, as generally offered, that I do not wonder at the frequent disgust of the purchaser, and in my preparation of this stock I have endeavored to eliminate every variety with which the most critical florist could find fault.

This Mixture was offered last Spring for the first time and over 500,000 were placed and not one complaint received, a sure indication that it was favorably received by the Florists. For this season, 1907, it will be sold only by me and in lots of not less than 1000 or more. Price. $15 00 per 1000, F. O. B. Berlin, N. Y., cash with order, and will be sold subject to the conditions on above order blank.

This offer will hold good as long as the stock lasts and orders will be entered in their turn, although shipment may not be required until later. When the stock is all sold, this offer will be withdrawn, without further notice, therefore do not delay and miss it. May I not have the opportunity of demonstrating that I have a Mixture which, after growing one season, you would not part with for double the price paid? If so, fill out the order blank and send to me with remittance and I will sign and return duplicate to you.

Illustrated Catalogue of Other Collections, Mixtures and Named Varieties will be Mailed upon Application.

great responsibility. The weight of the responsibility that an honest man carries, who has the buying of a seed stock in his hands, is, in my estimation, the greatest any man can assume. The occupant of such a position is morally obligated to every customer of the house; he stands between the planter and crop failure. On the other hand, his firm expects him to make money for the house; and fortunate is the man who can serve both masters satisfactorily.

is Conklin's seed house, which is situated up to the tracks of the two railroads from Robinson street, and which annually distributes great quantities of grass and farm seeds to all parts of the country. This firm was started in 1875 by E. W. Conklin, the father of the present proprietor, Horace E. Conklin. The firm at first had warehouses on State street, and the firm was at different periods known as Conklin & Keeler, and Conklin & Mersereau. Since the death of the founder, in 1896, the business has been conducted successfully by his son.

"In 1897 the present warehouses on Montgomery street were erected. Last season two additions were built, each 50x50, one of them of five stories and the other two stories. The main building is 75x420 feet. About twenty-five men are employed and an equal number of girls. The principal business is the recleaning of western seeds and the selling of field seeds, with a specialty of seed peas and corn. Several salesmen are on the road for the firm, and a branch office is located at Harrisville, Mich., where thousands of bushels of peas are annually grown for the house. Here Mr. Conklin has a large warehouse.

In the five-story section of the plant is located the department for the recleaning packets, 40c.

Vick's Upright. Long, graceful stems branch out at the ground and grow directly upward. Flowers are symmetrical, double and full to the center. Splendid for cutting. Especially valuable for shipping.
Price per packet, 25c; 2 packets, 40c.

Vick's Royal Purple. An offshoot from the Branching. Unlike its parent, it sends out stems close to the ground. A medium early variety but lasting until late in fall. Nearly every stem produces specimen flowers. Price per packet, 20c; 2 packets, 35c.

Vick's Branching Rosy Carmine.
A new color in the Branching class. Leading florists pronounce it a shade which will be popular with the trade. Price per packet, 25c; 2 packets, 40c.

Vick's Cardinal. The best bedding Aster ever introduced. A good one for cutting. With its profusion of flowers and brilliant coloring it makes a handsome showing.

This charming addition to our greenhouse
Primroses originated at the Royal Gardens, Kew, as an accidental cross between the small, bright-flowered Himalayan species,
P. floribunda, and the sweet-scented P. verticillata, a native of Arabia. The plant is a strong grower, with bright green leaves, and numerous erect flowerstems, 10 to 18 inches in height, producing flowers in whorls at intervals along their whole length. The flowers are fragrant, bright yellow in color, with a slender tube and spreading limb, nearly an inch in diameter. As a winter-flowering decorative plant it is an acquisition; its floriferousness when in a very small state is remarkable. Per pkt., $1.00.

RAWSON'S BOOKLETS.

In preparing their general catalogue for 1907 W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, were compelled to make a start from the very beginning. They had lost all their electrotypes in the fire of the spring of 1906. Consequently the catalogue was not only newly illustrated but it was entirely rewritten and all cultural directions were omitted, it being the intention to prepare them in an up-to-date manner and publish in pamphlet form. These booklets are now being mailed to their customers. One is entitled "Rawson's Practical Guide to Vegetable Growing," and it is stated to be written by the Hon. Warren W. Rawson, detailing the methods proven to be best by his many years of practical vegetable growing at Arlington. It is stated that Mr. Rawson, for instance, grows more radishes under glass for the Boston market than any other two growers. While the book is designed primarily as an advertisement of Rawson's seeds, there is much of interest in it for every seedsman as well as vegetable grower.

The second booklet is entitled "Rawson's Guide for Flowers," and ninety pages are devoted to brief but compre-

Just a word of greeting and good wishes for your success at Easter, and every other day of 1907.

This Is My 10th Year

I am a little proud of the record the Orchid is making for itself in America. I have endeavored to do my share in emphasizing its value to floriculture in this country. I think you will admit I have accomplished my purpose. Now, when you want them, you know the one place where you are always sure of them. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the last few weeks has been on the quiet side, at least the wholesalers imagine it has been, on account of the great amount of stock that has been coming in. I think with the most of them that the receipts are quite equal, if not ahead, of other years, and the abundance of stock has made it difficult for everything to be cleaned up; especially in carnations, violets and bulb stock is this noticeable. Easter lilies are coming, and from present appearances will be plentiful around Toronto, although we hear in many of the outside points that stock is behind.

Various Notes.

J. S. Simmons has just finished the alterations for his enlarged store. He has taken over the store next to him and made the two stores into one. This he has carried out right through the three upper floors, and has fitted these up for offices of various kinds. He has put in a complete new steam plant, and has electric light and gas all through the building. His store will be one of the finest, if not the finest, in Canada, when he has it finished. He intends, in the fall, to take out the present front and put in a new front. He is using all the modern ideas for convenience as well as style and, with the great amount of floor space that he will have, his store will be a credit to Canada.

A number of the Toronto florists went to London to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association, as well as taking in the carnation exhibition in that town. The delegates did not exactly walk to London, but the time we made would leave the impression that we were traveling on a slow freight. However, after we arrived there everything was made quite lively for us. The exhibition was a good one; and the quality and the quantity of the carnations put up were fine. J. Gammage & Son had a splendid exhibit, showing some White Perfection, and a number of standard varieties well grown. F. Dicks, London's carnation specialist, had some fine standard varieties. J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; W. J. Lawrence, Eglinton; Dale Estate, Brampton, and W. Fendley, Brampton, sent exhibits of carnations of the best commercial varieties. It might be remarked that all the carnation stock exhibited was much ahead of the Canadian grown carnations that were shown at the carnation convention show in Toronto. The bright weather we have had the last few weeks put some strength into the stems, so that the stock showed up to much better advantage. F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., sent an exhibit of Winsor and White Enchantress. These two promise to be good commercial varieties.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association was held, and a draft of the program for the annual convention was made. If we get all the papers that are down on the list we should certainly have an interesting meeting next fall in London, as there are many papers down which touch on live subjects in connection with the flower trade. In the afternoon the delegates visited the greenhouses of J. Gammage & Son and found everything in fine shape for Easter. Especially admired were their bench of Easter lilies and house of Primula obconica in full bloom. Their new range, which is devoted principally to carnations, is fine. The firm intends putting up another large house in the spring.

The Market.

Business has been somewhat unsteady the last week. Funeral work created most of the business, causing a big rush in some stores, while at the same time at the store next door there was nothing doing. Just at present there is little doing in the way of weddings or entertaining.

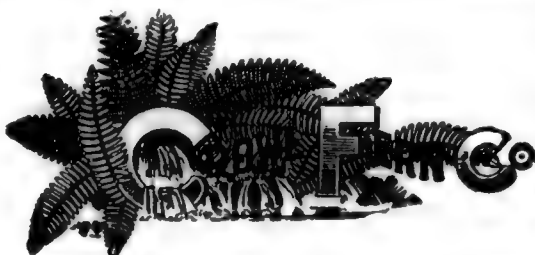

Colored stock is plentiful. White flowers remain well cleaned up. Saturday evening white carnations were at a premium, owing to the demand for green carnations for March 17. Carnations are bringing from $1.50 to $2. Those colored green for St. Patrick's day sold readily at $4. In 1906 green carnations did not sell at all, but this year a great many were disposed of.

Much bulbous stock is still going to waste. Violets are getting poor. Smilax is still scarce. Ferns are up to $2.50 per thousand, and are poor at that. Azaleas, lilac, rose plants, bulbous plants, rhododendrons, etc., are selling well.

Various Notes.

Charles Plumb has a fine lot of bulbous plants for Easter.

J. F. Sullivan, true to his color, had an elaborate harp, made of a variety of flowers, dyed green, in his window last week.

J. E. Smith, of Wyandotte, recently gave his fourth or fifth annual spread for a number of the members of the Florists' Club. Mr. Smith, although long ago of age, is still enjoying single blessedness. He has only a small span of glass, but his carnation crop certainly speaks well for the grower. Some of the boys say his crop of champagne and cigars is also par excellence.

Easter is early this year, but Easter shoppers are already in evidence on all sides. The public is finding out that it pays to be on the ground early. Many orders for Easter are being booked. Nothing pleases the florists more, as they are better able to handle the business when spread out over a week or ten days. Blooming plants are plentiful, but lilies will hardly be equal to the demand.

William Hielscher is just recovering from a severe attack of the grip.

The excellent staying qualities of some green carnation fluid was proven in Detroit. Someone experimented with the tail end of a white dog belonging to William Brown, and now the green tip "won't come off."

The Detroit Cut Flower Exchange is handling some exceptionally fine sweet peas.

With the arrival of the spring weather the street fakers are again in evidence. Hundreds of Enchantress are finding their way to the public through this channel at 25 cents per dozen.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The weather conditions have been satisfactory. The bright, sunny days have brought out thousands of blooms of every description and little was carried over. The retail market has been steady. Prices have declined on some particular grades. Taking all into consideration, the retailer makes no complaint.

American Beauties are generally enough to meet the demands; however, the coming of the Metropolitan Opera Co., March 25, at the Lyric, will no doubt call for many Beauties and other cut flowers, but only a few of the leading florists will reap the harvest. Roses are coming in more regularly, at fair prices. Ivory, Bridesmaid, and Killarney are extra fine. Bride, Richmond, Liberty and Gate are used to a great extent. The glut of carnations still hangs on. Many who are trying to hold them back for Easter find it difficult, as the sun has so much power. The quality is fair, but showing a little change. The leading sellers here are white and Enchantress.

Lily of the valley is not so plentiful and few are called for. Sweet peas can be had in any quantity at a low figure. Both single and double violets are a glut and sell at a price that hardly pays for picking. Thousands were offered on the streets last week. Callas are beginning to be plentiful and bring good prices. Bulbous stock can be found in any quantity. Thousands of Easter lilies are thrown out and will no doubt make a short crop. Many will discard them hereafter. Greens are not so scarce, as the weather is more favorable. The fern gatherers will soon get more out of the woods and will flood the town.

Various Notes.

While L. Krüder, 723 West Franklin street, was trimming a tree, the limb on which he was standing broke and he fell to the ground, sustaining painful injuries.

Herbert W. Cameron, who was employed by J. Bolgiano & Son, has given up working in the seed business.

Philip Heddrick, gardener for Allen McLane, Chattolane, Md., picked over 2,500 extra fine Marie Louise violets and has some fine azaleas. They will shortly erect another house, much larger than the one they now have.

Samuel Feast & Sons have one of the most up-to-date arranged windows in the city. A glance at the beautiful sight will surely make anyone feel that spring is here.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held in its rooms March 25. This meeting should be well attended, as considerable important business will be transacted.

Fred Reitz, Franklinton, has an enormous quantity of blooming bulbous stock for Easter. He is one of the largest importers in the state and supplies many growers, and when the bulbs are in bloom he supplies a good many retail stores. Much credit is due Mr. Reitz for the way he handles such a vast number of bulbs. Easter he has about half a dozen stalls scattered throughout the market and makes many trips a day with his wagon and a hired wagon.

One of our growers of Easter lilies was compelled to throw out nearly 200 lilies last week, and he was not the only one.

Many members of the club attended the rose convention at Washington last Friday and were well pleased.

Isaac H. Moss, Govanstown, is cutting some extra fine, long-stemmed Ivory and Golden Gate. The stock has made remarkable growth for the short time planted.

The florists here are beginning to realize that the window decorations are becoming a necessity.

John P. Willheim, Gardenville, recently was in town looking for a first-class buggy. He says business has been so brisk that it enables him to lay out the cash for this summer's pleasure.

C. B. Hoffman, Arlington, has completed his repairs on his new houses recently damaged by fire and will be ready for the Easter trade.

There was a good demand for the green carnations for St. Patrick's day.

J. L. T.

WEST SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Hans Madsen has sold his business and has returned to Denmark to live. Mr. and Mrs. Madsen sailed March 16.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The tide of European travel has again set in. It will gather volume as the spring advances and promises to be heavier than ever as summer approaches. Retail florists can add to their business with no greater trouble to themselves than the posting of a list of steamer sailings in the window. Or tell in a neat circular that you have facilities for the delivery of flowers on any outgoing steamer. Then mail or wire the orders to be filled to one of the Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its regular meeting in Manchester, March 15, President McGregor in the chair. J. W. Duncan, of Boston, read an interesting paper on "Trees and Shrubs." A certificate of merit was awarded James Salter for six pots of Antirrhinum Sutton's White Queen. This is a dwarf variety, growing from one to two feet in height, and is suitable for window or conservatory decoration.

Resolutions of sympathy were passed on the death of William J. Griffin, one of the organizers of this society. He was a native of County Mayo, Ireland. He came to this country thirty-five years ago and since then had spent practically all his time in this vicinity. At the time of his death he had charge of the C. H. Tweed estate, Beverly Farms. W. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE death of James Draper is reported in this week's obituary column.

CHARLES F. UECKE, New London, Wis., has built up a large wholesale business in collected evergreen seedlings.

F. L. WHITE, Moscow, Idaho, has sold his entire season's output of nursery stock to Rice & Mumm, Spokane, Wash.

C. W. MALLY has been appointed inspector of nurseries and orchards in Ohio, succeeding A. F. Burgess, who went to Massachusetts.

E. RUNYON, of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J., has been looking after his nursery interests in Cuba, but is expected home in a few days.

A NURSERY company is being organized by J. T. Lunn, of Abilene, Tex. The site of the company's operations is the Cockrell farm, near Lytle lake. Capitalization, $25,000.

THE George Wittbold Co., Chicago, a couple of seasons ago, established a large nursery at Edgebrook, just outside the city. They now have a big stock of shrubs and hardy perennials ready for market, but only a fraction of what they expect to have another season.

SEASONABLE REMINDERS.

Prunus Pissardi is, in effect, a miniature purple-leaved plum. It is fully as decorative as the latter as far as the foliage is concerned, although, of course, by reason of its dwarf habit it never attains the impressive appearance of a matured plum. This prunus is a desirable subject when something is wanted with which to make contrasts. In early summer, before the foliage unfolds, beautiful pinkish white flowers dot the branches profusely. The foliage, from the time it opens in early summer until it falls in early winter, is almost unchanged in its purple hue. It is suitable for planting in masses, or as single specimens. It stands hard pruning, if it is necessary, to keep it within bounds, or it may be allowed to grow unchecked; whichever way it is always satisfactory.

I doubt if there is any other flowering shrub as much in demand, and deservedly so, as Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. It is invaluable for the decoration of home grounds and valuable also for the flowers in their cut state. They find usually a ready market, even at a time of the year when outdoor flowers are abundant. Cuttings of this hydrangea can be placed in the nursery in the spring to root and it will not be long before they will give an account of themselves.

Evergreens require more or less protection during the winter months in nearly every section of the country, not so much in any case for the injury that the frost might directly cause, but because of the damaging effects of cold and sunlight combined. Evergreens, covered up during a great part of the winter, should not at one time be wholly relieved of their winter protection, nor should any of it be removed until, at least, some sign of spring appears. At any rate it is undesirable to suddenly expose them to the full light of the sun.

The present is a good time to begin a campaign of extermination upon everything visible in the line of scale, as well as upon things pretty nearly invisible, that are a menace to trees and shrubs.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground work should be commenced in the preparation of beds for the reception of tree seeds. These seeds, stored away somewhere during the winter, will, many of them, need looking after now and examined to ascertain whether or not they are in proper condition.

Evergreens in the cutting boxes should be potted as soon as they are rooted.

American Elm.

It may be found that a few are still unrooted, but, better than leave them all longer in the boxes, to pot the advanced ones in order to get them ahead for outdoors and put the unrooted ones back in the cutting boxes again. R. R.

THE AMERICAN ELM.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of such an elm as any nurseryman would be proud to have growing in a big block on his grounds. J. A. Pettigrew told the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently that "the American elm (Ulmus Americana) is endeared to the people of New England by the manner in which it has embowered many of our towns and waysides with its beautiful pendulous branches; the fame of New England's elms has spread far and wide. The American elm is not suitable for planting under hard conditions in city streets; it loves a rich, moist soil, with plenty of room for development; for wide suburban streets and for waysides it is a grand tree."

The demand for elms of good size is so strong that to find a number of trees of fairly large caliper, one like unto the other, is no easy task, as a number of the landscape architects who have tried it recently have found. Several park plantings of elms have been delayed, or other stock used, because of the difficulty of finding enough elms that were of the right size and which would match up.

PRIVET CUTTINGS.

Referring to R. R. in the REVIEW of February 28, page 1126, cuttings of all hard-wooded plants should be taken off in the fall, before sharp, freezing weather, and at once made up into cuttings of the proper length and heeled in in moist sand in a cool cellar until spring, so that the lower ends may calous, ready for rooting when planted.

I think there are not many places north of Mason and Dixon's line where California privet is not too much injured by freezing to do at all for cuttings; in fact, in many places the entire top is perfectly dead to the ground. I think the Amoor River privet is much better than the California. Though quite similar in appearance and growth, it is now green to the very tips, while the California near it is entirely dead to below the surface. E. Y. TEAS.

TO REGULATE SALE OF PLANTS

The following is the text of "An Act to regulate the sale of Plants, Trees, Shrubby, Etc., and to provide against the spread of Infectious Diseases among Plants, Trees, Shrubby, Etc., and for the Inspection of Nursery Stock, owned or sold by Companies or Corporations doing a Nursery Business in the State of Minnesota," now pending in the Minnesota legislature:

It shall be the duty of the state entomologist, or his assistant, to inspect all companies or corporations doing a nursery business in Minnesota, who are engaged in the growing, shipping or selling of ornamental trees, fruit trees and shrubby of all kinds; such inspection to occur not less than twice each year, and for which the owner, or owners, of each nursery shall pay an inspection fee of $10. None of the trees, shrubby, vines, and other plants offered for sale, found to be affected by the San Jose scale, or other infectious plant troubles, by said inspector, shall be offered for sale, but shall be immediately destroyed, or before being offered for sale shall be tagged with tags containing the announcement that the same are infected by infectious plant disease, the tags to be secured of the entomologist at the rate of 50 cents per hundred.

All companies or corporations engaged in the nursery business in this state shall annually apply to the secretary of state, the fee to be $50 for each annual license, together with an additional fee of $1 for recording the application, and the said license must be secured before said nursery or nurseries dispose of trees, shrubby, vines, etc., of said nursery, and before the secretary of state shall issue such license the state entomologist must first issue his certificate that said nursery or nurseries are free from the said San Jose scale or other plant infectious diseases.

Whenever any nursery owner of this state ships, or causes to be shipped, the trees, plants, shrubby, vines, etc., produced by a nursery in any other state, the same, before they are offered for sale, shall contain a tag or tags announcing the place where the same were first grown, and the advertising of nursery stock grown in a foreign state as "home grown" is hereby declared to be a misdemeanor.

Whenever any nursery in this state transplants, or causes to be transplanted, any of its product or products, or the products of a nursery of this or another state, before the same is again offered for sale, the product or products shall be marked "transplanted" and the failure to do so is hereby declared to be a misdemeanor.

For the purpose of preventing the spread of the so-called San Jose scale, or other infectious plant diseases, the state entomologist, or his assistant, who may be appointed by him, is hereby authorized and empowered to have and take access to any and all railroad cars, all railroad stations, all storage houses, warehouses, or express offices, wherein there may be

BUYING TREES AND SHRUBS.

The National Council of Horticulture, in one of its press bulletins, gives the following advice:

"If possible the purchaser of trees or shrubs should choose his purchases from growing stock that he views and considers with regard to his especial requirements. A gardener should select with the utmost care everything of a permanent nature that he puts in his garden. Especially is this the case with fruit-bearing trees and shrubs. The best is the cheapest, it being more economical to destroy a poor specimen than to waste time and effort trying to make a good plant of it. The same applies to a rose bush or any ornamental plant.

"The buyer who orders haphazard from a nurseryman's catalogue without either seeing the plants he is purchasing, or giving the seller an idea of his special requirements, will be lucky if disappointment is not his lot. Quality, and not quantity, should always be the watchword of the gardener, since a single rose bush of surpassing beauty will give more pleasure than a dozen that are failures.

"If it is impossible for the purchaser to visit a nursery and make his own selections, he should obtain expert advice from someone who understands how to order with specifications that will insure stock of the right sort being delivered, and who knows what variety will be best suited to the given conditions.

"Advice of this sort may be obtained from the nurserymen themselves and the purchaser will do well to write for suggestions on all points he does not thoroughly understand. But a trip to the nursery, where all varieties may be seen growing, and the various specimens compared will be productive of information enough to make it profitable to any amateur wherever it is possible."

3 NEW CANNAS

WILLIAM SAUNDERS

The flowers are large, of splendid form, and are borne very freely in immense clusters. The color is a deep rich shining scarlet slightly dappled with crimson. Foliage is a rich bronze. Height, 3½ to 4 feet. We believe that Wm. Saunders is decidedly the most perfect Canna of this type that has been introduced. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

OTTAWA

Is a strong grower, very robust and 5 to 6 feet high. The flowers are large and beautifully formed, color is carmine with tints of old rose and deep coral, add to this the silken sheen and you can imagine the effect a few plants will produce.

NOTE—We had this Canna on trial among the Canadian experimental stations last summer and this is the official report of their expert: "Quite distinct and one of the most beautiful shades of color I ever saw in Cannas. Of 70 massed in one bed during the past season, this was the most floriferous in the collection, coming into bloom early and continuing until cut down by frost, as many as 13 expanded heads of blooms being counted at one time on a plant, and not a poor one among them, all being of immense size." 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

NEW YORK

Has the Orchid type of flower. They have much more substance than the flowers of the other varieties of this class, and will stand the hot sunshine as well as the toughest varieties of cannas. The color is a solid rich scarlet covered with a beautiful glowing sheen. The flowers are large and contrast beautifully with the dark bronze foliage. 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Send for our list and prices of 60 other leading varieties of Cannas.

ROSES, are our great specialty. 2½ and 4-inch pot plants we have in great variety — Philadelphia Rambler, Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins and other climbers in strong field plants.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—The Southern Construction Co. is planning to start two large palm nurseries. Miles of streets of this city are to be ornamented with the choicest palms in California, set thirty feet apart.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has been favorable for flowers for the last week and everything has been plentiful, except good roses, and they are at a premium just now. There has been no really good stock of Beauties offered by the growers for the last month, but from appearances we can expect a heavy cutting in good season for Easter. Carnations remain stationary in price, with a slight shortage of the white varieties. There are plenty of light pink and Enchantress to be had, and the quality is good.

Bulbous stock is still in evidence, especially the later sorts of daffodils. Narcissi are over for the season and valley is plentiful and in fair demand. Some Harrisii are ready and these cost the retailers $2 per dozen. The outlook for Easter lilies is good and from present appearances there will be ample stock to fill all requirements.

Violets are getting scarcer and we do not expect they will last for over a few weeks at the most. Sweet peas have made their appearance and are the first of the spring flowers to be had. They sell at $1 per dozen bunches, but are expected to be much cheaper after Easter.

Green stuff, both wild and cultivated, with the possible exception of smilax, is now plentiful enough to supply all wants and the famine that has been experienced by all the retailers is now at an end.

Business has been fair for this season of the year and all are looking forward to a prosperous Easter.

Various Notes.

The Union Florists, formerly of Fourth street, will open up on Sixteenth street, near Mission, in a few days.

Thos. Hansen will make a trip to Portland, Ore., in the near future.

Thos. O'Neil has returned and taken charge of the Myrobolan Nurseries, Haywards, Cal.

Thos. Meherin, formerly located at No. 516 Battery street, is at present residing in Berkeley. Mr. Meherin expects to open a seed store and tree yard during the summer.

CARNATIONS ON THE COAST.

I am located about six miles from the Pacific ocean and about midway between San Francisco and Portland. I should like to grow carnations in the open ground for cut flowers for the wholesale trade. Can you tell me what varieties would succeed best in this situation? D. M.

There will be no difficulty in growing carnations anywhere in the neighborhood referred to during the spring and summer months, but to produce flowers late in the fall and during the winter would be out of the question. Carnations can be and are grown outdoors with success anywhere along the coast below San Francisco down to San Diego, but when they are planted north of there they produce but little during the season of the year they are most in demand.

Unless in some favored locality in our southern country, the carnation as an outdoor bloomer is not considered to be a very profitable proposition. The public taste has gradually been educated up to a point where hothouse flowers are demanded and, although the outdoor product is used to a certain extent, they do not bring more than a fraction of the price paid for indoor stock.

At the season of the year when there would be an abundance of flowers in the region described by D. M. they would be brought into competition with the much finer indoor stock and the prices would hardly pay for their care for the balance of the season.

Regarding the best varieties for garden planting, I have found that Estelle is so far the most satisfactory of the scarlet sorts, although old Portia is also a splendid bloomer, but the blossoms are not so large or double. Of the deep pink varieties I prefer Ethel Crocker to anything else for this latitude. Wm. Scott is probably the next best. Lawson is of no value as a garden variety and E. Schwerin is not as good a color outdoors as it is under glass. Fiancee and Nelson Fisher are not good outdoor sorts here.

Of the whites, Flora Hill is better than anything else. Boston Market is a splendid bloomer but the flowers are not of good size, and Queen Louise bursts badly. Harlowarden is the most satisfactory of the dark reds and John Carbon is a splendid yellow striped sort. Mrs. Patten has not been a success and Enchantress and Prosperity are worthless.

Should the writer have an opportunity to try his success with carnations under glass he will have a much greater number of varieties to select from, but for garden sorts with the intention of marketing them, a few kinds will be all that should be used.

Some success has attended the growing of carnations from seed. Good strains of the marguerite type or picotees make admirable flower producers and, although the blossoms are not to be compared with the hothouse product, their freedom of bloom makes them of some value. G.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Every member of the craft is now most actively preparing for the great Easter business that we daily feel coming stronger and nearer. Conditions could not be better than they are in Columbus for an enormous business; the sunless weather, which lasted so long, has certainly whetted our customers' desires for flowers to a point where they will buy lavishly. It is still an uncertain factor, regarding the supply of good stock that will be available here. As regards lilies, the reports are mixed. With some they have done well and will come about right, but in places the disease has shown itself badly; in fact, at least half the bulbs that were started have already been thrown out. There seems to be less disease among the Harrisii than any others. If the fine, sunny days we are now having continue, roses and carnations will be in good form. As regards flowering plants of all kinds, the supply is large and of good quality; this is due no doubt to everyone making a special effort with plants—we fell down so flat on them last year. Give us good weather Easter week, is all we ask.

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO., 334 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

The Florists' Club.

Our club held its first meeting of the month March 12, with President Sherman F. Stephens in the chair. The important matter of the evening was the question as to whether the penny packets of flower and vegetable seeds, which have been put up for the school children, should be given to them or whether the packets should be paid for by the children. Our club is a unit in believing that it is for the good of the children that they pay the few pennies necessary. To arrange this matter the club has appointed M. B. Faxon, Sherman F. Stephens and R. A. Currie as a committee to confer with the Columbus board of education.

The display of plants and flowers at this meeting was the best of the season thus far. The prize committee for the evening, consisting of Messrs. Torrey, Brust, Meitzmaier, Williams and Monk, awarded to I. D. Siebert, for a fine Mme. Vander Cruyssen azalea, twenty points; R. A. Currie, for Spiraea superba, fifteen points; Sherman F. Stephens, for Murillo tulips, fifteen points; Jacob Reichert, for Keizerskroon tulips, ten points, and for a good Genista fragrans, ten points went to A. Wedemeyer. As this was ladies' night, we shortened the business part and devoted the balance of the evening to entertaining our guests.

Various Notes.

N. J. Wieter, of Wieter Bros., Chicago, has been for several days seeing our city as the guest of William Graff, of Graff Bros. Mr. Wieter is of the opinion that Easter will see a great business, with plenty of stock, with the exception of lilies.

W. P. Sharp is advertising nursery stock in our local papers that he "guarantees to grow."

Without question the most elaborate and extensive floral decorations ever attempted in this city were planned and arranged by O. B. Springer, for the opening of the department stores of the David C. Beggs Co. For this decoration the Livingston Seed Co. supplied bay trees, palms, ferns and other foliage plants to the number of over 500. Large quantities of carnations and roses were also used in vases. From Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, came a glorious bunch of American Beauty roses.

At a recent meeting of the Pleasant Ridge Improvement Association it was recommended that Norway maples be planted as street trees in this city.

Graff Bros. took advantage of the lower rates for carnations to have one of their special sales, and disposed of an enormous quantity at 35 cents per dozen. This firm received many orders for green carnations for St. Patrick's day.

Last Saturday the Livingston Seed Co. had its usual before Easter flowering plant sale at popular prices.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has an especially good stock of both flowers and plants coming on for the Easter trade. Their azaleas are the best I have seen.

Gustave Drobish at his stand on the central market is doing a good business in plants of all kinds at popular prices. Saturday being the great market day, trade is always the best.

John Williams has a quantity of blooming geraniums that will bring good prices at Easter.

The new carnation houses of John R. Hellenthal are attracting much attention from the craft here. Charles M. Jones, the grower, is certainly turning out some prime flowers. ZERO.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

I have a small greenhouse filled with miscellaneous material, and at this time of the year with annual and perennial seedlings. Three years ago someone presented me with a bunch of white fly whose capacity to increase cannot be questioned. Sweet alyssum, lantana and fuchsia are their favorites. I want to reduce the ravages of the white fly and am afraid to use hydrocyanic acid gas on account of the seedlings, some just sprouting. My idea is to remove early in the morning, when I understand the fly is inclined to be dormant, those plants most affected into the boiler room and fumigate. The cubic feet of this room is 1,380 feet. How much gas should be used? W. C. E.

Gas carefully used will injure very few of the most tender plants. We have tried it on maidenhair ferns, violets, heliotropes and other plants which ordinary tobacco fumigation will soon ruin, and rarely found any resultant injury. We are afraid if the seedling boxes are all moved out that many of the white fly will escape. The danger of injury from this method of fumigation increases as the weather comes warmer. In midwinter our plants have never sustained any harm, but in summer some leaves have suffered. This, of course, applies to all fumigants containing nicotine as well.

For a house of 1,380 cubic feet we would recommend using one pint water, one pint sulphuric acid, ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent grade, and two and one-half ounces potassium cyanide. Pour the acid on the water, using a stone jar, then drop in the cyanide, which should for safety be wrapped in two thicknesses of paper. Go right out of the house, lock the door and permit no one to enter until next day. This fumigation ought to be repeated in three or four days, and then we believe you will not find many traces of the enemy. If you have any means of ventilating without entering the house, some air may be given after forty minutes' exposure. We usually, however, allow it to stay in all night. C. W.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE growers will be interested in the illustrated notes on the establishment of Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., which appears on another page of this issue.

THE members of the Market Gardeners' Association at Peoria, Ill., of which Wm. Seibold is president and George Schoff secretary, resent insinuations that they have formed a trust. They say their purpose is not to raise prices except by preventing the market being glutted.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Cucumbers, $1 to $2.25 doz.; leaf lettuce, 20c to 30c case; radishes, 25c to 35c doz. bunches.

BOSTON, March 19.—Cucumbers, $4 to $10 box; tomatoes, 50c to 75c lb.; lettuce, 25c to 50c doz.; bunch beets, $1.50 to $1.75 box; bunch carrots, 20c to 35c doz.; rhubarb, 6c to 8c lb.; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per 4-lb. basket; parsley, $1 to $1.25 box; mint, 75c doz.; romaine, $1 doz.; escarolle, 75c to $1 doz.; spinach, 50c box; dandelion, 50c box; radishes, $1.50 box.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Cucumbers continue weak. Lettuce dragging. Mushrooms in fair demand and steady. Mint quiet. Radishes and rhubarb selling fairly. Tomatoes dull. Cucumbers, 50c to $1.25 doz.; head lettuce, 15c to 50c doz.; mushrooms, 35c to 50c lb.; mint, 50c to 75c doz. bunches; radishes, $2 to $3 per hundred bunches; rhubarb, $3 to $6 per hundred bunches; tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.

HEAD LETTUCE.

Please give me, and other interested readers, some idea of an average cut of head lettuce from a bench 4x22 feet.

M. C. S.

In a bench four feet wide you can accommodate five rows. Allowing your plants to be set eight inches apart, your bench will contain about 1,500 plants. With suitable facilities and good cultivation, there should be little or no loss, so that the number of plants will practically give you the amount of cut.

If you mean to grow lettuce throughout the season, you ought to be able to produce three crops. The first crop, sown at the end of August and kept moving, will be ready to cut in December and ought to be all cleared off, so that you can plant the second (having the plants ready) by January 1. This second crop should be cleared off by the middle of March and the third crop planted. The spring crop will come along faster than the others and should be ready for cutting by the middle of May.

This is allowing plenty of time for each crop, but the time they will take in the bench will depend a good deal on the size and quality of your plants at time of planting. We have cut lettuce six weeks from time of planting, but this is the exception, not the rule. It is quite possible to get your plants too large, in which case a check would result in planting which would have the effect of stunting growth. Although your plants would head up they would lack size. Only experience will teach you the proper stage at which to plant for quickest returns and best results.

On the other hand, it would not pay to plant too small, as you would be losing time in having your bench occupied longer than necessary. Of course it takes some time and trouble to handle them in flats, but our experience is that it pays to handle them in that way, as they take up so much less room for almost half the time required for their growth.

W. S. CROYDON.

SEEDTIME PLEASURES.

I've just received a catalogue
Fresh from the seedsman's store,
A gorgeous book of fruits and flowers
And vegetables galore;
And I can hardly wait until
The winter's ice and snow
Melt from my well-loved garden plot
To spade and rake and hoe.

For in this catalogue I find
New radishes and peas,
Six kinds of lettuce, eight of corn—
I want to try all these;
Cucumbers slim, cucumbers fat,
And limas short and tall,
And melons, cabbage, beets and greens—
I want to try them all.

Tomatoes, ten varieties,
And onions white and red,
Asparagus and celery—
I want of each a bed,
And turnips early, turnips late,
Potatoes by the score,
And squashes, my! don't say a word,
A dozen kinds or more.

I herewith thank the seedsman kind
For sending me his book,
When all these things are coming on,
How pretty they will look!
And when the frost has left the ground,
Amidst the robin's song,
I'm going to plant my total plot—
Twelve feet by twenty long!

—New York Sun.

YORK, PA.—A blaze was started in the boiler-room of Charles Smith's greenhouse, caused by an overheated stovepipe. Fifty dollars will cover the loss.

NEWTOWN, PA.—Arthur Smith and John Van Aart, formerly of Indianapolis, have bought the Lincoln Heights greenhouses of H. W. Wieland. They will operate under the firm name of Smith & Van Aart and will make carnations their specialty.

HENDERSON, KY.—M. C. Morgan, of Madisonville, and Ed. Eckerd and William D. Lambert, of this city, have purchased the greenhouses of the W. R. Conover Co. and will begin repairs and additions at once. The new firm will be known as the Morgan Floral Co.

New Double Petunia THE QUEEN

The new Petunia THE QUEEN has been grown by us for the past five years. It is a wonderful bloomer, the flowers are of an enormous size and measure from four to four and one-half inches in diameter. The flowers are white, mingled with purple, very nicely fringed, making one of the handsomest plants grown. It is an early bloomer, in fact, one of the best sellers for Decoration Day. THE QUEEN, planted outdoors will continue to bloom all summer. The flowers can be used to good advantage in design work.

Strong Plants, from 2½-inch pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Nice, strong rooted cuttings, $5.00 per 100. They will make 4-in. plants full of bloom for Decoration Day.

PITTSBURG.

The Flood Sufferers.

The terrible flood, which swept over our city last week and caused millions of dollars' damage, did not neglect the florists.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had just finished putting her shop in its best shape for Easter when the flood came and there was five feet of water in the store. Most of the furnishings will be destroyed and telephone service is out of commission at this writing.

L. I. Neff was another sufferer, with about three feet of water in his store. He will have losses on fixtures, besides a quantity of seeds he was unable to get out.

In the store of Blind Bros. there was water as high as the counter and, while they were able to get most of the stock out of the water, their ice-boxes and fixtures will all have to be refinished.

A. M. Murdoch found about three feet of water in his work-room, which is in the basement. As the water was never known to reach so far uptown he had not made any preparations for it and so suffered some losses.

Several inches of water covered the floor of the Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange, but it was soon out and did not do much damage.

J. B. Murdoch & Co., while not damaged by water, were surrounded by the flood and could not do business.

The sub-cellar of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. was filled with water, which caused considerable extra work getting out stock which was stored there. There also was difficulty getting in flowers to take care of the trade. The Pittsburgh Rose and Carnation Co. was tied up, as far as railroad service was concerned, but loaded its stock on wagons and drove the twenty miles, part of it through water, but many of the growers could not do this, as they were entirely cut off.

Theodore F. Beckert, on Neville Island, was surrounded by water and, it is believed, he must have had heavy losses; but, as there is no telephone connection, no positive information can be had.

One of the worst results of the flood has been the ruining of all the underground telephone wires in the lower end of the city, and the wholesale houses are the worst sufferers, as most of their business in and out of the city was by telephone. Hoo-Hoo.

Dreer's Hardy Perennial Phlox

We are the largest growers of Perennial Phlox in the world. Our collection is unequalled, and we are prepared to furnish the new and rare kinds as well as all the popular and standard varieties in large quantities.

The plants we offer are nearly all strong one-year-old field-grown plants or equally strong divisions, and will make a fine display of flowers this season. This stock is much superior to and must not be confounded with young winter propagated stock such as is generally sent out in the spring of the year.

New and Rare Hardy Phlox and Varieties of Special Merit.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Stock is plentiful, especially carnations and daffodils. Tulips are scarce and red tulips have been hard to find. Few Roman hyacinths are to be seen. American Beauties are not plentiful at present and prices are high. Violets, the home-grown singles, are equal to the demand. Greens of all kinds are scarce. There is no wild smilax in this market and there will probably be no more this spring, so we will have to look to Chicago for our supply. Fern leaves and galax are scarce.

Good Dutch hyacinths are not so plentiful; many of them are being held back for Easter.

Easter lilies will be scarce. Many orders for plants and palms for Easter have been placed with some florists and some church orders have been placed a month ahead.

Various Notes.

Miss Dalley has the best looking show in her store of any on Eleventh street. Her tulip display is fine and causes a great deal of comment.

Miss Murray's large show window on Grand avenue causes every one to notice the art in which it is arranged. There is a millinery store in with Miss Murray and the Easter bonnets are intermingled with fancy pots of blooming plants.

Geo. M. Kellogg's store is pretty this week. He has azaleas in full bloom in great profusion, mostly white. Mr. Kellogg says that everything is doing fine at the greenhouses. His success with bulb stock is better this year than any previous year, with the exception of his Easter lilies; he will not have the bulk of them in for Easter. He has been cutting quite a number ever since Christmas. He is now picking 5,000 violets a day and expects to put up a large house for violets this summer. He says that he will grow many more and larger ones. Business at the store has been on the increase ever since the first of the year, under the management of Mrs. Lamb. Mr. Kellogg is looking for a location in the southern part of the city on which to build a store.

R. S. Brown & Co. are busy packing orders and shipping plants. Most of the orders go south at this time of the year. All of the packing is done at the Kansas City greenhouses. They issue a wholesale and retail catalogue.

LORRAINE BEGONIAS.

Please let me know the care of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine after it has done flowering. I want to know how to propagate from it and all about the raising of it. R. F. E. S.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine after flowering should have all the shoots shortened back to within six inches of the pot, place on a sunny bench, keep a little on the dry side for a time, syringe overhead until they start to break freely from the bottom, when syringing may be discontinued. When the young sprouts are two to three inches long, rub them off with a heel, or cut underneath a leaf with a sharp knife. Insert in sharp sand in a temperature of 60 degrees at night. The sand should have a good warmth, say 75 degrees, in which case with careful watering, shading, etc., they should nearly all root. Pot off when rooted into 2-inch pots, using a light leaf-mold compost. With each successive shift a slightly heavier compost may be given. At the final potting use a good proportion of old, well dried cow manure in the loam with a little charcoal and a good dash of sharp sand. These plants grow slowly in summer but start to make headway after the end of August. C. W.

CINERARIAS.

When is the best time to sow cineraria seed and what is the right temperature to grow it in? R. F. E. S.

Cinerarias may be sown from May to August. For general commercial purposes the end of July is sufficiently early. Keep the seed pans as cool and moist as possible. The young plants are best grown in coldframes until danger of sharp frost threatens them. They prefer a cool house at all times and need shade even in winter. C. W.

Aristocrat

Aristocrat

The cuttings we now have ready will fill all orders now on hand, with 100,000 cuttings put in the sand the past ten days which will be ready for April delivery.

We have our propagating houses full of cuttings and there are fully 100,000 fine cuttings on the plants ready to take off, but we lack room to propagate them, therefore we are offering these UNROOTED ARISTOCRAT for immediate delivery for $60.00 per 1000.

Aristocrat is a very easy rooter. We have lost less than 10 per cent in the propagating bench.

Aristocrat is a wonderfully free bloomer, a clean, healthy grower and a very quick grower, therefore it is not too late for Aristocrat—the variety most every florist will grow.

Rooted cuttings for April, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. UNROOTED CUTTINGS, ready now, $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

WHITE PERFECTION

the best white on the market today, very early, a good stem and a very large flower. Rooted cuttings ready now, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade conditions have not changed much during the last week. Business has kept up fairly well and stock is plentiful. The growers are making a supreme effort to get everything in for Easter and, from the looks of the stock at the present time, one can safely say that a large percentage of the lilies will be in good shape; with some it will require considerable forcing, which is now being done quite extensively. The quality of the stock was never better. The foliage is a rich, deep green and the flowers are large. The retailers who have no glass are having some difficulty in buying from local growers, as it is apparent there will be a heavy demand, with only a nominal supply. Outside points are drawing quite heavily on the growers and, as they have ordered much earlier than some of our retailers, it begins to look as though a great many plants will be shipped in from the east.

St. Paul.

A visit to the establishment of Aug S. Swanson finds a full line of Easter plants in good shape. He already has a large number of lilies which are ready for the market and are now in cool houses. He also has a great many which are being forced, and will be in at the proper time. His azaleas are better this year than they have been for some time. He also has a fine lot of Baby Ramblers. In about another week Mr. Swanson's new rose, Minnehaha, will be in full bloom. Last year this rose attracted many a florist, not only from the Twin Cities, but from outside points. He cut them in immense numbers and it is apparent that he will do the same this year. The Chicago market is particularly active on the above rose.

L. L. May & Co. will have all of their lilies in and as fine a line of other plants as they have ever had.

Retail business has been active the last week, the demand to a large extent running to funeral flowers.

Holm & Olson are not at all alarmed as to their Easter stock, their lilies will all be in. L. G. Venzke, formerly with E. F. Lemke, is now with Holm & Olson.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. No discount. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

MARGUERITES.

I wish to grow yellow and white marguerites for cutting next winter. Please name the best variety in each color, and treatment of plants, so they will be ready to bloom by winter. R. S. B.

Queen Alexandra we consider much the best white. It has large flowers with a double anemone center, or short, white overlapping petals. Coronation is also an excellent white, with beautiful large flowers. The yellow Chrysanthemum frutescens Etoile d'Or and the large flowering variety, grandiflorum, are both worth growing. The first named is much more floriferous than the latter and makes a decidedly better pot plant.

For winter flowers, cuttings should be rooted now and grown along in pots all summer, keeping them pinched from time to time and plunged in a frame or in the open ground. After they are shifted into 6-inch pots let them root freely through the bottoms of the pots. It will induce more vigorous growth and after being lifted the plants can be shifted into 8-inch pots, in which they will flower freely from Christmas onward. When they commence flowering if the pots are stood on some loam or old manure and allowed to root through, the plants will be more vigorous. For Easter blooming, cuttings may be rooted as late as September and these will make excellent stock in 8-inch pots by the beginning of April. W. N. C.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The William F. Kasting Co. has been incorporated with authorized capital of $300,000. The incorporators are Emil C. Brucher, Laura A. Kasting, Wallace H. Weiss, Lafay C. Wilkie and Wm. F. Kasting.

ATLANTA, GA.—Herman Thaden, greenhouse owner, patentee of a method of truss roof construction, and manufacturer of a wire support for carnations, is at the same time president of the American Box File Mfg. Co., which makes office supplies, etc.

PLEASANT HILL, MO.

George M. Kellogg has formulated a plan which he outlined at a supper given to his employees March 12, by which he will give away $1,000 annually among them.

For a long time he has been considering some way to create a greater interest in the big establishment which he has founded in Pleasant Hill.

"I want you to feel as if this is your work and not mine," he said to his employees in a brief talk. "Its future lies with you. You are to build it up even after I am gone. I want you boys to take an interest in it. I have gone into it with prayer, and with the help of the Lord it has prospered. Now I want you to feel as if it is yours and build it up."

In connection with the supper a graphophone concert was given. A unique idea of the head of the greenhouses was to give each of his employees one of the little round boxes in which records are shipped. They were told not to open the boxes until morning, however. In each box instead of a record for the talking machine was one-half week's salary for each person.

"We are going to work fifty-four weeks out of fifty-two," was the rather mysterious statement of Mr. Kellogg. This, however, was understood when it was learned that he meant that each year he will pay two weeks' extra wages to his employees.

A supper will be given every three months, four times a year, and upon each occasion every person in the employ of the greenhouses will be given half a week's salary. By this means Mr. Kellogg believes that he will get the employees deeply interested in the work and he will have persons to whom he can turn over his business when he retires.

Following the supper, Mr. Kellogg went to Kansas City, where dinner was served for the seven employees of the store there. The dinner was cooked at the Kellogg home, however. While in Kansas City he paid his subscription of $1,000 to the Y. M. C. A. fund there.

Mr. Kellogg is much gratified over the progress which is being made with the Blanche Kellogg Institute, of Santruce, Porto Rico, founded as a memorial to his daughter who died several years ago. In August, 1905, Mr. Kellogg agreed to give $5,000 for the purpose of founding the institute of which he desired to pay $2,000 a year. However, he has not waited the full limit of time and this month paid all the $5,000. Work will begin at once on the institute.

Mr. Kellogg announced that he will shortly erect a building in South Kansas City, to be used as flats, and also as a flower store, in which he will invest about $20,000. It is probable that the present uptown office will also be retained.

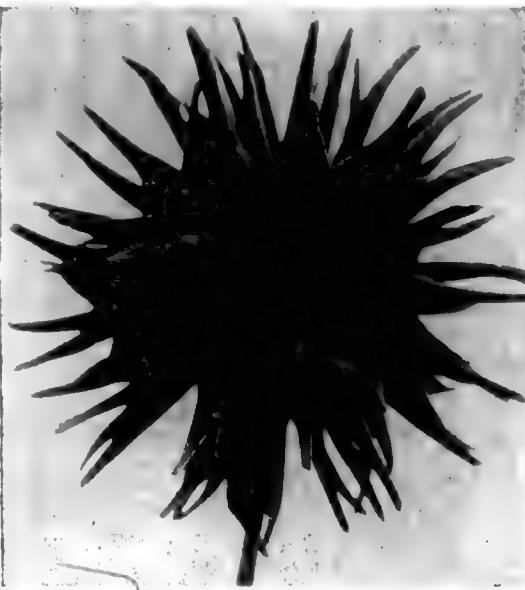

WACO, TEX.—J. D. Mercer reports double the amount of business done last year.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

An Immense Stock of Choice EASTER PLANTS

Blooming Easter Week
or earlier if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment.

Come or mail your order direct to the headquarters. Our reputation over the entire country from the Atlantic to the Pacific in growing Easter stock for the wholesale market for many years past ought to be sufficient guarantee as to the truth of what we say and advertise. We have every house, nook and corner full of plants and they were never so fine as this year, 1907.

While laborers, merchants, jobbers, contractors, builders, etc., have increased their prices almost double as usual, we have not advanced our prices; but look, we sell our plants at the same old prices charged two or three years ago when the cost of producing plants was much cheaper.

What was my duty on my trip to Ghent, Belgium (the land of azaleas, araucarias and palms), last fall, 1906? Answer: Of course, the interests of my customers, not speaking of the 1100 souvenir cards which I mailed to my customers in America. For the benefit of my customers I also bought Azalea Indica for Easter trade, the cream of Belgium's production that money could buy.

AZALEAS

Now I am able to offer to my customers, and the trade in general, two houses full of Mme. Vander Cruyssen azaleas, the well known and much favored best double pink azalea that has given so much satisfaction all over America. Plants as round as an apple, just covered with buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, at 60c, 75c, \$1.00, \$1.25, \$1.50, \$1.75 and \$2.00 each. Other fine varieties adapted for American markets, such as Niobe, Bernard Andre, Alba, Deutsche Perle (double white), Prof. Wolters, Empress of India, Vervaneana (double varie-gated), and about eight more fine sorts, all covered with buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 75c, \$1.00, \$1.25, \$1.50, \$1.75 and \$2.00 each; 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 6-in. pots, 50c to 60c.
We have a fine limited quantity of azaleas, 50c to 60c each, such as Apollo (double dark scarlet), Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, and a few others.

Hydrangea Otaka (pink), 6 to 7-in. pots,
40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; also $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Spiraea Gladstone, 6 to 7-in. pots, these plants are very large and bushy and unusually fine, full of buds, at 50c, 75c and $1.00 each.

Look! Our Spiraea Gladstone are of such immense size that one of them makes an armful;
6-in. pots, 50c; 7-in. pots, 75c.

Crimson Rambler Roses, 3 feet high and over, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, five years old, 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, width the same as height, very swell stuff, $1.75,
$2.00 to $2.50 each.

From lands afar, where the choicest are.

I gather the plants, I supply,
Or grow my own, with care unknown;
So the best are the sort you buy.
Then send in your orders and see your trade grow;
None can surpass Aschmann, wherever you go.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, 4 years old, 4 tiers, 20 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.
Specimen Glauca, 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 5 tiers, 30 to 35 inches high, $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 4 years old, 6-in. pots, 20 to 25 inches high, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up one large plant in center, 3 small around, $1.50 to $1.75 each. Single plants, 36, 45 to 50 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Cineraria Hybrida, have a house full all shades, 5, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 6-in. pots, \$2.50, \$3.00, \$4.00 to \$5.00 per doz.

Begonia, new improved Erfordii, an immense bloomer, blooming the entire summer and winter, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. pots, \$3.00 per doz.; 4-in. pots, \$1.80 per doz.

Primula Obconica, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. pots, \$2.50 per doz.;
4-in. pots, $1.80 per doz.

Areca Sapida (palms), 6-in. pots, 50c each.

Dracaena Bruanti, 6-in. pots, 50c each.

Ferns. Nephrolepis Barrowii, 6-in. pots,
50c to 75c each; 7-in. pots, $1.00.

Scottii, 8-in. pots, very large, \$1.50 each; 5-in pots, 35c each; 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 6-in. pots, 50c.

Boston Ferns, 7-in. pots, 75c; 6-in. pots, 40c to 50c each; 5-in. pots, 25c to 30c each.

Holly Ferns, 3-in. pots, $1.20 per doz.

Hyacinths, raised from first-class bulbs of my own importation. These bulbs cannot be compared with ordinary stuff flooding the market. King of the Blues, Lavender (blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (white), 4-in.
pots, $12.00 per 100.

Touneol Tulips, red and yellow variegated, the best selling Tulips on the market. Will stay in bloom 10 days. 3 bulbs planted in a 4-in. pot, $12.00 per 100 or $1.50 per doz.

Double Von Slon Daffodils, the best double yellow narcissus in the world, will sell on sight.
3 double-nosed bulbs planted in 5, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ and 6-in.
pots, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. pots.

Have about 200 pots Von Slon Daffodils, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ -in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, in greenhouse now, in bud ready to open for immediate sale at \$2.00 per doz. This is a special offer, only good for a few weeks.

Moonvines, Ipomaea Noctiflora (A. W.
Smith, originator), best pure white, largest and most fragrant moonvine in the world. I made a specialty of them for the past 15 years and am known as the Moonvine Grower of America and grow yearly about 20,000. In 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ -in. pots, \$5.00 per 100. Now ready.

Directions to visit my place: Take Germantown or Willow Grove car at 13th and Market Sts. to Ontario St., or 8th and Market St., and take Germantown, Chestnut Hill or Willow Grove car to Ontario St. In going either route you walk two squares east on Ontario St.

Mention if pots are wanted with all plants.
Cash with order, please.

All goods must travel on purchaser's risk.

LATROBE, PA., Feb. 18, 1907.

MR. GODFREY ASCHMANN.

Dear Sir—I received your plants in good condition, satisfactory to me. I am pleased in every way.

Respectfully,

EDW. LEIZMANN.

(Above order amounted to $86.25, for 55 azaleas, 19 kentias and araucarias and ferns.)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.

I have seen Mr. Aschmann's Easter stock and I can truthfully say that it never looked finer, and he never before had such a large stock. Am pleased to recommend our customers to Mr.
Aschmann.

MR. G. ASCHMANN.

Dear Sir—Lilies received to-day in fine condition. Am very much pleased with them; not a bud damaged.

Thanking you for your kindness, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

F. S. LUTHER,

Importer and Wholesale Grower of Pot Plants

1012 ONTARIO STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

Carl Jurgens has secured a lease of two large tracts of land adjoining his greenhouse property. Mr. Jurgens felt compelled to acquire this land, either by lease or purchase, because of his rapidly increasing business and the need of land for summer planting.

Andrew Christensen will, immediately after April 1, begin business as a jobbing gardener and, in connection with that, grow a general line of bedding plants. He is now busy thinking out the problem of the best kind of greenhouse to build.

A visit to the greenhouses of E. T. Gerry never fails to be interesting not only because of the extent of the houses and the uniform good quality of everything grown there, but also because Mr. Griffin, the gardener, is usually the first in Newport to procure a sample of a novelty when it is introduced; in fact, everything of merit in the plant line that is new or rare finds a home here.

The conference on rural progress which is to be held here March 26 will give horticulturists a chance to hear Professor L. H. Bailey, dean of the College of Agriculture, of Cornell University, speak on "The Point of View in Rural Progress," and H. L. Clapp, on "School Gardens."

The Newport Horticultural Society has decided to give liberal premiums to school children for wild flowers, cultivated flowers and vegetables; also, in appreciation of the work of the promoters of the school gardens, the society will award, at the end of the season, liberal premiums for the best school gardens in the city; the gardens to be judged at intervals throughout the season by Mr. Butterton, the president of the society.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The first annual banquet of the Tri-City Florists' Association, embracing the florists of Davenport, Moline and Rock Island, was held March 11 at Turner hall. Nearly every member of the society was present and the affair was a success in every way. The table decorations were among the most elaborate ever seen in the city.

Theodore Ewoldt acted as toastmaster and a wide variety of topics was discussed in the toasts. Among them were the propositions of organizing a tri-city horticultural society and giving an annual flower show. Mr. Ewoldt gave the opening talk on the subject, "Should the Club Hold an Annual Flower Show?" The other talks were as follows:

"The Organization of a Tri-City Horticultural Society"—J. T. Temple.

"Funeral Work"—William Knees.

"Efficient Florists' Help"—Henry Meyer.

"Store Decoration"—Harry Bills.

"Greenhouse Construction"—John Staack.

"General Plant Trade"—Henry Gaethge, Sr.

"Cemetery Trade"—H. G. Pauli.

"Carnation Growing"—Ludwig Stapp.

"Influence of Parks on the Florists' Trade"—C. O. E. Boehm.

"Has Our Club Furthered a Feeling of Friendship and Goodfellowship Among Its Members?"—George Forber.

"Delivering Florists' Stock"—Henry Gaethge, Jr.

"Nursery Stock"—H. G. Bryant.

"Private Grounds"—Elmer Ekstam and Peter Becker.

"Decorative Plants"—Frank Woelz.

"Landscape Architecture, Its Effect on the Florists' Trade"—A. Arp.

The next meeting of the club will be held March 21 at Fejervary park. At the April meeting the wives of the members will be present.

ELYRIA, O.—The L. C. Hecock Floral Co. has been incorporated with $20,000 authorized capital stock.

The writer, in company with Walter Weber, of St. Louis, went out to see an old friend, John Steidle, and his modern place at Central, and found the carnations in unexcelled condition. Mr. Steidle has made a specialty of the divine flower for a number of years and certainly has made a great success of it. This is his first year with roses and they have done well; there was only a bench of Brides that was a little off in health, but fast recuperating. He has cut a great many fine blooms during the season. He grows exclusively for Fred C. Weber.

Next we visited Mr. Steidle's neighbor, A. Jablonsky. Here, also, we found carnations looking well, full of blooms and buds. Roses have not done so well as Mr. Jablonsky could wish, but, like all good growers, he has his back up and says he will make the queen of flowers come to time next season.

From there Mr. Steidle drove us over to J. W. Dunford's place. He also makes a specialty of carnations. A big bench or more of Lawson was fine. He grows a great many Boston Market, a rather small flower, but a wonderful producer, as it was a regular sea of buds. Mr. Dunford says that his wholesale trade demands this variety. He has a great lot of lilies. Some are very good, one lot in particular; another lot was disappointing. He grows a good many callas, also bedding plants. He has 15,000 geraniums ready to pot up.

Although the weather was wretched the greater part of the day, how much lighter all the houses looked in comparison with ours so near the city. Plants have a different appearance within the city's smoke. We were tired out with our long ride, but felt amply repaid for our visit. F. J. F.

THE JOHN C. MONINGER CO., Manufacturers of Louisiana Red Cypress Greenhouse Construction Lumber, Blackhawk St., Cor. Hawthorne Ave., Chicago, Ill., under date of November 14, 1906, says: "We first began using Cypress exclusively for greenhouse construction in 1885, using it previous to that time in conjunction with pine. The greenhouses built with clear Cypress, free of sap, twenty-one years ago are being used today by their owners, and the wood is found perfectly preserved and free from any decay or rot."

BASSETT & WASHBURN, Growers and Wholesale Dealers in Cut Flowers, Florists' Supplies, etc., 76-78 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., under date of November 20, 1906, say: "Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has at all rotted out. We formerly used Hemlock and Pine but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose."

PANCRATIUM MARITIMUM.

The instance of this splendid bulb remaining so much of a rarity after 300 years' cultivation is an example of what one loses in the race for novelties, few of which are the equal of old-time bulbs grown so well by our forefathers, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine.

"The greatest charm of Pancratium maritimum lies in its exquisite refinement—a character that can always be welcomed in preference to gaudy coloring, because so few plants possess it. I have met with isolated patches in several parts of Great Britain, chiefly in the gardens of specialists, and well believe it to be hardy everywhere, provided it has the driest and warmest position the garden affords. It has a glaucous tuft of leaves, handsome as such, two feet high and through, and in the autumn produces showy umbels of pure white flowers, semi-transparent, and a marvel of delicate texture. The flowers span from three to four inches, and have slender petals, prominent funnel-shaped staminal cups that support very short stamens, and their fragrance is exceptionally sweet."

The Wittbold Watering System

FOR GREENHOUSE AND FIELD WATERING.

It consists of pipes and nozzles so arranged that a CONTINUOUS SHEET OF WATER the full length of the line can be supplied, and at the will of the operator can be directed upward from underneath the plants, downward from above the plants or parallel with a bench so that only the soil in the bench is watered. It can be used for syringing or watering. An entire house can be watered or syringed in only a few minutes. It is a permanent asset after being once installed, as it will never wear out, it is inexpensive and will save its cost in hose and labor in the first six months.

To show the small cost of equipping an acre of ground for outside watering as far as nozzles and swivel wheels are concerned, will submit the following figures: There are approximately 44,000 square feet to the acre. My $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch nozzle will, with a good pressure, cover 300 square feet of ground and by first watering on one side of pipe and then on the other side, each nozzle will cover 600 square feet, or about 80 nozzles to the acre, which will cost \$12.00 per acre for nozzles. Four swivel wheels will easily control the nozzles on an acre. These at \$2.00 each, \$8, would make the cost of wheels and nozzles only \$20.00 per acre.

HERE ARE LETTERS FROM WELL-PLEASED USERS:

"Some time ago we put in 100 feet of your system on trial and it has given perfect satisfaction. Send 500 feet more at once and we shall wait 1800 feet additional as soon as our new houses are ready. We think the system a very good thing and consider the labor saved will pay for the apparatus in one season."

DAVIS BROS., Morrison, Ill.

"We wish to have our entire range fitted up with your watering system. We are much pleased with the working of the section which we have in at present and are perfectly satisfied that the time will be very short till all up-to-date growers will use the Wittbold system instead of the present method of watering with the hose. When the nozzles are properly spaced, they throw exactly the same amount of water to all parts of the bench."

W. B. DAVIS & Co., Cucumber Growers, Aurora, Ill.

"It is a fine thing and I wonder why greenhouse men have not taken hold more. It should come into general use. It puts the water on more evenly than the average man will with the hose."

STEPHEN HYDE, Vegetable Grower, Carthage, Mo.

"We have your system in one of our Ficus houses; it is working fine and is doing as much as ten men would do in the old way in the same time. We like it so well that as soon as we can arrange for water supply we shall equip our whole place."

A. C. OELSCHIG & SON, Savannah, Ga.

Also can be seen in use at Vaughan's greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill.; George Wittbold Co., Chicago; A. Abten, New Orleans; South Bend Floral Co., South Bend, Ind., and other places.

The system can be fed from one end if sufficient pressure is available and a swivel wheel used to turn the pipe. This is the most simple means of giving same a trial. Swivel wheel will cost \$2.00 and $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch nozzles (which can be screwed into tees or tapped into pipe), 15c each. These can be placed on pipe from 10 to 20 feet apart, according to pressure of water.

A swivel wheel and 20 nozzles which will cost $5, will be the best investment a florist or vegetable grower can make and will show exactly what the system will do.

SPECIAL ROSE NOZZLE.

Endorsed by all rose growers who have tried it. Gives water an uppercut with sufficient force to dislodge insects.

Price, postpaid, $1.00 each.

THE WITTBOLD HOSE NOZZLE

for greenhouse or garden use is far superior to anything on the market, the spray can be changed instantly from a fine fan-shaped spray into any form or shape the operator may desire, by simply pushing a sleeve backward and forward. This can be done as quickly as taking the finger on and off the hose.

Price, postpaid, $1.00.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOT WATER HEATING.

For four years I have read the REVIEW and noted carefully the articles on hot water heating, by L. C. C. In the main I agree with him, but not always.

I believe that all will agree that a hot water boiler should be so constructed as to contain the minimum amount of water, with the maximum amount of heating surface. By this means we more nearly approach steam as to quickness of heating. While much of the efficiency of the boiler depends on the firing and the way it is handled, upon which much could be said, it is about the circulation that I wish to write. We all know that if the pipes fail to heat, they fail of their purpose; and, too, the full benefit of the fuel consumed is not obtained. Therefore with poor circulation we fail to secure the full efficiency of the boiler.

In piping, I believe there is no difference whether the highest point in the system is directly above the boiler, or at the far end of the houses. I would govern this by existing conditions. If the valleys of the greenhouses slope toward the boiler, then the flow pipes can parallel the purlins, which would afford the necessary rise to the far end of the houses. If the valleys slope from the boiler, the highest point should be above the boiler, in which case the flows can again parallel the purlins, affording the proper fall times the capacity of the flow, then the water in the flow pipe must move three times as fast as in the returns, if circulation is even. One can easily see that, with this proportion, a slight cause, such as a sag in some of the pipes, would induce the water to take to the returns unevenly. Where the returns are six times the capacity of the flow this tendency would be greatly increased.

While the force of expansion in heated water is strong, yet, like all forces, it follows the least resistance. This is a simple fact, but often unheeded in installing a system. The placing of the manifolds is a fruitful source of bad circulation. I can best illustrate this point by sketches, as shown below:

It will be seen at a glance that the manifolds in figures 1 and 2 are alike and also in figures 3 and 4, the difference in the radiator being in the reversed manifolds. In figures 1 and 3 the water has a short, medium and long cut and, if it has its own way, as it surely has, it will take the short cut with greater velocity and thus the circulation is impeded. In figures 2 and 4 there are no short or long cuts, the distances through each pipe being exactly the same. In this case, other things being equal, the circulation will be perfect.

Figure 5 is a common form of manifold and is all wrong and no amount of reversing can make it right, except to reverse it into the junk pile.

This placing of the manifolds is cerhouse were 100 feet the flow would still have capacity to supply 1,200 square feet of radiation, which, if supplied in 3-inch pipes, would mean twelve 3-inch returns in the house. So you see it is impossible to base the relation between flow and returns on size and number of pipes alone. The only just and safe way is as above described. Because builders and plumbers do not give these matters due weight, I believe it is safe to say that ninety per cent of the greenhouse plants are piped without regard to capacities, and at a consequent loss, because of undue outlay for pipes which bear no relation to the work to be done. L. C. C.

PIPE FOR ONE GREENHOUSE.

I am erecting a new even-span north and south house, 16x50. The sides are three feet nine inches high, double matched boards with sheathing paper between; ridge, seven and one-half feet high, no glass in the ends. Will you please give the amount of pipe needed and size of the returns and flows, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees to 55 degrees in zero weather? Also, where should be the highest point in the system? I have a 3x10 horizontal brick-set boiler with thirty tubes three inches in diameter. Please give amount of radiation the boiler will carry. G. H. W.

The house in question can be heated by using ten runs of 2-inch pipe or by thirteen runs of 1½-inch pipe. If you wish to keep all pipes under the benches back to the far end and down to the returns.

Each house should have its own system from and to the boiler. This is absolutely necessary. The flow pipe may be branched on entering the house, each paralleling the purlins or under the ridge and branched at the far end. The expansion tank should be directly above the boiler and preferably enter the boiler at one of the returns. It should be slightly higher than the highest point in the system. There should be an air-vent in each flow pipe at its highest point. This may be a small air-cock, which should be opened at least once a day, in severe weather, to allow air to escape; or, it may be in the form of small pipes extending slightly higher than the top of the expansion tank, in which case they may be left open.

As to comparative capacity of flows and returns, that is where I think L. C. C. is in error. In no case would I advise (if for myself, allow) the returns to be more than three times the capacity of the flow. L. C. C., in one case, advised a 3-inch flow and six 3-inch returns. In the February 21 issue of the REVIEW he advises W. E. D. to use a 3½-inch flow and seventeen 2-inch returns, which is almost the same proportion.

It is clear that if the returns are three tains a simple, plain proposition, and yet, when down under a bench, the wrong way may be much the easier to install. The easier way will invariably be taken by those who have not the success of the system at stake.

Then it is important that the returns from the radiators to the boiler be exactly the same as the flow from the boiler to radiators. Any other plan will impede circulation. For a house 25x100 the flow from the boiler should be 5-inch, which may be divided in the house as in above outline. The return radiators should be connected to a 5-inch pipe into the boiler. I am aware that this will be considered expensive by some. But after all, is it not the results, the satisfaction, the real fuel economy, that should in all cases be considered? I firmly believe that my system thus installed has saved me in two years at least $100 in fuel.

S. C. TEMPLIN.

The relation which exists between flows and returns in heating pipes cannot be determined by the number of pipes. The relation is that capacity to furnish a determined amount of radiation. To illustrate: A 3½-inch riser has capacity to supply 1,200 square feet of radiating surface. This would be equivalent to three 3-inch pipes, each 400 feet long, but if the length of the

you can divide the ten 2-inch pipes as follows: Two 2-inch flows each supplying four 2-inch returns. I prefer to have the highest point in the hot water flow at the most distant point in the system.

Your 3x10 boiler is probably rated at eighteen or twenty horse-power and should be capable of supplying heat for about 2,350 square feet of radiating surface.

L. C. C.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

We have one house, 14x70, set three feet in the ground, so that the gutter is slightly above the ground and six feet from the gutter line to the ridge. We have a No. 3 Boynton hot water heater, outside the greenhouse, set so that the top of the heater is slightly below the level of the greenhouse floor. We have one 3-inch flow running under the ridge and returning through twelve 1½-inch returns, six on each side of the house, which heats it easily. Now, we want to build another house and leave the two houses disconnected for one winter, the new house to be 20x90 and six feet to the gutter line, with good side walls; but we want three feet of glass from the gutter line down on the south side. Will the heater carry both houses at carnation temperature when it is 20 degrees below zero outdoors? If not, what length of the large house will it

SUPERIOR

GREENHOUSE BOILERS

Superior because made of the same STEEL as high-pressure boilers; no sections to give way on a cold night, as with cast iron heaters—it isn't fair to call them "boilers." Made in the good, old-fashioned conscientious way, of HEAVIER steel than any other steel boiler; naturally they last longer.

LARGEST HEATING SURFACE. MOST PERFECT COMBUSTION. BEST OF CIRCULATION INSURED

READ WHAT A FEW USERS SAY:

"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. Night after night the past severe winter weather gave your boilers a good test. We are more than pleased with the Superior Boiler."—TREANOR & RETTIG, South Bend, Ind.

"We are running twelve of your Superior Boilers and find them satisfactory in every respect. They are not only good heaters, but economical to operate. We shall be pleased to have florists visit our place to see these boilers working."—PETER REINBERG, Chicago.

You wouldn't expect the Superior Boiler to be cheaper than the inferior boiler, except in the long run, would you?

heat besides the small one, and what system of piping would you advise? There will be a half bench on each outside and two full benches in the center. The grate surface of the heater is about 19x29 inches. E. & B.

No! The boiler is not large enough to carry one-half the proposed new house in addition to the one you already have. The new house can be piped in the same fashion as the one you already have, which you say gives good service. The new house should have a 3-inch flow pipe and eleven lines of 2-inch pipe, or fourteen lines of 1½-inch pipe installed as returns.

The boiler has a rated capacity for 700 feet of radiation, while the two houses should have 1,050 feet, and the heater should have a rated capacity for at least 1,200 feet to be on the safe side. L. C. C.

FACTORS IN HEATING PROBLEM.

I note in his answer to A. R., your heating engineer, L. C. C., says glass surface is only one of the factors in a heating problem. He was given the temperature desired, and the outdoor temperature. Probably he allowed for only moderately well built houses, but I would like to know what are the other factors in a heating problem. Perhaps all of us are overlooking essential details for lack of expert knowledge. H. O.

For the satisfaction of my friend H. O., I wish to say that glass area is, as a rule, only a part of the exposure of the ordinary greenhouse. In calculating heating requirements we consider the total surface exposed, sides and ends as well as roof. The question of type of construction also enters; i. e., whether the houses are connected, ridge and furrow, or isolated; the character of heat to be used, and also the climate in which the houses are located. This will explain why it has been our custom to request data in regard to the length, height of side walls, height to ridge, temperature desired, minimum outdoor temperature, the type of construction and the exposure. TWO HOUSES AND DWELLING.

I wish to heat two even-span houses, one 20x50, with brick walls four feet high and rafters twelve feet long, the other 20x30, with walls four and one-half feet high and rafters twelve feet long. In connection with these two houses I wish to heat a dwelling, one story, 25x50, containing three rooms and a hall only that will need to be heated.

I have a twenty horse-power tubular steam boiler, thirty-three inches in diameter, containing twenty-eight 3-inch flues eight feet long. The boiler has a dome and the flow has 4-inch taps at the dome. How deep should I dig the boiler-pit for a hot water system? I have about 500 feet of 2½-inch pipe, 800 feet of 2-inch, three 2-inch valves, three 2½-inch valves and one 3½ or 4½-inch valve. How many radiators and what number of sections will the house require and the number of flows and returns for the greenhouses? The boiler is just back of the 20x30 greenhouse. Would you advise gest that it be eighteen inches or two feet lower, so that in case it should be desirable to run the plant as a steam plant the boiler would be set properly. You can use your own preference in regard to the location of the main flow pipes in the houses. They may be carried under the ridge to the far end of the houses and there divided to supply the 2-inch returns, or you can divide the main flow at the entrance of the house and carry an independent branch for each coil on the side walls. If a single flow is provided the house 20x50 feet should have a 2½-inch flow and thirteen 2-inch returns, six on the south and seven on the north wall. A 2-inch main flow from the boiler to the far end of the house 20x30 feet will be sufficient to feed the thirteen 2-inch returns arranged as above described.

I cannot guess at the size of the radiators you will need, but you can figure the cubic contents of each room to be heated and allow one square foot of surface in the radiator for each thirty cubic feet of space in the room. If you have only three rooms to heat a 2½-inch flow pipe direct from boiler to the house should be sufficient to heat it. Probably a 2-inch pipe would be sufficient, but I cannot give accurate sizes without knowing the dimensions of the rooms and their exposure.

being displaced by the return steam trap. Although a great improvement over the old methods, the steam trap at the introductory period had one main drawback; it was too complicated. Mr. Morehead, of Detroit, designed and introduced to the trade a tilting trap, which was quickly taken up by many large and well-known growers, and is now in quite general use. The trap will take water from the condensing surfaces of steam heating systems and automatically return it into the boiler as feed water, filling the dual capacity of steam trap and feed water pump. This is accomplished regardless of the position of the returns, whether above or below the water line in the boiler. The salient features of this useful invention are admirably brought out in an attractive booklet compiled especially for florists and published by the Morehead Mfg. Co., 1043 Grand River avenue, Detroit.

POOR CIRCULATION.

I am having trouble with my heating pipes. My house is 14x75. Both flows and returns are 2-inch pipes from the boiler up to where the coils begin. Then I have five lines of 1¼-inch flows and one line of 1¼-inch returns under each bench. I find that the pipes under the benches fail to heat up, for the circulation is poor.

W. L. K.

Your heating system is connected up just wrong end to. If you will arrange the slope in the five lines of 1¼-inch pipe so they fall towards the boiler, and take off a 2-inch return at the point where the 2-inch flow now enters, and

Seeing Chicago

THIS IS WHAT THE CRIER IS SAYING:

"On my left you will see the well-known Kroeschell Hot Water Greenhouse Boiler. It is the invention of Charles Kroeschell, one of the oldest and best known boiler manufacturers in the country. He makes all kinds of boilers for all purposes.

"From 20 years of experience in the building of greenhouse boilers, he has developed this wonderful article, which is acknowledged by all who have used them to be the only perfect heater in the world.

"The Hot Water Boilers sold by this firm last year alone are heating 2,158,000 square feet of glass!

"Mr. Kroeschell has just constructed a new Jumbo Size, No. 15, which will take care of 50,000 square feet of glass, maintaining a temperature of 80 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero.

"This is said to be the largest Hot Water Greenhouse Boiler in the world.

"If any of you gentlemen are florists, be sure to write Kroeschell Bros. for prices and particulars if you are in need of a boiler. They will furnish you boilers for the smallest as well as the largest greenhouses."

carry the 2-inch flow to the far end of the house and have it connect at the opposite end of the manifold to where the 1 1/4-inch return is now taken off, your plant should give good service, provided you have radiation enough. The piping as rearranged should maintain 60 degrees to 65 degrees. L. C. C.

SIZE OF BOILER.

What horse-power tubular boiler would be required to heat 10,000 feet of glass to 55 degrees in Massachusetts climate? The houses are low and have no glass in the side walls. Please give size and height of the smokestack. M. W.

While I do not like to estimate heating capacity on glass area stated in round numbers, I think a thirty horse-power boiler should be large enough for the area you state. An 18-inch smokestack twenty-five or thirty feet tall, depending upon adjacent objects, should be sufficient. L. C. C.

EUONYMUS RADICANS.

The variegated variety of this euonymus has long been known as a pretty little shrub for various purposes. In the first place, it makes a neat edging after the manner of box; next, it will carpet the ground beneath the shade of trees as well as ivy; while for furnishing balconies, window-boxes, etc., it has few equals. A singular feature, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, is that if trained to a wall it often mounts upward quickly, and sometimes from the topmost portion large leaves are developed, which just resemble those of Euonymus Japonicus latifolius albus. This feature is referred to by Professor Sargent in his "Forest Flora of Japan," for after speaking of Euonymus Japonicus he refers to E. radicans in the following terms: "The scandent variety is a hardier plant found carpeting the ground under the forests of Hokkaido, and in the mountain regions of Hondo climbing high on the trunks of trees, which it encircles with great masses of lustrous foliage borne on stout branches standing out at right angles, sometimes to the length of several feet. The leaves vary from one inch to four inches or five inches in length, and correspondingly in width, and show the connection of the climbing plant with the arborescent type."

BLACK FLY.

Can you tell me what will kill black fly? I have been bothered with it for some time. Kerosene emulsion does not affect it. M. K.

Fumigation with tobacco stems on successive nights will kill black fly. If you have tender plants, likely to be injured by the smoke from stems, use nicotine extract or aphid punk and increase the strength if you don't get results the first time. If chrysanthemums are infested it is a good plan to drop a little tobacco dust on the top of the shoots. If you prefer to keep the fly down by syringing, try any of the tobacco liquids diluted in water. These won't hurt the plants if properly diluted but kill every fly they hit. For outdoor work we find whale-oil soap the best insecticide to use. C. W.

Do You Know ^{THAT} WHEAT on the Chicago Board of Trade recently advanced nearly 4 cents per bushel because of the ravages of Aphis in the Southwest? This is the same Aphis that attacks greenhouse crops.

Use TO-BAK-INE

as a preventive as well as a cure. The Tried and Sure Remedy for Aphis and Thrips on all greenhouse crops. Book of testimonials sent on request.

TO-BAK-INE LIQUID is a 45% solution of pure nicotine (the strongest made.) It has been used successfully for years by vaporizing by heat, but the latest and best method is to SPRAY THROUGH A SIMPLEX PUMP.

To-bak-Ine Liquid in cans: ¼ pint, 60c; ½ pint, $1.10; 1 pint, $2.00; 1 quart, $3.95; 1 gallon, $15.00.

Also put up in 10, 20 and 40-gallon casks with locked faucet.

To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Paper, per box (12 double rolls) 60c; per case, (12 boxes) $6 50.

To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Powder, 50-lb. or 100-lb. sack, per lb., 3c. Write for free sample.

SIMPLEX SPRAY PUMP

The successful use of To-Bak-Ine Liquid as a spray depends largely on the pump and nozzle that is used in spraying. There are a great many pumps and spraying machines on the market; these have all been carefully tested in our experiments and we have found that for practical purposes the Simplex Spray Pump illustrated on this page is the most practical of any in use. These are all brass pumps, excellent for all kinds of spraying purposes, but are especially adapted for greenhouse use.

HYBRID DEUTZIAS.

Quite a number of hybrid deutzias have been put in commerce during the last ten years by V. Lemoine & Sons, Nancy, France. About all tested in this country have turned out meritorious acquisitions. The first was named Deutzia Lemoinei, and said to be the result of crossing D. gracilis with D. parviflora. The pure white flowers are borne on strong, rather upright branches in the greatest profusion. While less dwarf in habit than D. gracilis, it is highly decorative outside, and has proved entirely hardy in New York state. It is well liked by florists and is used in increasing quantity for pot culture under glass. The blooms open well at comparatively low temperatures, and the flowering time is readily hastened by increased heat, so that it is an easily manageable subject. A dwarfier and more compact form having the same general character but more useful for greenhouse blooming has been disseminated under the name of D. Lemoinei compacta.

The union of D. glacilis with D. discolor purpurascens has rewarded Lemoine with an especially distinct lot of hybrids, with large, bell-shaped flowers, with predominating rose and pink colors. The best known in this country are D. campanulata, with nearly white, broadly bell-shaped blooms, and D. gracilis rosea, with smaller rose-colored blooms. Among more recent promising varieties, says a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, is D. discolor grandiflora, with the largest flowers of all, quite an inch in diameter, light pink with a deeper shade on the reverse of the petals. D. kalmiaeflora, with clusters of pink flowers, disposed in broad clusters like our mountain laurel, is highly spoken of abroad, and D. Fleur de Pommier (Apple-blossom) is also regarded as particularly choice. New varieties are issued every year by this enterprising nursery, but they are slow in finding their way to this country.

THALICTRUM PURPUREUM.

A new addition to noteworthy hardy flowers that one can recommend for general cultivation will be found in the American Thalictrum purpureum, says a writer in an English gardening paper. It is doubtless a variety of the European T. aquilegæfolium, with which it agrees somewhat in habit, but from which it is distinct in its inflorescence.

It is a sturdy border plant, a yard high, having blue-purple stems furnished with columbine-like leafage in elegant fan-like sprays at intervals, and the finest inflorescence of any thalictrum save that of T. glaucum. The general coloring of young flower heads is a deep mauve, but as they age a charming tint of rosy heliotrope succeeds the deep mauve, and persists till the flowers fall. The inflorescences consist of plummy masses of mauve stamens, exceed a foot in diameter, and are more freely branched than in aquilegæfolium; hence the heads appear looser and altogether more elegant.

The flowers of T. purpureum are of little or no use for cutting, the stems being hollow and unable to take up water freely; despite this drawback, the plants are second to none for grouping in the flower border, as their rich and uncommon coloring attracts at once. One should isolate this thalictrum from brilliant reds, yellows, and other combatant colors, or its delicate beauty will be utterly spoiled.

COPPER SULPHATE SOLUTION.

I have lost the formula for the copper solution. Will you kindly furnish it?
W. C. S.

The Florists' Manual gives the formula, as follows:

Copper sulphate, one pound.

Water, fifteen gallons.

Dissolve the copper in the water, when it is ready for use. This should not be used on any foliage, but can be used on the wood of trees and shrubs before the buds start.

GREENHOUSE MATERIAL

A. DIETSCH CO., 621 Sheffield Ave., Chicago

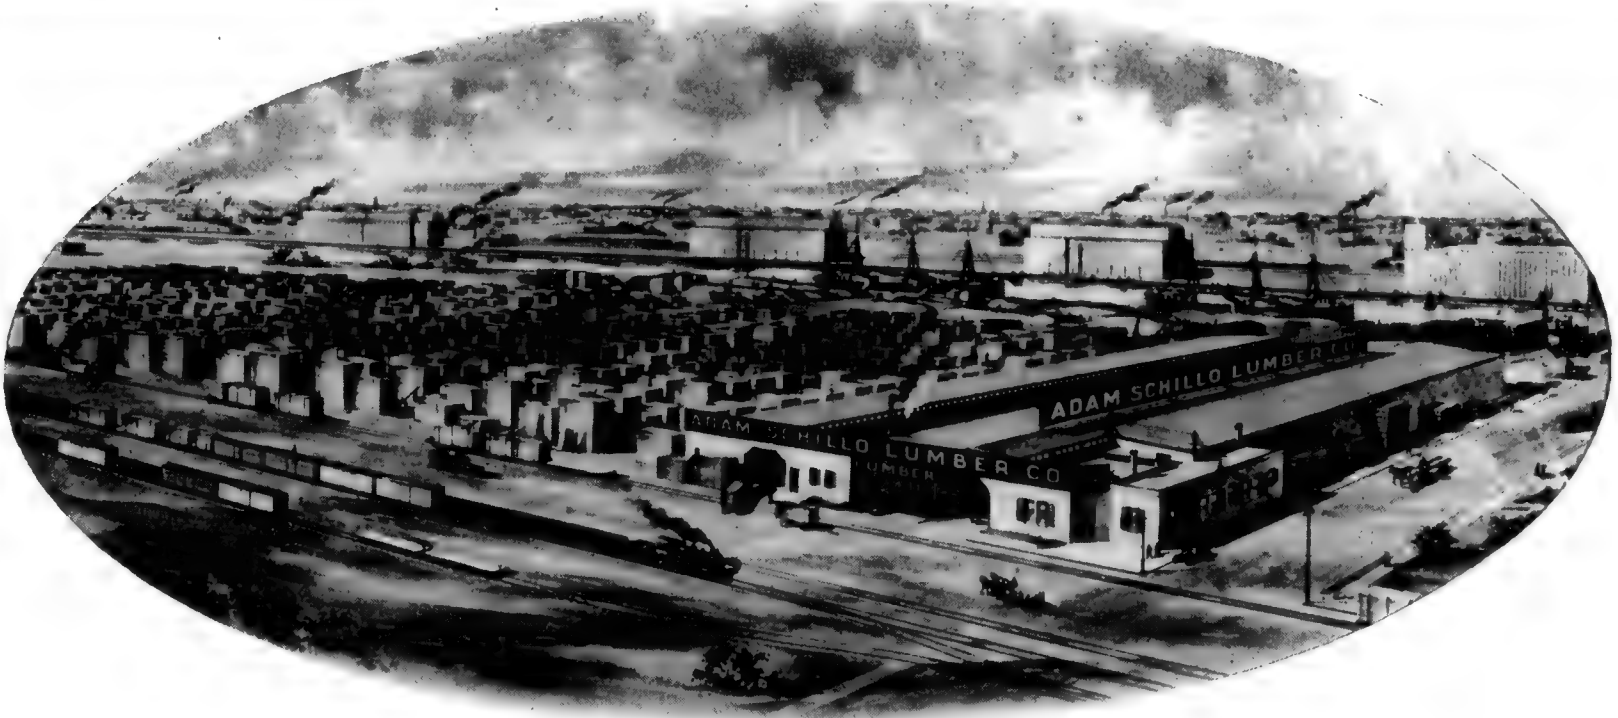

There IS a Test for You to Make

You don't care how much we test the material or how much it was inspected before shipment if you find that your houses are going to pieces in four or five years and that the repair bills amount to almost as much as the original cost of material—do you? You are not looking for smooth advertisements gotten up to sell something that you find afterwards was misrepresented—are you? But if your greenhouse material, after the houses are erected, stands the test of durability, if they stand the test of products and you get more out of them than the others you bought from another firm, then only are you contented. If you are looking for honest values and for cypress material that will stand any test you can make, we want to tell you something about our product. Of course we make our own tests and employ an expert to inspect all the cypress three times before it is shipped, but we want you to test it too. Here's a line from one of our customers about durability:

Gentlemen: I am pleased to say that the two houses furnished me in 1896 are lasting better than those I purchased of other firms.

A TALK ON KNOWING THE PRICE OF EVERYTHING AND THE VALUE OF NOTHING

It's this way: you want a house—want it this spring—want it up-to-date, but not so up-to-date it hasn't been thoroughly tried out. So you write to a number of material supply concerns for their estimates on cypress houses. Then you write to two or three of the standard greenhouse construction companies and we are included along with the rest. We look your proposition over and advise building one of our Semi-iron Houses. Our estimate then is based not on an all-wood house—not on wooden posts, wooden eave plate—not on sashbars toe-nailed directly on that heavy shade-casting plate of wood—not on giving you materials that mean repairs almost at once and a chance for us to sell you the repairs. But that estimate is based on a house with Galvanized Ice Clearing Eave Plate and Sashbar Clasps—based on Angle Iron Posts and Cast Iron Foot Pieces—based on Pipe Purlins and Interchangeable Pipe Column Fittings, making that rigid Giant Arch running the entire length of the house. It's based on a house that is built to stay—one that has all sappy parts of the Cypress sawed out and burned up. It's an estimate that will give you, dollar for dollar, more value than any other sashbar house that's made. In an honest comparison of materials and constructions our estimate is not high—the other fellow's is not low. Thousands of feet of that Eave Plate

Interior of a Semi-iron House. Wonderfully light, but rigid. Costs a little more to build than an all-wood house, but it will cost more if you don't build it.

are going out to growers who often buy their Cypress of local mills; they are buying our Iron Fittings and putting them in their houses because they want houses that last. Don't be bamboozled into buying shade traps, repair-drag materials—only the best is good enough for you. Write to Lord

Easter Aftermath.

By the time these notes appear in print benches of Easter plants should be pretty well cleaned out. We have all been taxed for room for some weeks and the passing of the lilies, azaleas, genistas and other Easter stock will give much room which is badly needed. The geraniums, as the most important bedding plants, have no doubt been quite badly crowded of late and should be spread out. Pull off any dead leaves and if you still have any remaining in 2½-inch pots give them a shift at once. It will pay to attend to these details now. It may mean 50 cents or 75 cents a dozen in their value Memorial day.

If any azaleas are left unsold do not throw them away. After blooming, pick off all seeds, keep them well watered and at the end of May plant outdoors where you can reach them with the hose daily; you will have fine plants for another Easter.

Genistas can be kept quite cool. Trim off the flowers with a pair of shears as they fade. Plunge them outside rather than plant them out, as they do not lift well from the open ground.

Any left-over herbaceous spiræas may be planted out in well manured ground. Leave them there until the fall of 1908. Dig up and force them and you will have clumps treble the size of the imported ones and giving far finer flowers. The clumps you will find need cutting into two or three to get them into 6-inch or 7-inch pots. Use your left-over spiræas in this way and see if returns are not much more satisfactory than from imported clumps, which sometimes fail to start at all.

Cannas will now be starting freely and some of the spare bench space will be needed for them. They always sell well and should have good attention now.

Do not allow any left-over Easter plants to be dotted here and there over the houses. Get them together in a batch and if any are not worth holding over throw them out and don't waste further energy in watering them.

Prepare for Memorial Day.

We have a longer breathing spell between Easter and Memorial day than in 1906 and this gives us a better chance to get our crops along for the latter holiday. Lilies should now be well above the ground. If six inches high they will be in season. Give them a night temperature of 60 degrees, but do not water too freely until satisfied they are well pot-bound. Many lilies are ruined in the early stages of growth by overwatering, and we would hear less of diseased stock if greater judgment were exercised with the hose. Spiræa Japonica and its various forms, if potted at once, will be in season for Memorial day. If large quantities are needed use boxes six to eight inches deep, two and one-half feet long and nine inches wide, and place several clumps in a box. The watering will then be more easily handled.

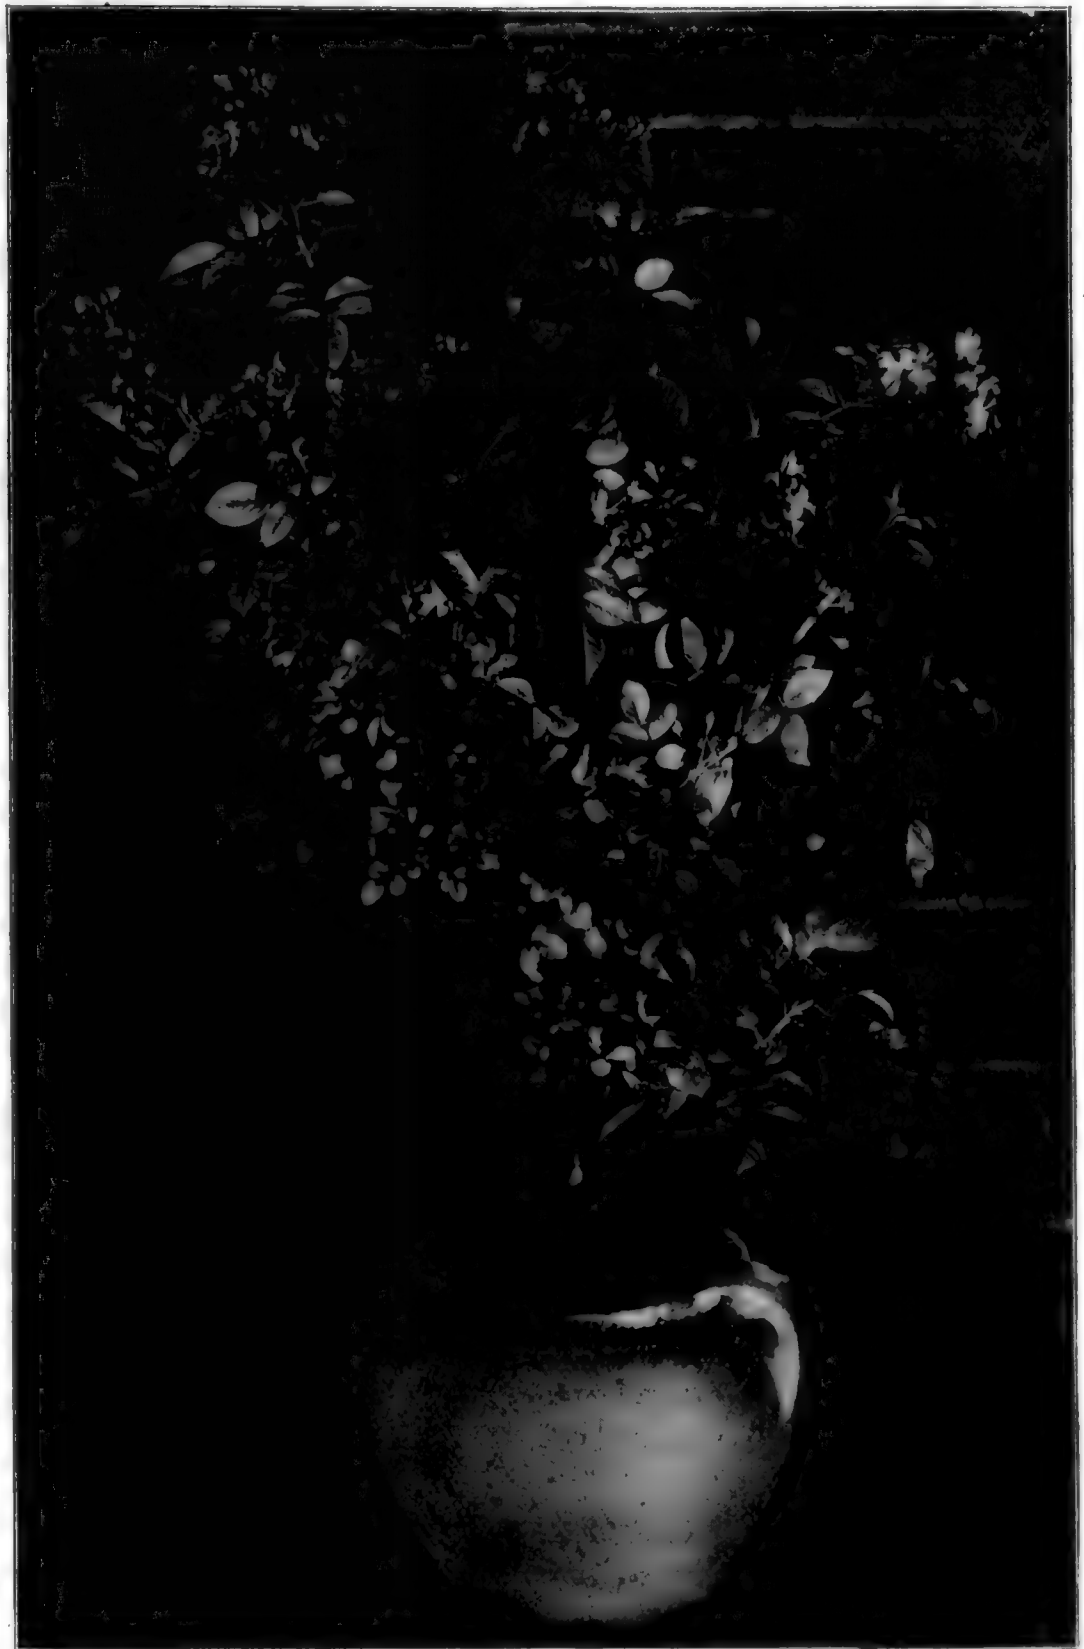

Crops of double feverfew and candy-tuft should receive close attention. Avoid a stuffy atmosphere. Plenty of ventilation and 50 degrees at night will suit them.

Planting and Pruning.

The arrival of spring means that many of our customers will want roses and various shrubs planted or pruned. This forsythias, loniceras, spiræas, deutzias, viburnums, weigelas and many others. Any necessary pruning should be done after flowering. On the other hand, that well-known and popular plant, Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, needs hard pruning back to secure fine flower heads. Cut it back to three or four eyes of last season's growth. Desmodium penduliflorum should be cut back now, also any other shrubs flowering on the new growth. How often do we see many of our handsome May and June-flowering shrubs trimmed with a balloon shape every spring by some thoughtless or ignorant workman.

The winter has been a rather trying one for hardy roses and but for generous snow protection they would have suffered severely. For the northern and western states pruning before April 1 is not advisable. Weak shoots should either be cut out altogether or shortened back to work cannot be left to any handy man, or more harm than good must result. Few men understand how to prune properly. Shrubs which bloom on wood made last year must not be pruned in spring. This applies to syringas, six inches. The strongest shoots should not be left over a foot long. This refers to hybrid perpetuals. Hybrid teas need light pruning and the removal of dead wood. For the ramblers removal of dead wood, shortening back the long shoots a little and cutting out the weakest if too crowded is all that is necessary.

Attend to the Seedlings.

As the days lengthen the sun increases in power and growth of all plants is accelerated. It will be necessary to watch the many flats and pans of seedlings closely. They are now growing fast and no doubt in the Easter rush many needing attention were neglected. Fibrous begonias need handling while quite small. The same applies to gloxinias, lobelias and many others growing from fine seeds. Use for all seedlings a compost with a good proportion of leaf-mold in it. If some well broken up cow manure is added or the manure from a spent hotbed or mushroom bed the seedlings will grow all the better. Shade all newly pricked-off nobile and Cymbidium Lowianum; J. E. Rothwell second and James Stuart third. The last named had an excellent specimen of Dendrobium nobile in his collection. Acacias were numerous shown and of grand quality. For twelve plants in not less than three varieties, Thomas Roland won first and a silver medal with a beautiful grown and flowered lot; Mrs. F. Ayer second. For specimen acacia, Mrs. Ayer was first and James Stuart second.

For climbing roses, M. H. Walsh was first and second for handsome specimens of Hiawatha and Lady Gay. He was also first and secured a silver medal for six ramblers, with a capital lot including several novelties. W. Whitman was first and second for twelve primroses and polyanthuses; Mrs. A. W. Blake, prizes went to Messrs. Stuart and Whitman. There was a strong class for six Cineraria stellata, W. Whitman taking first and second and Mrs. Gardner third. W. Whitman won first in every Dutch bulb class, also taking a number of second and third prizes. Other prize winners were Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Mrs. A. W. Blake. For quality all these exhibits were in the first class.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner took first and second for six schizanthuses. Mrs. J. M. Sears, W. C. Ritchie gardener, won for six amaryllises with a fine lot; James Stuart second. Mrs. J. L. Gardner was the only exhibitor of a collection of herbaceous spiræas. Sidney Hoffman had the best group of Easter flowering plants and W. Whitman won for best general display of spring bulbous plants, with a magnificent lot grandly grown, which were awarded also a cultural certificate. Mrs. J. L. Gardner took Julius Roehrs Co.'s special prize for best group of hard-wooded greenhouse plants with a fine collection well flowered.

In cut flowers roses were not extensively shown. Waban Conservatories won for American Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid. For Richmond, W. H. Elliott was first and Exeter Rose Conservatories second. For any other variety, W. H. Elliott won with superb Killarney, Exeter Rose Conservatories following with splendid Chatenay. In the private gardener's classes, James Wheeler was first for Bride and Bridesmaid and second for Richmond, F. Heeremans being first for the latter.

For 100 carnations, one variety, A. Roper won with a magnificent vase of his new variegated, Bay State. This was also awarded a first-class certificate. F. R. Pierson Co. was second for a fine vase of Winsor, the color of which caught every one's eye. For crimson, Wilfrid Wheeler, S. J. Goddard and Backer & Co. won in order named, all showing seedlings for a few days. A neglect to do this may mean a loss of many of the little plants.

THE BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

The unanimous verdict on this year's spring exhibition at Boston was that it was the best the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has ever held. It was feared that the near approach of Easter would affect the exhibition and that the lack of the American Rose Society's display, which was a feature in 1906, would leave a big blank space. All the fears proved groundless. Of course fewer roses were shown than a year ago, but the exhibits in all other sections were more extensive and of a higher quality. The arrangements were tastefully carried out and reflected great credit on Messrs. Cameron and Farquhar. All the halls were utilized; in fact, every inch of space was occupied.

Taking the pot plants first, as they were the star feature of the show: For six Indian azaleas, in a strong class, the prizes went to William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener; James Stuart and E. W. Breed. For pair of palms, Mrs. F. Ayer, George Page gardener, won with Areca lutescens; William Whitman second with kentias. Mrs. Ayer was first for six ericas, showing plants three feet in height, densely flowered. For three orchids there was a strong entry. W. Whitman won with beautiful specimens of Cælogyne cristata, Dendrobium

J. L. Smith gardener, third. Cyclamens, as usual, were grandly shown. Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, led for ten plants. For group of cyclamens arranged for effect, James Stuart won with a splendid group. For six cinerarias, James Stuart led, followed by J. H. Brooks, George M. Anderson gardener, and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener. For specimen cine-

For daybreak pink, Mrs. E. S. Grew, A. E. Parsons, gardener; S. J. Goddard and C. S. Strout won, all showing Enchantress. Mr. Goddard was first for scarlet, Strout second, F. R. Pierson Co. third, all showing Victory. Lady Bountiful captured all prizes for white, Goddard, Strout and Mrs. A. W. Blake winning in the order named. W. Wheeler led for yellow with Eldorado; Backer & Co. second, for same variety. For white variegated, H. A. Stevens Co. won with fine Variegated Lawson, F. R. Pierson Co. second with Patten, Backer & Co. third with Variegated Lawson.

For pansies prizes went to Mrs. E. M. Gill, Mrs. H. A. Jahn and N. F. Comley. In a strong class of 100 single violets, Louis Smith won, followed by H. F. Calder and E. Bingham. All showed Princess of Wales. For 100 double violets N. F. Comley led, E. Bingham second, H. F. Woods third.

J. E. Rothwell won the Appleton silver gilt medal for finest display of cut orchids, filling 200 bottles with 125 varieties capitably arranged.

Miscellaneous exhibits were numerous. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. received a silver medal for an extensive and finely arranged group of bulbous plants, palms, etc. The Harvard Botanic Gardens, Robert Cameron gardener, also had a magnificent group. Edward MacMulkin put up a good group of foliage and flowering plants. Dr. C. G. Weld also had a fine group. George Page received a cultural certificate for splendid specimens of Marguerite Queen Alexandra and Thomas Roland a similar award for what were probably the finest genistas of pyramidal form ever seen in the halls. Prof. C. S. Sargent, Charles Sander gardener, showed a large agave in flower, which attracted much attention.

One of the features of the show was the group of seventy-five cyclamens, eighteen months from seed, shown by George M. Anderson. These were a meritorious lot and worthily earned the silver medal awarded their skillful grower. M. H. Walsh secured a first-class certificate for his new rambler rose, Milky Way, a beautiful single white with prominent stamens. Jos. Breck & Son had a nice group of palms and bulbous plants. W. W. Rawson & Co., in the entrance hall, had beds of Proserpine and Mon Tresor tulips edged with pansies and alternanthera with valley at intervals. They also had in the main hall a large bed representing an old-fashioned perennial border composed of bulbous stock and herbaceous perennials. Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener, had a dozen magnificently flowered Acacia heterophylla and was awarded a silver medal. Mrs. J. W. Tufts, Medford, James Crestre gardener, received a cultural certificate for a finely flowered Dendrobium nobile, and J. E. Rothwell a certificate of merit for the pure white Dendrobium nobile album. Lager & Hurrell had a small group of orchids. They received a certificate of merit for Calanthe vestita ignea-oculata gigantea. A. E. Parsons had fine annual lupins, N. F. Comley mignonette, Mrs. E. M. Gill a general display, Thomas Stock cornflowers, F. Heeremans gardenias, Julius Roehrs Co. a group of orchids and foliage plants.

H. H. Rogers, James Garthly gardener, had a fine group of Easter flowering plants. Farquhar & Co. received honorable mention for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine superba. Mrs. H. F. Durant, Wellesley, Thomas Watt gardener, received a cultural certificate for an immense and well-flowered red azalea. She had also a display of orchids. J. R. Clark & Son had a nice group of herbaceous perennials in pots. Gen. S. M. Weld received a certificate of merit for Primula Kewensis. He also showed Primula obconica, as did Mrs. J. L. Gardner. The latter also showed a new yellow cineraria with small, senecio-like flowers. Kenneth Finlayson received a first-class certificate for his seedling Himalayan rhododendron, Mary Weld (R. Princess Mary Fitzwilliam x R. Veitchii laevigata), flowers pure white, five inches across and sweet scented.

William Sim received a silver medal for a large table of magnificently grown sweet peas in many varieties, also a first-class certificate for the new violet, Boston. H. A. Jahn had some good seedling carnations. J. H. Cushing showed Carnation Victoria, a nice flower similar to Lawson in color. William Nicholson had a fine vase of Afterglow and Peter Fisher one of Beacon, which received a certificate of merit. F. R. Pierson had White Enchantress and Backer & Co. a fine pure yellow seedling.

There was a nice display of fruits and vegetables. A ladies' orchestra furnished music. The attendance was large, many visitors coming from a distance.

BACTERIA ON GERANIUMS.

In the February 28 issue of the REVIEW there was a note entitled "Trouble with Geraniums," signed A. N. S. Not having occasion to see these leaves, of course I do not pretend to know what is the cause of the trouble, but I wish to call attention to the fact that in the report of Hatch Experiment Station, Amherst, Mass., published in 1898, is described a bacterial disease of the geranium. Only a short reference was made to it, but we have observed this disease every year since its discovery, and have learned that in some sections it has become more or less a serious matter. According to our observations it is more common outdoors, but when outdoor stock is taken into a house we occasionally find it on the plants during the winter.

This trouble is characterized by brown spots on the leaves, and these spots may be numerous enough so that a large portion of the leaf is involved. The spots resemble blisters somewhat, and are usually one-eighth of an inch or more in diameter. We have made an examination of these spots for years and have always found them associated with bacteria. Sometimes these organisms are more numerous than others, but we have always found them in the cells and in the margin of the spot.

There are, of course, other causes for the spotting of geraniums which have been correctly alluded to by one of your correspondents.

We know of nothing that has been accomplished of a practical nature for the prevention of this bacterial spotting of geraniums. Our observations seem to show that the trouble is more common to geraniums exposed to the bright sunshine during the summer than those in the shade.

GEORGE E. STONE.

MARKETING GROWERS' PRODUCT.

[An essay by M. B. Faxon, of Columbus, O., awarded third prize in the W. F. Kasting convention competition.]

This is a vital question, and on its rational solution depends not only the business success of the large wholesale growers, but also the very existence of the little men, with their one, or at the most, half a dozen greenhouses. In considering this matter we must have clearly in our mind this fact, that whether a man has one small greenhouse or 100 large ones, he is a wholesale grower if he sells his product to another man to sell again; in other words, quantity has nothing whatever to do with determining the grade of trade a man is in—it is what he does with his product that settles the question. Growing a vast quantity of stock no more makes a florist a wholesale grower than a man limited to the output of one small greenhouse is a retail dealer. I have tried to give you a clear definition of what I understand the word "wholesale" to mean—otherwise, I am afraid what is to follow would have had a mixed meaning to you. The tendency of the times is towards large establishments, towards consolidation of interests; but whether this is practical, as applied to the subject under discussion, I am very much in doubt; in fact, I think it is not beyond a reasonable limit.

Quantity and Quality.

There is one essential and vital point of difference between an establishment where plants or flowers are produced, and a manufacturing business of almost any kind, and it is this: The larger the manufacturing plant, the better should be the product; but as an establishment for growing flowers or raising plants becomes larger and larger, as a rule the product turned out suffers in quality. I fully understand that there are brilliant exceptions to all rules, but that only goes to prove my statement, which I think no practical florist or plant grower will deny.

On the other hand, we all are acquainted with some little growers who produce such superb stock that they have established a name for their product that insures its sale the moment it appears in any market, and at the very top price. The point I wish to emphasize here is, that large establishments in our line, if they are large enough, put a limit to quality; while the little grower still imparts to his plants and flowers that individuality which reveals the guidance of the master hand and gives to his product the "hall mark" of superb quality.

I wish forcibly here to maintain that the little wholesale grower has, in these years of greenhouse expansion, an opportunity for his quality product to find a lucrative market as never before. This question of amount of stock produced and its quality has a most intimate connection with finding a market for it.

Territory Limited.

Plants and flowers, owing to their perishable nature, have a limit of territory in which they can be sold and give satisfaction to the buyer. This may be a 500-mile limit, or it may be much greater; but, be it more or less, there is a limit. We have by long custom become so used to this limitation of selling territory that we imperceptibly do our daily business without thinking much, if anything, about it. Nevertheless, we have a serious handicap in this respect that dealers in goods not perishable do not have to take into consideration.

Now, it being a fact that we have a limited territory in which to secure customers, it most certainly behooves us to study well the needs and requirements of our territory for trade, and cater judiciously to our market. Remember always that ours is a business in which, granting quality and price equal, the retailer will, as a rule, purchase from the nearest grower. It certainly takes business acumen and vigilance of the never-give-up kind to hold what should be the legitimate customers of a grower's territory.

Value of Advertising.

As a business builder for large wholesale plant and flower growers, those of us who are large enough to maintain a selling headquarters and produce an almost unlimited amount of seasonable stock for every day in the year, there is nothing equal to systematic, persistent advertising in the standard trade papers devoted to our business. Advertising is cumulative in its effects; any given amount spent steadily increases your business more and more with every year that passes. But it must be supported by honesty and fulfillment of promises.

Now, in order to be justified in building a business by advertising, especially in cut-flowers, a large establishment must be behind the advertising, as otherwise you will sooner or later be receiving continuous daily orders that cannot be filled. And here again is where this business differs from almost all others: You are limited to your own productions. Once sold out, you cannot replace like other lines of trade.

Commission Florists.

A grower who daily has large quantities of cut flowers to find a market for, and yet does not wish to maintain a selling establishment of his own, cannot do better than to entrust a wholesale commission florist with the entire selling of his stock. Now, if you expect good returns from your flowers, you must give your commission florist a chance to represent you properly and get you good returns; and the only way to accomplish this is to send all your stock every day in the year to him. Then you will be one of the instrumental elements that go to make his business a success, and if his business is to continue prosperous he must for self-preservation return to you a good price (the market price) for your stock.

"You cannot have your cake and eat it too"—you cannot sell all you can anywhere and to anybody who will pay you a good price, and then send the leavings and culls to your commission man, expecting any return. You will fare by him as well as you treat him, and no better. Wholesale all your stock through him, and he will make it his business that you receive the fullest measure of value for every flower you grow.

The Small Grower.

The small wholesale grower of plants and flowers will, on the other hand, do much better to find one or more retail dealers who will handle his product. Especially, if he be a grower of the "superb quality stock," will he encounter no trouble in finding dealers with whom he can contract his entire cut by the year. I have a case in mind where a grower of carnations, with only two small greenhouses and a cut not exceeding a few hundred a day, has done well and made money by contracting the entire product of his houses by the year. Being a grower of superb stock, he can do this without the least trouble, and the extra price obtained always insures a handsome profit. The same method of disposal applies with equal force to the plant product of a small grower. There are always plenty of retail dealers only too willing and ready to purchase well-grown, seasonable plants.

The Best Method.

I believe that the best method of marketing our product depends wholly upon the size of the establishment we wish to maintain, and the volume of those of us whose desires are to build a business of the largest magnitude; that is, one of the mammoth establishments of the present day, there is no way equal to legitimate trade newspaper advertising. Proper advertising, regularly and persistently followed, will dispose of all the plants and flowers any establishment can produce.

For the large grower of cut flowers, who does not wish to maintain an establishment of his own for selling his product, there is no better outlet than through the agency of the wholesale commission florist, as fully explained.

Do not think I have forgotten the little grower, for such is very far from the case. I am sure, from personal experience, that in no way can he begin to realize the substantial profits from his labors as by contracting his entire product, both plants and flowers, to some good retailer, who has a trade that demands goods of the best quality. For the little grower has no excuse for turning out anything else. Even the larger grower of plants will always find plenty of nearby retail dealers ready to take them.

In closing, allow me one word of advice—the best advertising sign a wholesale grower ever puts up in his greenhouses contains these words: "No Goods at Retail."

PACKING AND EXPRESS RATES.

[A paper by C. W. Eichling, New Orleans, read before the Society of Southern Florists, at its first annual convention, at New Orleans, February 14 to 16, 1907.]

If we consider that the plants and flowers annually shipped over the United States are valued at millions of dollars, the immense business of transportation companies, and especially express companies, becomes evident.

Why do shippers of plants, bulbs and seeds enjoy special low express rates? Simply because the express companies compete with the United States mail. Uncle Sam was the first good friend of the florist; he offered to carry his plants, bulbs and seeds to any part of the United States at the rate of two ounces for 1 cent, or 8 cents per pound, in packages up to four pounds.

Now comes the express company and goes Uncle Sam one better, and says to the florist: "If you will pack right, we will carry your goods at the same rate as Uncle Sam, and give you a receipt, which Uncle Sam refuses to do, and if you prepay your shipments we will return you 2 cents on every shipment weighing from fifty to seventy-four ounces." A package weighing fifty ounces would cost 25 cents by mail and 23 cents by express, if prepaid. The minimum express charge is 10 cents on packages up to twenty ounces. This prepaid matter is called in the express tariff, section D matter, and the rate applies on packages up to seventy-four ounces. The difference between mail and express rates in this class is a saving of 2 cents per package if shipped by express, besides getting a receipt for it.

General Special Rate.

Packages weighing over seventy-four ounces are billed out, whether prepaid or not, at what is called the "general special" rate, which I shall now explain.

If the florists were compelled to pay regular merchandise rates on plant shipments there would be no end to complaints, and yet, why should the florist be the favored one among the great number of other shippers who all pay regular merchandise rates, with a few exceptions? The florist enjoys the general special rate, which is from twenty to thirty-three and one-third per cent lower than the regular merchandise rate. The rates are adopted by all express companies belonging to the traffic committee, and it becomes the duty of every shipper or receiver of bulbs, plants and seeds to study these rates in order to avoid and to be able to correct mistakes.

A plant shipment to enjoy this special rate must be packed in a closed box so it may be handled with other express matter without any special care. Plants packed in baskets do not come under this class. They must be handled with more care, and the express company charges you for this extra work by applying the pound rate, which is a little higher than the general special rate, but still much less than the regular merchandise rate. For instance, where a ten-pound package of merchandise from Chicago to New Orleans would cost $1.10, a ten-pound basket of plants would cost 40 cents, and if packed in a box, only 35 cents. Thirty-five cents is the minimum charge for a box or package of plants at general special rates.

The general special rate adopted by the traffic committee is as follows, using 100 pounds as a basis:

If Mdse. Rate is $1.00	Gen'l Special is $.80
If Mdse. Rate is 2.00	Gen'l Special is 1.50
If Mdse. Rate is 3.00	Gen'l Special is 2.25
If Mdse. Rate is 4.00	Gen'l Special is 2.90
If Mdse. Rate is 5.00	Gen'l Special is 3.40
If Mdse. Rate is 6.00	Gen'l Special is 4.00

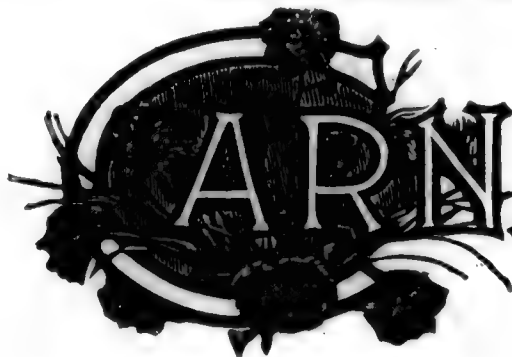

The merchandise rate between New Orleans and Springfield, Ohio, is $3.50 per hundred pounds, or $2.90 special rate, which means 29-10 cents per pound. Then, a box of plants weighing sixty pounds would be carried between these two points for $1.74.

It must be said, in justice to the express companies, that all their employees are instructed to observe the tariff on general specials, but the trouble is that few bill clerks ever study these regulations. Especially agents in small towns, where general specials are an exception, are liable to overcharge on plant shipments, and the receiver, who may not be familiar with the correct charges, gets disgusted with the high express rates. Thousands of customers are annually lost in this manner, and it becomes the duty of the shipper to call the express agent's attention to the class of matter to which his shipment belongs. This may be done by having on your shipping tags the remark, printed in bold type: "Live Plants—Special Rate," or by attaching a special card, stating weight and correct express charges to destination. This requires a complete knowledge of rates between the different points, which may be obtained at any express office.

It is advisable for a receiver of a plant shipment, before paying charges, to ask the agent whether the shipment is billed at special rate, and in most cases mistakes will be avoided.

Hot Weather Notes.

During the last week we have passed through the hottest weather the writer has ever seen in March, and if it had been a few weeks later it would have made one think seriously of getting the young stock out in the field. Even as it was, in looking around one could see preparations going on which will not be seasonable for another month. While it is a good plan to get the young stock out just as quickly as possible after the weather is safe, we have never considered it wise to put them out when there is yet danger of frosts and snow. We have seen some fine stock ruined by such a policy. We do not consider it safe anywhere, above Mason and Dixon's line, before April 15 to set out tender stock, and frequently the weather is such in our locality as to prevent a start before May 1. A young plant, if it is not too pot-bound, is better off indoors if good growing weather does not prevail outdoors. So don't get anxious, but keep your young plants in good growing condition and wait for safe weather. You cannot afford to run any risks with your next season's stock for the sake of a few extra days in the field. You can make all your preparations, however, and I will speak of them in due time. It pays to get an early start in all operations connected with carnation growing.

Such hot weather as we have been having is hard on the blooming stock. With the ventilators wide open to keep the temperature down and a drying wind blowing, the buds hang over the supports. The color bleaches out of the pink varieties enough to make the blooms unsalable, unless they are handled skillfully. The most natural impulse would be to apply a little shade on the glass, and, except for the fear of what might happen to the Easter cut in case of a cool, cloudy spell this week, we would be tempted to resort to it. Better lose a few blooms than run the chance of reducing your Easter cut to any extent. You can overcome the effects of the hot sun on the color, to a marked degree, by cutting the blooms quite close every morning. Cut them just as soon as they are far enough along to develop in water. In that way you can put off shading as long as the houses do not become too hot for the plants. The plants like the bright sunshine and, as long as the temperature can be kept down by ventilation to a reasonable degree, no shading should be done.

Until the plants become accustomed to the hot sun it will pay to spray them lightly right after noon, in addition to the regular morning's watering. Instead of shooting it on the plants, like when you syringe, shoot it up high through the air in a fine spray. This will cool off the house, as well as spray the plants.

CARNATION MAY.

Carnation May, illustrated in this issue, is a seedling raised by Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis. Its parents (it has only two!) were seedlings originating on the place. The size is moderate, two and one-half to three and one-half inches. The firm says of it:

"May is a strictly commercial variety. We do not expect it to displace Enchantress in the fancy class, but it is just what the trade has been looking for in a light pink to grade with standard sorts. The color is much deeper than in Enchantress. The bloom is not so crowded in the center, which allows it to open up perfectly right away. The form is round and well built up in the center. The calyx never splits and the stem always is strong. Growth is strong and healthy and it grows in height about the same as Bountiful. It comes into bloom early and is extremely free."

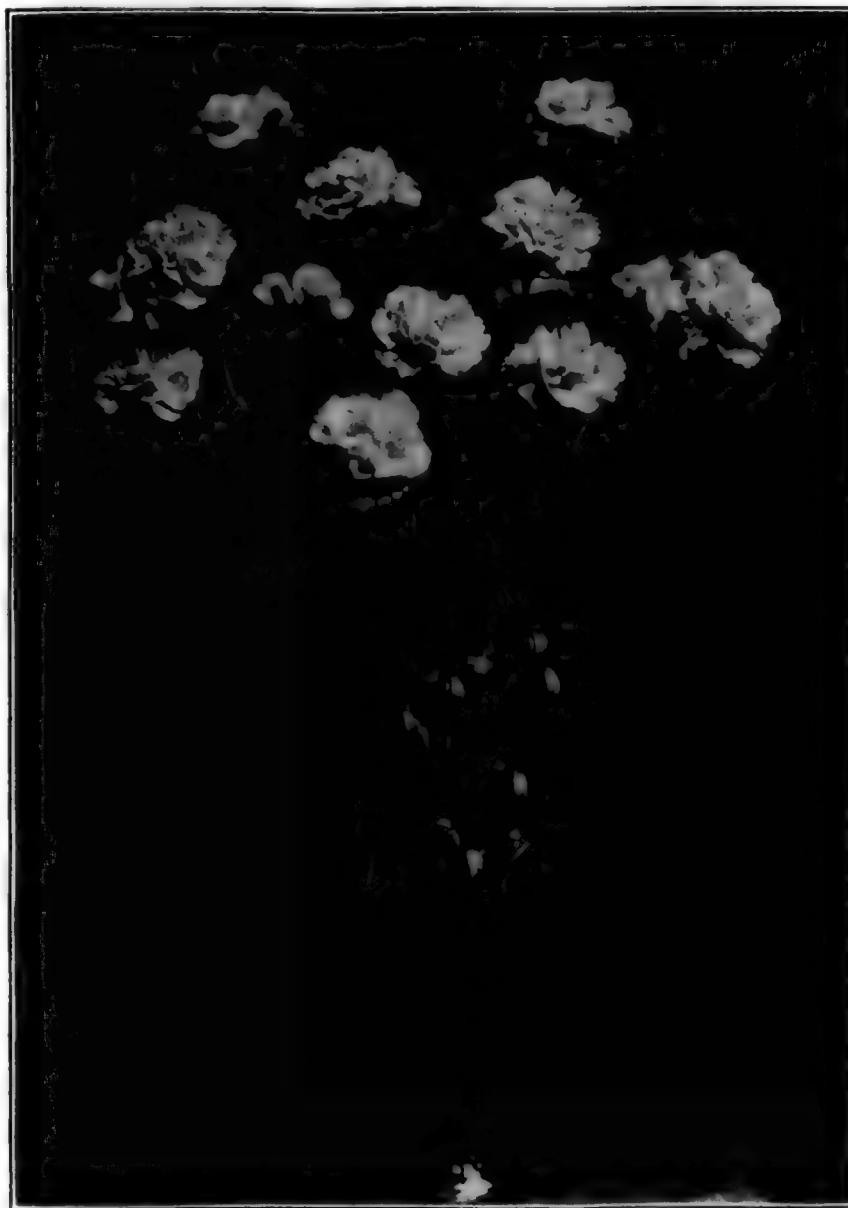

TOPPING CARNATION PLANTS.

Will you kindly inform me how to top young carnation plants? Mine are in 2-inch and 3-inch pots and are sending up one straight shoot and I would like to know where and how to top them.

E. H. O.

The proper time to top young carnation plants is when they begin to run up to bud and as soon as you can see the stem between the leaves. It will do the plant no damage to progress as far as forming the bud, but we consider that to allow them to progress that far is to waste a couple of weeks of time during which they might as well be making new breaks.

As to the place to top them, I would say it depends somewhat on the variety and the young plant, too. Some varieties, when they are topped, will break from nearly every eye above the soil, while others will break from only three or four eyes, and you must top them accordingly. The first named should be topped as high as possible without leaving any eyes that will throw flower buds. These usually need not be topped more than about twice to make fine plants. The other kind must not be topped too high, as they always break from the eyes nearest the end, and if you get too much stem below the body of the plant it is likely to get top-heavy and fall over before digging time. Until you become familiar with your varieties it would be advisable to top all of them about medium and then be guided in the future by the way they break away this time. Leave five or six joints above the soil.

Some growers top all varieties as high as possible, thinking it advantageous to have considerable stem between the soil and the crown of the plant. One argument is that it helps to prevent stem-rot, but I do not agree with that theory. You will find that when a plant breaks from an eye below the surface the growth below the surface will be the same as that of the plant between the roots and the surface, and it will not decay like a branch that is covered after it is grown.

As for stem-rot, if the fungus is in the soil and the atmospheric conditions are right, it will attack the plants, and, whether the stems are long or short, will make no difference. On the other hand, if the stems are short, there is less danger of too deep planting, as the plants will stand up better.

TUFA STONE.

Tufa is a material which has come to be largely used for rockeries, grottoes, fountains and the like, where an irregular effect is desired, a natural or informal effect, in contrast to the regular and artificial. Tufa stone is manufactured by the Tufa Incrustation Co., an Ohio concern, and is shipped in any desired quantity, being easily placed in position by any builder or gardener. The accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph made in the conservatory of Isaac Ellwood, the barbed-wire magnate, at De Kalb, Ill. This rockery was built by Probst & Christianson, the horticultural builders, who are the sole western agents for tufa stone.

BY A GROWER.

I know, blue, modest violets,
Gleaming with dew at morn—
I know the place you come from,
And the way that you are born!

The holes the stars look through—
He let the scraps fall down to earth;
The little scraps are you.

PLANTS FOR FRAMES.

What is the best manure and what kind of fertilizer should I use on the ground for violets to be set out this spring? They will be covered with cold-frames in the autumn. Which make the best plants, the new runners or the crowns? What is the best way to keep down red spider? J. P. W.

There is nothing better for violets, in the way of fertilizer, than well-rotted cow manure. Of course if it really is impossible to procure this, we would use well-rotted horse manure, but it must be well-rotted; for instance, such as has been used in hotbeds and the heat all spent, and in fine, good, working condition. J. P. W. does not say what kind of soil he has, but the chances are that when he is spreading his manure a dusting of lime would be beneficial, as would also a little salt, say about a pint to a bushel of manure. This helps to fine the manure and kills the white grubs that breed in the manure. New runners are preferred, by all means. Note our remarks only a short time ago. But it is getting late in the season, so that if you have not already worked up your stock you may have to divide the crowns.

The best way, by far, to keep down red spider is not to let it get a foothold, as it takes time, as well as lots of water sprayed on with force, to eradicate the pest when once it gets established. And, too, it is so much harder to do in frames than where you grow your violets in the house. R. E. S.

TEACHING HORTICULTURE.

Professor L. H. Bailey, director of the Agricultural Department of Cornell University, has been giving some excellent advice on the all-important question of training young men who intend engaging in horticultural pursuits. Speaking at a meeting of horticulturists, he said that "the time is past when mere expository work—instruction by means of lectures and books—is sufficient to meet the demands. The botanist and the chemist no longer teach by lectures and literary means alone; they have laboratories in which the students work for themselves and develop their own experience.

"The horticulturists also teach by laboratory work, but we have not yet come to a full realization of the competent horticultural laboratory. It is useful to have laboratory exercises on grafting, propagation and on pruning and spraying, and some of the operations of plant breeding; but these alone are incidental, and they really trifle with a great subject. The laboratory work should cover the whole theory and process of the given art. In the pomological division it should be a laboratory of, say, fifty acres of actual orchards, in which all phases of the work, from start to finish, may be in natural operation; and if these phases cannot be taught at the time of year when the students are in the habit of coming to college, the time of coming should be changed, for the seasons and the operations that follow the seasons cannot be changed to suit a traditional college year. If the subject of pomology is worth teaching at all it is worth teaching in its entirety and throughout the year; and it is worth the time that is required for good preparation.

"How is floriculture to be taught if not by means of floriculture? You can never teach it by means of lectures alone, nor even by lectures and more or less relevant and entertaining piecemeal laboratory work. You must have a real floricultural equipment, manned by a real florist who does real work, and who has a sufficient corps of assistants who really know the several parts of the business to aid him in carrying the student through a real training. In like manner, if we are to teach nursery work, we must have a nursery, and men who know the nursery, and if vegetable culture is to be efficiently taught there must be a large kitchen garden, under the charge of a man who is skilled in vegetable culture. Above all, the teaching of science and practice should not be separated, but go hand in hand."

SWEET PEAS IN POTS.

Any one having a greenhouse can easily have a few early sweet peas to flower in pots with a minimum of trouble, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine. A number of 3-inch pots should be prepared in the usual way, and filled with soil. Into each insert two seeds, about half an inch below the surface of the soil. Should both germinate, destroy the weaker, and pot the other one as soon as the roots commence working through the soil. Either one shift or two shifts may be given, viz., to 5-inch and thence to 7-inch pots, or straight into 6-inch pots, the latter being the flowering size. A twig should be given as soon as the plants show a tendency to run up, and finally a nice sprayey hazel bough should be afforded when the first buds show. On this the plant will display itself in full beauty if assisted thereto by liquid manure.

makin' the sharks ketch themselves. It was down in Central America where I first met him; remember that time I went into the coffee business, and an earthquake come along and yanked the ranch down into the sub-cellar, so to speak?

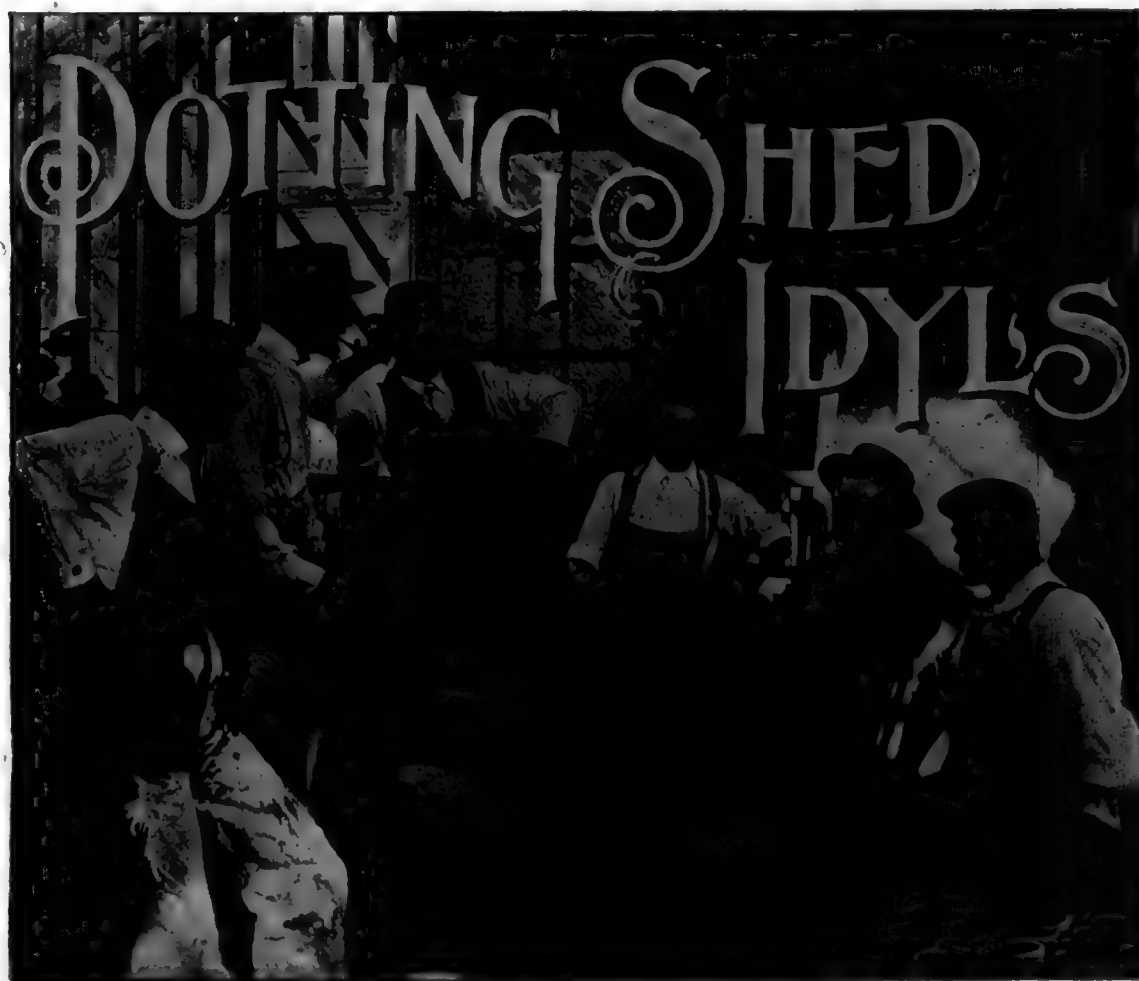

"Saggers was the big noise in some rubber syndicate that was holdin' up the government for real estate—not as a rubber syndicate needs real estate nor anythink else, except postage stamps and hot air. When the earthquake quit, all Saggers 'ad left was his pajammers and a one-eyed bull terrier. There was a brand-new volcano open for business just where he'd picked out a site for a brewery, and a full hand of hot springs and geysers camped out where he was planin' a pleasure park for his new trolley line. But you couldn't discourage James H. Saggers; he says, 'if we can't do nothink else we can go in swimmin',' and it was while we was dryin' off on the beach he tells me he's got a new scheme. Them there hot springs and mud geysers has West Baden and Mount Clemens faded out o' sight; put up a few shacks and a thirst parlor, get an advertising man to fix up a few sheets o' dope, and there you are.

"Well, Saggers goes ahead with it, and pretty soon every boatload o' tourists as was turned loose makes a beeline for the wonderful hot springs. You see, Saggers always was original, and where he made his grand-stand play was in providin' electric baths, with them tropical eels to furnish power. Of course you chaps has 'earu of them electric eels; we kept 'em in tanks, and when we wanted a trifle o' chain lightnin' all we had to do was to send a Dago to stir up the eels an' ketch one about so long—no dynamos nor wirin' nor any other foolishness."

"I don't see what brings you back in the greenhouse business, Jaggs," remarked Tommy. "After a chance like that you must be a millionaire, doin' a little slummin' for amusement."

Jaggs shook his head sadly, as he scraped the last remaining grains from his tobacco pouch. "I often told Saggers," he said, "as we was too prosperous. There's always some cross-eyed hoodoo out with a club for a man as tries to get along by honest industry, especially if he mixes in politics. That was Saggers's weakness. I says to him, 'Saggers,' I says, 'it ain't our funeral, no matter 'ow many revolutions a minute they runs their dinky little republic. If the president o' this 'ere bloomin' country gets in office,' I says, 'by roundin' up the retirin' cabinet agen a wall and 'avin' a file o' tin soldiers shoot 'em up, why,' I says, 'it's just a matter o' habit, like playin' cribbage or wearin' side whiskers. If you're tryin' to get a shock,' I says, 'you stick to your electric eels, and leave politics alone.'

"I don't just know what 'appened after I left; after bein' shot at three nights runnin' I got a notion the climate was a bit sultry, but I hear as the navy was blowed up one night—she was a side-wheeler as they used to run down to Rockaway when I first come over—and the government got a notion that Saggers was touchin' off submarine mines with trained electric eels. Some'ow it don't 'ardly seem possible, but you never can tell. I left the country myself in a cargo o' green bananas, along o' more tarantulas than I really needed, if I was pickin' my own society, and I

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.

"Speaking o' catfish," remarked Jaggs, after the man who had been south ceased his description of an alleged six-foot tarpon which got away, "a chap don't rightly know what a fish story is till he gets into them tropic seas. I knowed a chap down at Kingston that put in seven years shark-fishin' on account o' some sea pirate as threw a mess o' dockyments overboard as was swallowed by a shark—he reckoned he'd be a full-blooded duke if he ever found 'em, and you never see such a bunch o' stuff as he tried out o' them shark post-mortems. I reckon he 'ad about eighty-seven dog collars, to say nothink about beer bottles and general 'ardware. And once he come across a pair o' spectacles and a purple velvet bunnet, as I could swear belonged to my Aunt Eliza, as kept a greengrocer shop down 'Ammersmith way."

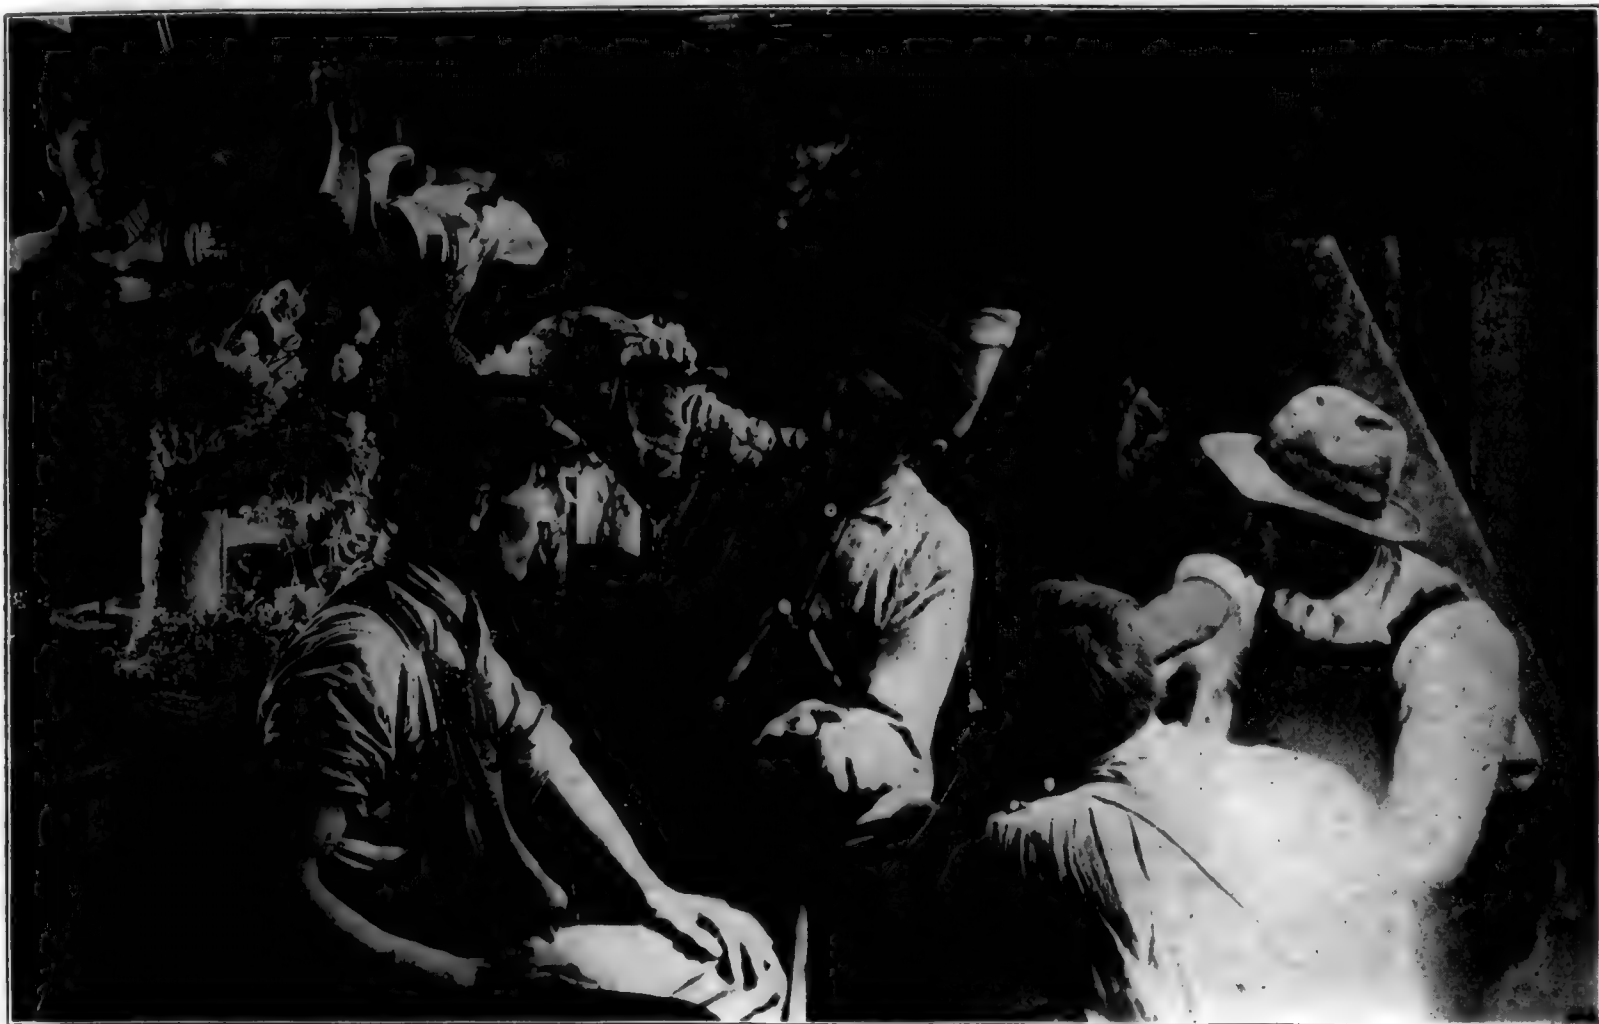

"Was your Aunt Eliza drowned?" asked the new rose grower, respectfully.

"Well, no," said Jaggs, with the air of a man who must tell the truth at any cost. "But it's a sing'ler thing; that there bunnet was blowed overboard one Saturday afternoon, when Aunt Eliza was sittin' on the pier at Ramsgate, 'avin' six penn'orth o' shrimps and a drop o' stout, and it was the very next Saturday, as near as I could reckon, as Ed'ard Snagsby hooked that identical shark in Kingston harbor. He 'ad a kind o' sufferin' expression, Snagsby said; seemed like that purple bunnet 'adn't set very well."

There was a temporary pause, during which the voice of the greenhouse terrier was heard in vociferous protest, as the tame crow, a recent introduction, unearthed a favorite bone from the compost bin, and threw it into a stoke-hole. As the arbitration committee settled down, after soothing the terrier's injured feelings, Jaggs continued:

"It ain't often you meet a man with a head on him like James H. Saggers. He'd never set around ketchin' sharks like Snagsby; he'd 'ave some scheme for never 'eard what become o' Saggars. I did 'ear once o' a chap that was trainin' toadfish to dredge oysters along the Jersey coast, and that sounded uncommon like James H. Saggars, but maybe it wasn't true. There's too many chaps nowadays tryin' to mislead the public with them sort o' yarns."

"It seems too bad, don't it," observed Tommy to the new rose grower, who was gazing rapturously at Jaggs. "The trouble is as them that has experience, like Jaggs, is too modest in expressin' themselves. What I want to know is, how did James H. Saggars gain the confidence of them innocent electric eels?"

LATHYRUS PUBESCENS.

The beauty of this perennial pea from Chili should go a long way toward rendering it popular for the cool greenhouse and for cutting. Climbing plants of its particular color shade are rare, the only likely competitor being Plumbago capensis, a plant nearly every one grows. The lathyrus is not hardy save in the warmer parts of Britain, says the Gardeners' Magazine, but needs nothing more than the coolest treatment. Cultivated under glass, it gives one a wealth of blossom in June, and sends up relays of flowering growths from the base throughout summer if occasionally fore-shortened. It is full of ailments as a seedling, and numbers die from excess of damp, but once it enters the second growing season it becomes strong and starts to flower. Its foliage is grayish, as in the culinary pea, the gray being due to a soft, downy covering that persists till the leaves grow old. The flower sprays have long stems that will delight the decorator, each spray containing seven to nine flowers that are nearly the equal of well-grown sweet peas in size, and quite the equal in floral value. The annual growth exceeds seven to eight feet. One cannot treat an old specimen too well, provided it is in a well-drained spot.

PROPAGATING DRACAENAS.

As a plant for the novice in propagation to try his hand upon, the dracæna must be placed in the very first flight. He must be indeed a novice, and a careless one at that, if given an old, leggy dracæna, he cannot work up a decent batch of plants. Let us have a look at our dracæna. It is an old terminalis, in a 5-inch pot, but so robbed of leaves by an overdose of housework that what few remain are at the top of a respectable length of bare stem. But its growing point is uninjured.

We shall first ring or tongue our plant. Ringing consists of carefully cutting away a ring of bark about an inch below the bottom good leaf. Tonguing is performed by making a cut half way through the stem an inch or so below the bottom leaf, in the same way that one makes a tongue in a carnation layer. Both plans are good, but of the two I prefer the tongue, as one quickly obtains a mass of roots. In either case the cut part of the stem must be excluded from the light, and kept moist, for we want roots to issue from it. At one time we accomplished this by splitting a small flower pot lengthwise, fastening the two halves round the cut stem, and filling the pot with soil. Now we find that a handful of wet moss placed round the cut, and secured by a few twists of raffia, answers the purpose equally well. The moss is kept constantly wet with the syringe, and when white roots are seen to be pushing their points through it, the stem is severed beneath it, and the moss and roots are buried to the lowest leaf in a well-drained pot of soil. If at all carefully carried out, ringing or tonguing never fails to give a good plant in a short time.

When, however, the house can be kept at 55 degrees at night, and also contains a propagating case, ringing and tonguing may be dispensed with, and the top boldly severed, and rooted as a cutting. The advantage of this system is that the old stem of the plant is immediately available for propagating purposes, whereas one must wait until roots are formed under the ringing process.

Having disposed of the top, let us turn our attention to the old stem, and to facilitate matters we will knock the latter out of the pot, and shake away all the soil. With a sharp knife we will now cut up the stem into portions one inch long, and if we want as many plants as possible we will split each section down the middle. Every section, split or unsplit, is capable of forming a new plant.

We take a cutting pan, fill it to within an inch of its rim with a compost of equal parts of loam, leaf-mold and coarse sand, and then sprinkle a layer of sand over all. On this layer we arrange our sections of stem, flat and cut side down, about an inch apart, cover with a half inch of compost, and water well. Space in the propagating case is too precious to take this pan, so we stand it on the hot-water pipes, if possible.

In a very short time, provided plenty of heat and water are given, tiny green spears will be seen pushing through the soil, and when these are from one inch to two inches long, they will generally be accompanied by roots issuing from the other side of the cut section. When this stage is reached potting singly in 2½-inch pots should follow, with careful watering, plenty of warmth, and syringing.

When old plants are dealt with, says a writer in a British contemporary, it will generally be found that they possess one or more thick, fleshy white roots. These may be cut up, split, and treated exactly as the stem sections, and will make plants equally as easily and quickly. Either kind, root or stem section, should push growths through the soil in less than a month after insertion, if heat and moisture in plenty are forthcoming.

MULCHING.

To protect the feeding roots that are now near the surface from strong sunshine, and to keep the benches from drying out too quickly, they should now get a liberal mulching of rich compost. The soil, if the plants have been doing good work, will by this time be much exhausted, and, as the spring growth is now on, they will require some fresh material to work on. By mulching now the blooms can be kept up to size for quite a long time, even in hot weather.

The compost should consist of two parts decomposed cow manure and one part good rose soil. To this should be added fifteen or twenty pounds of desiccated bone meal to each cubic yard of compost, the whole to be thoroughly incorporated and put on the bench one inch thick.

Passing the compost through a screen of an inch mesh makes it more easily spread, covering the ground more uniformly and making it more assimilable than if put on in a rougher state. This mulching, with the aid of liquid feeding, should keep the soil in good condition till planting time. For Beauty benches, which should now be making a heavy growth, this is indispensable, as without it many of the buds will fail to reach a salable size.

Those buds on extra strong canes of Beauties, which, by reason of the softness of the wood, fail to develop properly, should be picked off instead of cutting the stem. At the base of these buds will be found one or more buds, which in five or six weeks will make excellent flowers.

Young Beauty stock should be fumigated once a week and syringed with force twice every bright day. Keep all buds picked off and give the plants plenty of room on the benches.

RIBES.

PRUNING HARDY ROSES.

Winter is at an end for another year and the time is not far distant when we may reasonably expect spring weather and among a multitude of other duties which fall to the lot of the florist is the pruning of hardy roses, not only for himself, but in many cases for numbers of his customers. This is work which no novice can attend to properly. None but an experienced hand should do it, or from the pruning more harm than good may be the result.

Hybrid perpetuals are usually protected by being earthed around with soil, or by manure and leaves. The first method furnishes much the better protection. After clearing away the soil, which can be done any time after the frost leaves the ground, preferably from the beginning to the middle of April, except for the warmer states, all weak shoots should be taken out entirely and the more robust ones cut down to within six or eight inches of the start of the preceding year's growth. This hard pruning will make the plants break strongly. Lighter pruning may be adopted if an earlier crop of small flowers is desired for mass effect, but the quality cannot approximate that of the well cut back plants. Hard pruning makes it much easier to protect the lower, current season's buds when winter covering is needed.

Hybrid teas and teas are becoming increasingly popular, and there is little wonder, for they are persistent bloomers, especially the first named. As a rule they need much heavier protection than the hybrid perpetuals. Some growers lift them and bury overhead in a trench. Others place in coldframes, while in more favored locations earthing up with soil and a covering of spruce boughs answers very well. The vigorous canes of these roses may be shortened back to one-third of their length. More moderate ones only need the thin ends cut off. Weak ones are better removed entirely. Some judicious pruning may also be done in summer. After a crop of flowers has faded, trim the shoots back a little. If flowers are cut as they open this will not need doing.

Old stock of any of the tea roses grown under glass make satisfactory beds if pruned back well and watered occasionally. We have seen Bridesmaid, Kaiserin, Carnot and other roses make a really excellent show treated in this way, and it is worth while trying a bed of them.

Ramblers, such as Crimson, Philadelphia, Sweetheart, Farquhar, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, Carmine Pillar, Debutante, Mrs. Egan and others of like nature, should merely have weak and dead wood removed and laterals shortened back to three or four buds each; also any of the preceding year's flowering wood which may not have been taken out after the blooms faded last summer. The same applies to all the hybrid sweetbriars usually known as Lord Penzance's briars. These are well worth a place in any garden. The flowers have a large range of color.

Bedding roses, like Clothilde Soupert, Hermosa, Maman Cochet and its white form, Gruss an Teplitz and Baby Rambler should be cut back about half way. Have all the dead wood removed and weak laterals shortened back well. They are satisfactory varieties to grow and give a maximum of bloom for a minimum of care. Beds kept mulched with old manure and occasionally hoed over with old flowers cut off as they fade will bloom all summer long. C. W.

ROSE QUEEN OF SPAIN.

In a January issue the REVIEW printed the following paragraph from the London Garden: "Undoubtedly the rose of the year is the beautiful variety, Queen of Spain. S. Bide & Sons, of Farnham, are to be congratulated upon this, their first introduction among roses, and as they have begun so well it is to be hoped they will continue to add to the collection roses of equal merit. Many who saw the variety when first staged at the national rose show thought it deserved a gold medal, and so it did. Mr. Bide, junior, informed the writer that Queen of Spain was raised from Antoine Rivoire crossed with another variety, but what that was he could not say. The color is pale flesh with a darker center, the tint being much intensified upon plants one year old. It possesses the valuable quality of erect stems, so that the handsome flowers are borne well above the foliage, a trait it inherits from its maternal parent. It has especially good, lasting flowers, a fact fully demonstrated by the freshness of the blooms at the end of the two days' show at Holland House. No one can deny that fully three-fourths of the novelties introduced at the present day are of a very flimsy character, although charming in color, and, as garden roses, they are excellent, but there is room for many more of the type of Queen of Spain."

The flower is very full and of excellent form. It has fragrance of Souvenir de la Malmaison and will be tried by a considerable number of American growers next season. In sending the photograph reproduced in this issue Bide & Sons say that the king of Spain has just manifested his appreciation of the courtesy intended by naming the rose for his queen by passing them a liberal order for plants.

OUTDOOR ROSE CULTURE.

[A synopsis of a paper by Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn., read before the annual convention of the American Rose Society at Washington, D. C., March 13 to 16, 1907.]

Of all plants deserving special care and attentive culture, the rose, in my mind, is first. I regret that some of our growers and distributors to amateurs should state in their catalogues and guides on rose culture that the necessity of thorough preparation of soil, proper cultivation, etc., is a story of ancient belief, and that roses will grow in any soil, location and condition.

They will grow, yes, but will they flourish? Do not let us deceive and disappoint the lovers of roses for the sake of making easy money, for it is unjust and does not pay in the end, for one disappointed customer will discourage many prospective buyers, while every successful amateur rose grower will induce and instruct all his friends and neighbors.

Let us tell the people that the rose is a great feeder and delights in a heavy, loamy soil, enriched by cow manure, and let us ask them to prepare their beds before planting, to a proper depth, provide the necessary drainage, that thorough cultivation is better than continuous watering and sprinkling; in short, give them the information that will make them expert rose growers, and we will make them happy and our friends forever. The real lover of roses will not shrink from the expense and labor involved in such culture and his success will convert others.

The very growers who advocate the planting of roses in any old way seem to have to go away from home to find subjects fit for illustrations in their catalogues, intended to show good rose culture.

Culture.

The part of the plant above ground demands equal attention. Beginning in spring we must induce and balance the growth of the flowering wood, by proper pruning, and to do this properly we must consider the habit, character and strength of the plants. Vigorous hybrid remountants we should relieve of all weak and superfluous wood, being satisfied with from six to eight main shoots to a plant, and those we must cut back to from five to seven eyes. Weaker plants we must prune more severely, cutting back to three or four eyes. The hybrid teas, which do better in not too heavy a soil, we must relieve of all weak and dead wood, and cut the remainder back one-quarter or one-third of their length. Teas and polyanthas, of course, we won't cut back at all, except to remove old and dead wood, with the object in view to keep the plant vigorous by inducing and favoring a certain percentage of young growth.

During the flowering season we must constantly be on the watch. Passing flowers should be picked off every day, and that before they drop all their petals. We can procure a second, and with some varieties of the remountants an almost continuous crop of flowers, by pruning past-flowering shoots radically back to six or eight eyes during the summer season.

We must supply the necessary atmospheric moisture to our plants by a thorough syringing from below, applied after sundown, a treatment to which the rose readily responds during dry weather. Such sprinkling, furthermore, at least partly overcomes the minor insect pests, such as the aphid, red spider and rose hopper. We must closely watch for the arch enemy of the rose, the chafer, and pick him off for his kerosene bath, while we have to crush the leaf-roller with unrelenting energy and thoroughness. Slug-shot, hellebore, Bordeaux mixture, whale-oil soap and similar remedies must be on hand for ready use for other pests, mildew and other diseases, and must be applied in good season and effective manner.

For the over-wintering of our roses we must take due precaution, by providing the necessary cover. The most effective, in fact the only satisfactory method, is to tie the shoots together and heap up the soil around the root-stalk as high as possible, and if the plants are properly distanced, namely two feet to two and one-half feet for the hybrid remountants and sixteen to twenty inches for the hybrid teas, such heaping is entirely feasible. Then after frost has set in, put a good covering of manure around these hills and ordinary bedding or litter between them. In spring remove the bedding, pull the manure down between the hills, rake your soil over it and do your pruning as soon as the eyes begin to break.

Standard roses I think are most successfully grown by lifting them every fall and burying them in eighteen inches or more of soil. Better yet, plant them in small tubs and bury tub and all. Climbers can be bent down and buried in the ground. By this method the bark is, however, easily cracked if not carefully handled, and the result is the loss of many of the main shoots. Thorough binding up in long straw with outside paper cover, therefore, seems the most advisable cover for climbers in need of such protection.

Where the winter is not too severe, I consider fall planting preferable to spring planting, provided the planting is done in good season, say not later than November 15.

These, in short, are the general cultural directions under which I have seen the happiest results in the rigorous climate of the east—Connecticut, for instance.

To us all these matters of culture are a matter of course, but for the amateur they are perplexing to begin with, but should not be discouraging. No one today hesitates to acquire an automobile, not knowing the least thing about its mechanism, or underlying principles of locomotion. To begin with, he or she will be puzzled; but, as gradually through experience and study the mechanism and working principles of the machine explain themselves, the amateur chauffeur becomes the self-confident master of this complicated creation of the professional machinist, and he not only runs the machine, but attends to ordinary repairs and before long has some suggestions to make for improvements. Why should the same amount of intelligence not be able to solve the so much easier problems of competent and sensible rose culture?

Budded or Own Root Roses.

For instance, there is quite a difference of opinion as to the relative value of budded or grafted plants and plants on their own roots. I think we most all agree that budded plants are giving much better results as to vigor of growth and quality of bloom, but we realize that the average amateur grower may be better served with plants on their own roots, because there will be no danger of his losing his flowering plant through the unrecognized or unnoticed growth of wild suckers.

Now I think we ought to at least give our friends, the customers, credit for ordinary intelligence, by telling them that if they will compare the foliage of a wild rose with that of a hybrid, they will soon learn to distinguish between a sucker and the real thing; and they will understand that by diligently removing the former they will have the best results with the latter. Ardent lovers of flowers will be glad to learn that. For those who are too busy or don't care, the own root plants, I admit, may be better, but I believe it is only fair to state to the amateur the difference between the two and let him have his choice.

If the roses are budded low, the stock eyes removed before planting and the roses planted good and deep, comparatively little sucker trouble will be encountered, and I for one shall want is not of sufficiently vigorous stock to overcome this change of soil texture and quality. Yet the buyer has planted them as directed—in any ordinary soil. The two-year-old plant will fare better and give much more return and value in every case.

Before I leave the subject of one-year-old plants I want to ask the question whether it is not a fact that those plants on their own roots are mostly winter cuttings from more or less continually forced stock, and some of them second cuttings from rooted cuttings in the bench? If so, can it be reasonably expected that plants so produced will attain the vigor, productive quality and sustaining strength and hardiness so essential to outdoor culture? If not, is it not more or less a fraud on the public, justifying the saying "Cheap cloth, tools or help are too dear at any price"? I claim that all own-root roses intended for outdoor culture should come from soft or hard-wood cuttings from outdoor plants. I say, propagate from good stock and offer good stock if you want to grow good roses and satisfy and retain your customers.

As already stated, I am not an expert many ways of accomplishing the same purpose, provided the purpose is clearly defined and understood. To benefit the lover and amateur grower of roses, we must reach him outdoors. We must stimulate and advocate outdoor culture, and educate those we reach with our pleas. To benefit the amateurs means to benefit the growers.

To encourage outdoor rose culture, I would suggest that we work along the following lines:

Suggest and advocate through our trade papers and through all other possible means the introduction of public rose gardens in public parks; not only in the large cities, but everywhere. Such gardens could be inaugurated and helped along through donations of plants by local growers and dealers, and where the experienced gardener is missing, help along this line might be furnished throughout the same sources.

Let the florists' clubs and other kindred societies of the country arrange for free lectures, giving the public plain, true and comprehensive instruction and information on the subject, and have, if possible, a rose show connected with the lecture.

budded plants wherever I have something to say in this matter of choice.

One-year Roses.

The planting of one-year roses, which, if not especially advocated, is at least widely advertised, is all right as far as it goes, but it must, to a certain extent, be misleading and disappointing to many amateur rose growers. The offer of one dozen rose plants for $1, guaranteed to bloom the first year, from June to October, is certainly very attractive and tempting; but if this $1 is the extent of the available funds for such investment, I would advise my customer to take four or six two-year-old budded plants, plant them wider apart, be satisfied with a few flowers the first year and get the benefit and more blooms forever afterward.

The one-year-old plants, which have been planted close, will, if they grow, crowd each other in no time and consequently should be transplanted the second or third year at the latest, which in most cases is not done. If they don't grow it is because the soil to which they have been transferred out of the pots is not congenial, and the plant in itself rose grower and don't pretend to be, but I believe that here as elsewhere the underlying principle in securing good results is good structural foundation.

It is so evident that propagation from continuously forced plant stock and through too soft wood means degeneration and deterioration of quality and strength, that I need not dwell on this subject any longer. The best proof of this statement is the rapid degeneration of so many varieties used for forcing for a period of ten or even less years, compared with the same varieties grown outdoors and propagated from outdoor plants.

There is one thing the buyer of budded plants is pretty sure of, and that is he need not fear to get in his purchased plants the weak, degenerated blood which he is apt to get by buying own-root plants, and so-called slips.

Suggestions for Encouragement.

To discuss such matters is the principal purpose of our gatherings. The question has been put by our executive committee, "what can the A. R. S. do to help the lovers of roses and the members of the society?" There are

Let each rose grower or nurseryman establish a small rose garden in which he practices good culture; let him arrange for a rose show of his own and invite his customers near and far to his grounds when the plants are at their best.

A PITTSBURG PLANT.

The accompanying illustrations show the two ranges of the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa. The ranges stand on opposite sides of a ravine, with the boiler plant below in the ravine.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. was organized in 1901 with a capital stock of $100,000, by Fred Burki, who associated with him F. Kocher, L. Eltcher, and several others. They purchased the Crystal farm at Bakerstown, about nineteen miles from Pittsburg on the B. & O. railroad. The farm comprised 210 acres, on which were three dwellings and two large barns.

The first year they erected and planted in roses two Lord & Burnham houses, each 28x400 feet. They also built three dwellings, boiler-houses and ice-house, and erected a 1,400-barrel tank on a steel tower eighty feet above the highest point on the farm, with the necessary pumping machinery to fill this tank in nine hours.

The plant has been a success from the start, under the management of Mr. Burki, who, with his family, lives on the place in a fine, modern home. Since that time they have put up iron-frame houses, most of them 50x450 feet, until they now have 200,000 square feet under glass. Five boilers have 650 combined horse-power. The packing houses are 30x80 feet, the ice-house with cooling room 30x40 feet. There are eighteen dwellings, a hotel to accommodate the unmarried men, office, two large barns with building for grain, hay and machinery, a bowling alley, soil-shed, and all other necessary buildings on a farm.

There are also four producing oil wells and two gas wells. The farm is about one-third in good oak timber, the balance mostly in grass, with two good orchards. Last year they purchased an additional thirty acres to shape up one corner of the farm, and now, at the close of the sixth year, they show an investment of $200,000.

Some advance is likely, however, later in the week, when best quality will probably make $1.

Bulbous stock is in good supply and little change in price. Easter lilies are bringing 10 cents to 12½ cents per bud, callas about the same prices. Sweet peas are abundant and of grand quality. They sell well. Valley is in good supply and there is a fine quantity of antirrhinum, mignonette, anemones, ranunculus, primroses and other seasonable flowers. There is no special change in green stock, of which a good supply is forthcoming.

Club Field Day.

About sixty members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club joined in the field day at the establishment of W. W. Edgar Co., Waverley, March 23. The visitors were first piloted through the houses by Mr. Edgar and David Lumsden. A large house of lilies was in fine shape for Easter; little trace of disease seen. About 4,000 azaleas were in the pink of condition. Many fine specimens of Novelty, a fine rosy-red variety, were noted. Niobe, Postmeister Stephan, Vander Cruyssen, Helene Thelemann, Mevilleas, pink and white hydrangeas and other plants. Mr. Roland will try his hand at growing the waxy race of ericas another year.

J. T. Butterworth, in addition to his usual big lot of lily of the valley, bulbous stock, etc., had a fine batch of Dendrobium Wardianum for Easter.

Welch Bros. had sold more Easter plants up to March 22 than during their whole Easter trade a year ago and at better prices. They anticipate record-breaking business this week.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are having a heavy trade in flowers and greenery this week and are being kept rushed every hour of the day.

Albert Roper's new variegated carnation, Bay State, was much admired at the last club meeting and spring show. Mr. Roper has 2,000 plants of it growing. He has a seedling of better size and color than Fair Maid and said to be three times as prolific, which should also be heard from.

F. R. Pierson, at the recent club meeting, spoke highly of Carnation Melody, the light pink sport of Lawson, and said it made much higher prices than Enchantress, holding its color better.

One of the Ranges of the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa.

-ney grow roses, carnations, Asparagus plumosus, Sprengeri, chrysanthemums, and a few other smaller things, the whole cut making a good wagon-load every morning, shipped to the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., of which Mr. Burki is president.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The usual shortening up of supplies is now quite apparent and large quantities of flowers are being held back. Prices are satisfactory, perhaps better than they will be on some lines at the end of the week. We have had one or two warm days, which were welcomed by those whose pot plants were a little backward. The thermometer reached 72 in the shade March 23. Cooler conditions, however, have prevailed since that time. Roses are quite plentiful. Plenty of Beauties will be forthcoming for Easter and it looks like a generous supply of all other sorts. Prices have crept up somewhat on all lines. Carnations are bringing much better prices; nothing below $4 and best grades up to $8 and $10. Violets are abundant and averaging about 50 cents.

moire Louis Van Houtte and Bernard Andre alba were other favorites. Rambler roses, acacias, astilbes, lilacs and a variety of other stock was noted at the old establishment, in addition to the quantities of ferns, palms and bedding plants. Before proceeding to the new plant, some distance away, refreshments were served. On motion of President Westwood three cheers and a tiger, followed by the singing of "He's a jolly good fellow," were accorded Mr. Edgar and further cheers given for Mrs. Edgar and a daughter born only two days previously. Mr. Edgar's little daughters recited, W. J. Stewart sang "Annie Laurie," P. Welch and others made a few remarks and then all proceeded to the new establishment.

Here one house 40x200 was planted with tomatoes, Comet being used. In another house 25,000 bedding geraniums in 3½-inch pots were seen. Some 7,500 hydrangeas were also coming along for Memorial day trade.

Various Notes.

Thomas Roland had 1,800 finely grown rambler roses, mostly pink, for Easter trade. He also had splendid lots of acacias, marguerites, lilies, bougain-

They will bench 10,000 of it next season at Tarrytown.

B. K. Howard, the instructor of the landscape classes of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, will address the next club meeting on April 16 on landscape gardening. At the May meeting Duncan Finlayson will tell the members how to plant and care for an Italian garden. The club banquet will be held on or about April 17 and tickets will be purchasable from members of the executive committee and officers of the club.

William Nicholson, as usual, has a grand lot of white and yellow marguerites of which he is cutting some thousands weekly. These always meet with a quick sale.

Peirce Bros.' big lot of lilies were never in better shape for Easter and every pot is sold as usual.

Among visitors the week were George E. Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J.; E. B. Beals, Springfield; T. W. Head, Groton, Conn.; T. McCarthy, Providence, R. I.; F. C. Green, Warwick, R. I.; F. Heeremans and Edwin Jenkins, Lenox; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Thomas Knight, Rutherford, N. J.; George F. Struck, Orange, N. J.

THE REVIEW is pleased to publish brief reports of the meetings of trade societies, but secretaries should forward their notes the day after the meeting; don't hold them until they become ancient history.

THIS year the wholesale markets have had many more Enchantress than any other variety of carnation. From the demand for cuttings it appears that next season there may be pretty nearly as many Enchantress as all other sorts combined.

GET a printed letter-head; let appearances indicate that you really are in business.

THE plant business has now reached the carload stage, two such shipments being reported in this week's Chicago column.

UNSEASONABLY warm weather last week glutted the cut flower markets from one end of the country to the other and made Easter supplies abundant, if not of superlative quality.

THERE is a big call for chrysanthemum cuttings. Those who have good varieties, well rooted, for present delivery can sell them quickly by offering them in the REVIEW's advertising columns.

GERANIUMS from 2-inch or 2½-inch pots are hard to find; most of those who have them are holding for the profit to be made by growing on into 4-inch pots after Easter stock is out of the way.

CHAIRMAN KNAPP and Commissioners Clements and Clark were the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission who heard the evidence in the case of the S. A. F. against the United States Express Co.

THE New England Dahlia Society has issued the first number of its monthly bulletin, to be known as the Dahlia News. It contains, besides an announcement and a list of members, an article by Wm. F. Turner on the various kinds of stock offered for planting. Maurice Fuld, of W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, is secretary of the society and editor of the bulletin.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

At the executive committee meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, held in New York city March 14, it was unanimously voted to hold the next meeting of the society in New York, thereby accepting the kind invitation extended by the American Institute through Dr. Hexamer. The enthusiasm with which the committee enters upon its duties augurs well for a successful meeting in November. The date is left open for the present and all possible care will be taken to prevent its conflicting with any dates already arranged, so that a majority will be able to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded to exhibit at, and visit, what promises to be the best chrysanthemum show ever held in New York. Many valuable premiums will be offered for commercial and exhibition varieties, particulars of which will be published upon completion of arrangements.

The constantly increasing membership is very gratifying, proving an awakened interest in the important work of the national society. But there are still many who, by their skill in producing such wonderful examples of the highest culture, should fall in line and lend their influence to the advancement of public interest in the queen of autumn, and thereby become links in the chain of recognized professionals in the culture of the chrysanthemum. Do not underestimate the value of your accomplishments. Identify yourself with the best growers and share in the mutual exchange of advanced ideas, and so keep pace with the increasing popularity of the flower we love.

TO CANADIAN SUBSCRIBERS.

The present postal treaty between the United States and Canada expires May 7. The Canadian government has before it a proposition to increase the rate of postage on periodicals from the United States to such an extent as to render it necessary for American publishers to materially raise their subscription prices to Canadian subscribers. If Canadian friends of the REVIEW object to such an increase of prices, it will be well for them to make known their objections at once to the Canadian postal authorities.

ROSE SOCIETY MEMBERSHIP.

Reviewing the work of the American Rose Society since the Boston meeting, Secretary Benjamin Hammond said: "Our present membership extends from Bellingham in northwestern Washington to Schlesian, Germany. We have lost in all five life members by death—E. G. Asmus, E. M. Wood, H. Dale, George Fancourt and J. L. Dillon, the two latter within the last year, and each of these men was an active rose-grower. Two new life members were added to our list, S. S. Pennock and Robert Simpson, making forty-three active. The annual membership who have paid up their dues for this year number ninety-one, divided as eighty-five active and six associate members. This division of associate members seems as if it may bring into touch with this society an extended number of people interested in local societies."

It is with great pleasure that I send $2.50 to pay my subscription another year. It is not only the American florists who can profit by the REVIEW, but even for the florists in Denmark it is a very helpful and up-to-date paper, and a source of valuable information.

I keep several Danish, German and English trades papers, but the REVIEW beats them all. CHAS. THOMSEN.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Peter Langan.

Peter Langan, of Astoria, N. Y., died suddenly March 15 at the home of a friend whom he was visiting at 89 Flushing avenue. Mr. Langan was about 50 years old. He had for some years resided with a brother at 921 Crescent avenue. He was a veteran florist and also a member of the Veteran Firemen's Association, of Long Island city. This organization in a body attended the funeral services, which were held Sunday afternoon, March 17.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

We have had a week of summer. Saturday, March 23, the temperature was 80 degrees in the shade, a record without parallel in the history of the local weather bureau. The natural result has been that the market has been glutted with stock. There has been too much of everything, and it has been impossible to realize anything like quoted rates in any department. On Wednesday, with Easter only four days away, the market was at its worst. Everything was a glut, with qualities deteriorating rapidly under the influence of the damp, hot air and no legitimate outlet or value for more than a small part of the receipts.

The increase in supply has been more pronounced in roses than in carnations, although the latter have sold at the lowest prices of the season as late as Wednesday. American Beauties became overabundant, in common with other roses. Easter lilies came hurrying in a week before they were wanted, and all bulb stock felt the stimulus of the warm, bright days in spite of all the growers could do to hold it back for Easter. Outdoor stock from the south adds to the congestion.

It is now certain that there will be an abundance in all lines for the Easter business. The booking of orders has been heavier than usual, but especially so on lilies. It now appears that most of the lilies will be ready and wholesalers have no fear of a shortage. Roses will be plentiful and all bulbous stock will be in huge supply. Violets, sweet peas, mignonette, and pansies all are coming in heavily. The carnation crop has not felt the effect of the weather so much as other lines, although receipts are heavy. The fact is that the carnation crop is on the down grade; we have had our heaviest production, some growers say, until late in the spring.

Out of town buyers need have no hesitancy in calling on this market for additional supplies of stock if they find their Easter demand running ahead of anticipations. This market will have the stock to meet all calls up to Saturday night and every wholesaler will exert himself to see that orders are out promptly. They all will be thinking of the orders which are to come after Easter.

The local buyers have laid in heavily of plants, but have not yet bought much in the cut flower line, except lilies, hoping for a repetition of last year's experience, when the market broke badly after the shipping demand had been taken care of.

George Reinberg, Orchid Specialist.

Joseph Foerster, manager of the selling end of the George Reinberg establishment, states that in the last week they have placed an order with the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., for established orchid plants for immediate shipment sufficient to give them a standing as the orchid specialists of the west. The plants will make such a bulk they will be shipped as a carload, and should come through safely by fast freight. The plants include all the popular cut flower varieties, of such size as will give immediate bloom, according to their season. William Arnold, foreman for George Reinberg, is something of an orchid expert, so that the undertaking is not of experimental character. Mr. Foerster thinks the present excellent market for orchids is only a beginning of what it will be in a few years, and surely Chicago, with its great shipping trade, is the best center in the country for an orchid growing establishment.

Beauties by the Carload.

Peter Reinberg has just finished planting six houses of the Mrs. Marshall Field rose. It is grafted stock and in splendid condition. The space was formerly used for Beauties and 10,000 of the bench plants were sold to Heller Bros., the South Park Floral Co., New Castle. The 10,000 plants made just a nice carload.

A Near-Arrest.

Word has gone out in the automobile industry that Alderman Reinberg has commissioned Leonard Kill to select for him the best machine on the market. The result is that Mr. Kill is receiving a great many invitations for a little spin. March 21 a gentleman, anxious to make a sale, took Mr. Kill and N. J. Wieter for a run up the north shore. They had only fairly gotten up speed on the Sheridan drive when they were flagged by a policeman and the chauffeur placed under arrest. The justice said the fun was worth $25 and, as the automobile man did not have the price, the florists had to pay it for him, though he subsequently sent it back.

Hauswirth's New Store.

The addition to the Auditorium Annex is rapidly nearing completion and with it P. J. Hauswirth's new flower store at the south end of the Michigan avenue front. The store will be of good size and of such character that no more than an ice-box and some marble-topped tables will be needed in the way of fixtures. A basement for storage and work will be one of the added facilities. At the rear of the store will be a large conservatory, belonging to the hotel, but which will be an immense advantage to the flower store, as it will attract many guests of the hotel to the entrance to the store. The building will be completed around May 1 and will be by all odds the finest hotel building in the west. It was probably inevitable that other retailers should ask for the lease, although they never had any chance of accomplishing anything except to make Mr. Hauswirth's rent cost him more than it otherwise would.

Various Notes.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is in its additional space on the street floor at 45 to 49 Wabash this week. Their stock of Easter plants came in so heavily that it overflowed upon the sidewalk and made a display which has attracted a large amount of retail business, although the bulk of the sales the first of the week were wholesale. They contemplate putting in a large stock, doing retail business on the street floor and wholesale in the basement.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. reports that summer has struck New Castle with full force. The crop of Brides and Maids is something tremendous and the quality is remarkably good considering the heat.

John Lang, at Melrose and Robey streets, has filed a claim with the gas company asking that he be reimbursed to the extent of something like $2,000 for damage done to three houses of carnations by gas which, he claims, escaped from the company's mains and found its way out of the frozen ground through the greenhouses.

Percy Jones has received the advance guard of the procession of red gladioli which will shortly begin to march through his place in the market.

A. Lange has a vacant room in the Heyworth building for his Easter plant sales.

Bassett & Washburn have not yet settled upon a name for their red seedling carnation, No. 20, which they will disseminate next season. They would like to call it Hinsdale, but there is an old variety called Judge Hinsdale. Mr. Washburn thinks of calling it Orland, after Orland P. Bassett, who is now in Egypt.

J. F. Klimmer, at Oak Park, has had excellent results with Flamingo carnation this season and says that beside Craig and Victory it shows up well in every particular. At the last club meeting he was interested in the statement that with most growers carnation crops all season have been below the average. He says his own cut has been twenty per cent heavier than last year. E. C. Ameling, who was present, said that, while he thought it true that carnation crops generally had been lighter than ordinary, one of his growers a little way south has had heavier crops than ever before and better quality.

At E. H. Hunt's they have daily receipts of the Gen. MacArthur rose. Many buyers like it better than either Liberty or Richmond and some of the stems are as long as in either of the other varieties. Fragrance is one of its special characteristics.

August Poehlmann was elected a member of the executive committee of the American Rose Society at the Washington meeting in the interest of next year's exhibition at Chicago.

March 21 a runaway horse dashed into the Wabash Fruit and Flower Store, 325 Wabash avenue, by way of the show window.

Seitz & Nordell, who have the place of the late John C. Ure, at 2923 Evans-ton avenue, have secured the property just across from their present location and will build new greenhouses there. The new plant will be double the present capacity and will be completed by August.

A holdup man entered the back door of Darley & Dunbar's store on West Madison street one evening last week, but on being shown the muzzle of a revolver laid down his own weapon to the man who had the drop and was handed over to a nearby policeman. F. W. Darley says business has been good; they have been having a run of funeral work.

Among the visitors of the week were J. R. Bather, Clinton, Ia., buying Easter supplies; Mr. Schenck, of Schenck & Bliese Co., Waukesha, Wis., consulting the John C. Moninger Co. about a new greenhouse; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., looking up Easter prospects; Julius WOOD LICE.

Will someone tell me how to get rid of wood lice or sow bugs in green-houses?
H. M. S.

It is difficult to entirely eradicate these from greenhouses. Keep as little decaying wood and other debris in the houses as possible, for these act as ideal lurking places for them. They may be poisoned with a mixture of fresh bran and powdered sugar to which is added some Paris green or white arsenic. Lay the mixture in small saucers in the evening and do not leave it around where animals or children can reach it. Turnips or potatoes, if scooped out partially and laid around, will form a trap for many. Look around daily and destroy all found on them by dipping in hot water. Boiling water, or as near boiling as possible, if poured under stages infested by them, will kill large quantities. Use a watering pot with a coarse rose in applying the water.

LOOSE CREDITS.

Loose credits are an evil affecting many lines of business, but it is doubtful if there is in any line of merchandising less system applied to this important feature than is the case in the florists' trade. Not only are both retail and wholesale buyers carried longer than they should be, but credit is given in many cases where it is wholly unwarranted. Not only are profits reduced by the necessity of charging off large amounts where misfortune or poor judgment have resulted in the downfall of an honest man, but lax methods of credit and collection open the way to those whose intention it is to pay only so long as it appears to them to be worth while to do so. Unfortunately there are on the outskirts of our trade, as in every other, men who value a good name at only a very few dollars.

To illustrate both the character of men we sometimes meet and the ease with which they may continue for a time in the business, there is the story of a recent incident which took place in a middle western city. A party without resources other than wit secured a foothold for a flower stand. To get stock he would call up wholesalers in other cities on the long-distance telephone, always having made an appointment for a little after six o'clock. Always he was in the greatest haste. His story varied, but he did not hesitate to name as references houses where he was wholly unknown. He would not have stock sent C. O. D., but later succeeded in getting second shipments from some of those who accepted his representations by telling them over the 'phone that he had mailed a check for the first bill. Where a C. O. D. was sent he secured its release by 'phoning that he had already mailed a check—which never came.

It does not follow that because a man names good references he is entitled to credit. He has no right to expect credit until time has been given to look up the references. It is taking chances to ship cut flowers C. O. D. to a distant stranger, but yet it appears that it is sometimes possible to get stock with no other preliminary than indicating that it can be used.

WAUKESHA, WIS.—Schenck & Bliese Co. reports demand steadily increasing. A carnation house 42x150 is to be built this spring, of Moninger material.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The feature of the market is the tremendous supply of southern daffodils now arriving. The supply is so large that it is impossible to market them at fair prices. Thanks to the activity of the wholesalers, and in many cases of the street men, most of them are marketed at some figure, although occasionally tales of woe are heard. White carnations are probably the most active feature of a rather listless market. The demand is irregular on nearly all flowers, and especially so on roses. It had been expected that for two weeks before Easter business would gradually improve, but this hope has not been realized. We have experienced a period of dullness for the current week, from Thursday, March 21, to Wednesday, March 27.

Easter Prospects.

Indications for Easter, on the eve of the rush, point to an excellent business in plants, probably even greater than that of last year. Immense quantities of stock have been sold, and are being delivered to the stores or the express companies; so large a quantity that it gives ground for the belief that nearly all the first-class stock in good condition has been marketed. There are, on many places, considerable numbers of plants that are not ready or do not meet market requirements. It is impossible to give any idea regarding cut flower prospects beyond the general statement that the supply will be large. Expert judges believe that the supply of cut lilies, large as it is, will not equal the demand, and also that, when the demand sets in, which they believe will be late, it will sweep everything before it.

Up the Street.

It is a slang expression, among the cut flower salesmen, and even with the dignified salesmen in the retail stores, that going "up the street" means going to Pennock Bros. It so happened that Phil went "up the street" to see what was new in plants. The conservatory of Pennock Bros., one of the most famous flower show-rooms in the city, was filled with specimens of choice flowering plants, well worth seeing. They represented the combined skill of all the best plant growers around Philadelphia. There were many fine specimens of all the standard varieties of Easter plants. Among them were a few novelties of more than ordinary interest. The most striking of these was the Japanese azalea, Hyno de Giri, which may be described as a lively cerise in color; the pair of specimens were in 12-inch pots, a mass of bloom, gorgeous to behold. Another novelty was the variegated Bougainvillea W. K. Harris, seen for the first time in bloom, its variegated foliage contrasting strikingly with the purple flowers. A novel basket used as a plant hamper is made entirely of pussy-willows. This is quite unique, the shape resembling a good-sized square scrap basket. The willows are kept moist until sent out, so that they retain their life and develop. These baskets are filled beautifully with flowering plants and an occasional touch of green.

Brandywine Summit.

Two passengers on the West Philadelphia platform last Saturday consulted a small man standing near them as to whether the 7:21 over the Baltimore Central came on that track. "No," the man said, "it does not, but the 8:21 may. It is after 8 now." Consternation, consultation of watches, relief, arrival of the third passenger and the 7:21 in quick succession. Then the train pulled out for the south and the trip to Brandywine Summit, postponed from last October, was begun. The trio consisted of C. F. Wertsner, who can elect anybody he pleases president of the Germantown Horticultural Society (I don't say "—" pleases, for Mr. Wertsner is a thoroughly good man); John Curwen, who believes Enchantress is the only carnation and that Zvolanek is the greatest floricultural benefactor, and Phil, who believes that no effort should be spared to keep the REVIEW in the lead.

The train pulled into our station at 8:15. It was a glorious day, clear and cold, just the sort of day when a morning walk is a luxury. Even Mr. Wertsner, who never walks from preference, admitted that the mile or so over the road and across the fields aroused a glow of warmth that was grateful. Our destination was Albin Harvey & Sons' place. A cordial greeting from father and both sons made the visitors at once feel at home, as Mr. Wertsner confidentially remarked when he returned to B. S. (N. B.—This does not stand for brandy and soda.)

The greenhouses of Albin Harvey & Sons are of twentieth century origin, commencing with a couple of houses, built as an outlet for boyish energy, and continuing with more and more houses, until last season's addition of 15,000 feet of glass brought the place up to something like 45,000 square feet in all. The range of truss houses added last season evidences the progressive spirit that dominates. These houses are wonderfully light. The feeling is, however, strongly in favor of the detached house, with no gutters to hold ice and snow. The Messrs. Harvey own over 200 acres of ground, so that they can afford space between houses and, as REVIEW readers will recall, one of their houses was injured in the snow of February 4. The weight proved too great at 2:30 a. m. The foreman called the owners, who luckily had lumber on hand. A hard night's work enabled them to board off the uninjured parts so that five-sixths of the range was saved from frost. All the houses are now strengthened. These houses were light to a degree rarely seen. The stock looked very well, the plants vigorous, flowers large and perfect. It must in fairness be added that the stock in the heavier and narrower houses was also very fine. It took just three weeks to put this section of house back into commission.

Albin Harvey & Sons are growers of high grade carnations. Their varieties are Lady Bountiful, White Perfection and The Queen, white, of which they have two houses; Enchantress, pale pink, and Mrs. Lawson, rose-pink. The last named variety was not satisfactory this season and was replaced by sweet peas, which have proved an excellent crop. Young plants of Lawson are already planted in the injured section, to remain there all summer. Prosperity is grown, but it is not found profitable, though it yields fine flowers. The scarlet and crimson classes are well represented. Robert Craig, Flamingo, Cardinal and Harlowarden were all nicely done. I think there was another scarlet, possibly Crane. My impression was that a less skilful grower would find this proportion of perhaps one-fifth too many reds. The propagating house was a pretty sight. Winsor was noticed in 3-inch pots in another house.

One bench is devoted to mignonette, which has been fine. Some heavy spikes are still there for seed.

The large dairy was next visited, then the silo and ensilage. All was clean and neat. The output goes to the Sharpless creamery. Mushrooms are grown under some carnation benches. There is also a regular mushroom house, with five tiers of benches. Good crops have been harvested, with more in sight.

I cannot close without mentioning two historic landmarks, one seen, the other heard: The house in which Gen. Howe made his headquarters at the battle, now the home of Mr. Harvey, Jr., and Mr. Wertsner's engineer story. Here it is:

"An engineer constructing a railway had much trouble with his supply train; it jumped the track daily. He reported to his superior each night on six or seven pages of foolscap. The chief didn't like this and wrote him, 'Boil it down.' Still five or six pages of big paper. A second command, 'Boil it down, sir,' made things seem serious. The engineer sat up all that night boiling. Here is his report: "Off again, on again, gone again, Finnegan."

You may ask why Mr. Wertsner's witty story is historic. Well, Phil attempted to get it off afterwards on quite a young man. Before two words had been spoken the young man said with a bored look, "If that is the Finnegan story, I heard it twenty years ago."

Various Notes.

L. G. Blick, of Norfolk, Va., suffered a severe loss in the death of his father, which occurred last Sunday. Mr. Blick has many friends in this city.

Among the visitors here within the last few days were William F. Gude and the Freemans, father and son, of Washington, D. C.; John Cook, and William F. and Charles Feast, of Baltimore, Md.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will remove from its present quarters at 1516 and 1518 Sansom street, July 1, to 1517 Sansom street. The "Philadelphia Cut," as its loyal supporters term it, will have greatly increased facilities in the new building, where it will occupy the first and second floors.

Charles Balderston, of Colora, Md., is sending some fine Gen. Jacqueminot roses, quite a rarity in this market until Easter, to W. E. McKissick.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. received many cases of Easter baskets on the steamer Menomenie, which were sold in original case lots. They have been greatly pushed this week filling the last moment orders.

W. & Harry F. Evans, of Rowlandville, Pa., have 6,000 fine pots of lilies, which Leo Niessen says have all made Easter, except only a dozen or so plants.

Charles Schmitt, of Harrisburg, has been in this city recently.

Berger Bros. are fortunate in having a heavy cut of fancy Brides and Maids from Stockton & Howe for Easter.

Emil Gerschick is making a fine Easter display on the old Cliffe place at Main and Johnson streets, German-town.

William Munro, of Garrettsford, is sending fine Kaiserins to the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. and to W. E. McKissick.

Mr. Masolf, representing the King Construction Co., has taken charge of the operations at North Wales for the Florex Gardens. The smaller house has been commenced. A carload of millwork lost in transit has been recovered.

The tri-city bowling tournament, scheduled for last Thursday, in this city, has been postponed until after Easter.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week in Horticultural hall.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., was among the Philadelphians in Washington during the rose show. Mr. Berkowitz has some interesting ideas regarding the possibilities of the business which I hope to give later.

Edw. J. Fancourt, secretary of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., has returned from a successful six weeks' business trip.

William J. Moore has been king bee on southern daffodils, of which he has disposed of immense numbers.

The Hugh Graham Co., Logan, Pa., has flowered some plants of Frau Karl Druschki rose, variously described as the white American Beauty and the white Brunner. These plants are said to be remarkably well done.

M. Rice & Co. are receiving, on an average, a dozen telegrams daily for Easter supplies, and report that all orders are filled and shipped as soon as received, they having made special provisions for a large Easter business this year.

Edward Reid says plant sales are ahead of last year.

Leo Niessen says the plant growers are already refusing orders.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have a fine display of well-grown flowering stock.

The Robert Craig Co. had fine rhododendrons and Magna Charta roses in addition to the stock described two weeks ago.

Jacob Becker had a lot of well-grown Easter plants.

Myers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, Pa., will add one house 200 feet long and, I think, 56 feet wide, for American Beauty roses this season. They will use Lord & Burnham material with Sterns bars. This house, with the rearrangement of two other houses, will increase their capacity for American Beauty roses from 26,000 and some odd, to 35,000, exactly the number to be planted by the Florex Gardens.

F. R. Matsinger, of Palmyra, N. J., should be an ardent REVIEW man hereafter. Ask him why. PHIL.

LINCOLN, ILL.—Gullett & Sons had their lilies ready in good season and shipped quite a number in pots. The bulk of the stock, however, is sold at wholesale, cut.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Spring arrived promptly on time. March 21 saw the warmest spring opening of the generation and a temperature of 75 degrees. If the weather will play a continuous performance until Sunday we shall see the record-breaking Easter we have learned to expect every year and the vagaries of an erratic winter will be forgiven and forgotten. But these early Easters are not popular. The oldest wholesalers are filled with forebodings of sudden changes, extremes of weather and consequent disaster. It is small comfort to know that next year Easter will arrive three weeks later. "Sufficient unto the day is the risk thereof." But before this issue of the REVIEW reaches its New York readers the business will be at its height.

The plant growers are already out of the woods and every good specimen has been sold. With the exception of the lilies there has been no advance above the normal average. Azaleas have sold at reasonable figures and consequently enterprising importers of large quantities are happy and well rewarded.

Lilies a week before Easter were firm at 15 cents. What the belated buyers may have to pay before the week is over is a question. I think any first-class flowers, cut or with pots, will bring good money.

The prospects for an uninterrupted spring were shaded Sunday and Monday by a descent to freezing temperature again, but with the sun beyond the meridian and the cut flower growers assured of an abundant crop there seems little ground for pessimism and abundant hope for grand results to all.

Last week was a severe one in the wholesale market. Prices were sacrificed in all departments. The finest Beauties were begging at $3 a dozen, for thousands of all grades came in with the spring. It isn't often one sees an ice-box crowded with American Beauties. This would indicate as the Easter figure no higher than $6 per dozen for the finest selection. Other roses participated in the slump.

The Southern narcissi are arriving just as the local supply was shortening. Every variety of bulbous stock is abundant.

If anything fails to meet the demand it will be the orchid. So rapidly is it becoming appreciated everywhere that the supply henceforth can never be capable of completely filling the demand. This is especially so at Easter.

As to violets for Easter, it all depends on the weather. Should the temperature again reach the high mark of March 23, quality will deteriorate and prices for first-class stock be high. Judging by the floods of violets during the past week, there need be no fear as to the quantity.

Various Notes.

April 8, one week from Monday, will be ladies' night and rose night at the New York Florists' Club. Splendid exhibits are assured. A large attendance of the fair sex is a certainty and special attractions are promised by both the culinary and entertainment departments. The outing committee will meet at the office of F. H. Traendly at 5 o'clock the afternoon of the club meeting. This will be the last ladies' night of the season.

Henry A. Siebrecht lectured March 27 on "Flowers for Easter and for Spring Gardens" at the American Institute.

A. LeMoult, the veteran florist of the Bowery, is spending the Easter holidays with his family at Atlantic City and putting the responsibilities of the busy time upon the shoulders of Adolph, Jr., on whom the mantle will later fall, and through whom the reputation of nearly half a century will be perpetuated.

Coles & Co., of 109 Warren street, New York, are finding the demand for their verbena baskets greater this spring than in all their twenty-three years' experience, a healthful sign as to the prospective suburban demands upon the big seed houses of this center. Day and night all the garden supply establishments are busy with increased forces.

Jefferson Doremus, of Madison, was in the city March 23, philosophizing as to Easter needs in Beauties, Maids and Brides, of which he grows an abundance. A. J. Guttman handles this fine stock, as well as the Lawson and Enchantress grown by John Joyce, of Congers.

Myer Othile, with Mr. Guttman, has the sympathy of all in the loss of his mother, who died at 357 West Forty-fourth street March 20. The burial was on Friday at Washington cemetery. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.

Mr. Peth, for many years proprietor of Bridgeman's Seed Warehouse, and later a retail florist in Harlem, is now with William Elliott & Sons.

James Weir & Sons, Brooklyn, have assumed the management of the cut flower and plant department in the big store of Abram & Straus of that city.

At another large department store in Brooklyn C. C. Trepel has built up a tremendous retail business, its cut flower department presided over by Mrs. Trepel, and the sales in plants and flowers aggregating daily more than a month's receipts in an ordinary store.

F. Mellstrom, representing Sander &

Son, of St. Albans, England, has arrived for his regular American trip.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to A. Moltz in the loss of his mother.

M. A. Bowe recovered from a severe illness just in time for the Easter business. This store of his in the heart of the city is a busy transient center.

This is James McManus' first Easter in his enlarged and central headquarters on West Twenty-eighth street, now none too large for the big trade persistent attention to business has evolved.

Traendly & Schenck have a flower show every day on their three floors. Among the important developments of the year was the translation of the junior member of the firm into the reliable ranks of the benedicts. Now everything moves along without any friction and the wheels of progress are seemingly well oiled.

J. K. Allen is celebrating this year his twentieth Easter and six o'clock in the morning is the record he holds without a break during nearly a quarter of a century. There isn't anything in cut flowers worth mentioning that he does not offer for the holiday, and he draws six years is the record and he holds it.

He has a good, big store now and there is no reason why he should not develop a business equal to that of his palmiest days. James, Jr., is an efficient lieutenant and will soon steady himself in the ranks of the benedicts, about the time of June roses.

L. B. Coddington's roses are winning a name in rosedom, and their name is legion since the big houses were completed. H. E. Froment handles the entire output, violets being another specialty of this popular house. There have been no changes in the office staff during the year and the big ship floats on an even keel.

William Starke says he had more orders booked for the Easter trade than his conservatories would hold if they were four times as large. He seems to empty the one on Twenty-ninth street several times weekly.

John Seligman and Joseph J. Levy are on the crest of prosperity's wave. They have grown fast since Easter, 1906. Courtesy, attention to business and persistency always culminate in success. Then, too, a good wife added to the combination during the year has been an inspiration.

Joseph J. Fenrich, the youngest and liveliest of the wholesalers, handles not only Schultheis' prize stuff, but Totty's Richmonds, white violets and about every variety of cut flower yet discovered. Mrs. Fenrich is a daughter of the veteran Le Mout, of the Bowery, and the boy will take first prize at the outing this year unless all signs fail, for he is a "physical culture baby."

A. M. Henshaw finds the square deal and square dealing excellent foundation stones for the rearing of a structure that grows higher and broader daily. He has had a most satisfactory year and no finer roses come to the city than those he handles.

The Kervan Co. has an abundance of southern supplies of all kinds for Easter; so have George Cotsonas & Co., including especially fancy ferns, galax and leucothoe.

N. Lecakes & Co., in addition to all varieties of green goods, have a cut flower department managed by John Foley that has grown to good proportions since last Easter. The head of the house, Nicholas Lecakes, celebrated last week the arrival of his second boy.

Russin & Hanfling, the basket manufacturers and supply men, had a splendid year and a big Easter trade. They are greatly encouraged by the growth of their business.

The Geller Co. finds its big store just what was needed for Easter and wonders now how it ever managed without it. Mr. Geller will soon be off for Europe to select his stock for the coming season.

A. L. Young & Co. are among the optimists, having doubled their business and the size and conveniences of their handy store. Personality is a desideratum in progress, and courtesy and consideration for others are a sure stepping-stone to advancement and esteem.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, early in April, will be ladies' night. It will be doubly interesting because of Easter and its memories. A splendid program will be provided.

May the Easter of 1907 be to all a source of profit, hope and happiness and the grandest Easter in the experience of every florist on the continent.

VISITORS AT BOTANIC GARDENS.

As indicating the popular appreciation of horticulture in England, and how far it is in advance of America, the following figures as to visitors at the Royal Botanic Gardens will be interesting:

"During 1906, 2,339,492 visitors entered the gates at Kew. This represents an increase of over half a million on the numbers for any previous year. The attendance on August 6, 1906, was a record one, 113,131 persons visiting Kew on that day. On three previous occasions only have there been more than 100,000 visitors on one day. The monthly attendances during 1906 were as follows: January, 27,736; February, 33,407; March, 66,613; April, 267,629; May, 159,071; June, 513,095; July, 372,398; August, 425,117; September, 277,917; October, 137,201; November, 34,042; December, 25,266; total, 2,339,492."

KUYK'S INVENTIONS.

Wm. Kuyk, of Kuyk Bros., growers of bulbs, etc., at Hillegom, Holland, is in Paris and writes: "I am establishing here a large house for the manufacturing of an invention of mine which is patented in Europe and in America. I am going to make arrangements to send it from Paris all over the world, and surely it will be a practical thing also for America."

"It is a new tie of metal which will be called the Ideal Quick Tie. Every nurseryman to whom I have showed this tie in different countries, England, France, Germany, Belgium and Holland, has said to me: 'This is a real gem.' It is so extremely simple and can be supplied for such a low price that it is wonderful. Of course, it must be made on a large scale and the metal is made specially and is colored olive green. People say: 'Well, even when they will supply raffia for nothing, raffia will be much too dear, as one will save much time with it.'"

"Besides this invention, I have invented and patented in Europe and I am busy to do so also for America, a new system of flower pot which has proved to be something fine. Under exactly the same conditions, bulbs of hyacinths planted in my pots and planted in the old pots, in my pots were in flower a fortnight earlier. I have given my pots to several nurserymen in Europe for trial for different cultures. I think I will give this thing my name, calling them Kuyk's pots. It takes up only one-third of the room as other pots and if only for this reason, it is, as you will understand, a great advance."

TOMATOES.

Watering and Feeding.

Tomatoes are growing apace now and need an abundance of water, especially plants that have been bearing for some time and have their root space well occupied. Between the amount of water that the plants utilize and the drying atmosphere, it will often be necessary to give water several times a day, but it pays to give them this attention as it keeps the plants growing freely and keeps the fruit swelling. If neglected in the matter of water now the fruit ripens up under size and amounts to but little when sent to market.

Feeding is also of considerable assistance in the swelling of the fruit. For crops nearly over, perhaps the best feeding to use is nitrate of soda, as this is quick acting and is quickly utilized by the plants. But for crops less advanced, I believe better results can be obtained by using liquid made from sheep manure. The best way to prepare this is to put about half a bag of the manure in a barrel of water, letting the substance soak out through the bag. This keeps it free from sediment and avoids the clogging of the soil. It only requires to stand over night to make the liquid strong enough to use. If the manure is good, it will be too strong to use then without diluting for the first watering or two, but after that it can be used as it comes.

For the purpose of making liquid manure, I prefer the manure in its unpulverized state, as it contains much more substance than the pulverized article usually does. The drying out of the manure necessary to pulverizing seems to evaporate a good deal of the strength; besides, when you buy the pure article you see what you are getting and are not paying for a combination of manure and cut hay.

Feeding with sheep manure will bring the roots to the surface of the soil. We have often seen them come up so plentifully as to necessitate a covering of soil. Any ordinary soil will do for covering, but it should not be of too stiff a nature or it will bake and cause a hard crust on the surface. If the surface could always be kept damp the covering would not be necessary; but, as this cannot always be done, the safest plan to avoid losing the working roots is to keep them lightly covered according as occasion requires.

The matter of setting will cause little worry now, as the bright sunshine and dry atmosphere will leave the pollen easily distributed, even by the circulation of air in the house, and insect life being kept moving around more lively, can be counted on to give considerable assistance.

Firing will still be necessary for some time to come, as the night temperature is apt to fluctuate considerably. Some nights little or no fire heat will be needed, but on others the fires will have to be kept moving to maintain the proper temperature. Through the day they can be left as near a standstill as possible, but they should be kept so that they will be ready to respond when the weather indicates a necessity to have them going. Firing is a study by itself, as by judicious handling, proper service can be given when needed, and when not needed money can be saved by saving the coals. The fireman who will do some thinking and handle his fires judiciously can save his employer a good deal in fuel in the course of a season.

VISITED Chicago: H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.

SWEET corn, especially the later canners' sorts, seems to be overplentiful at present.

MAIL and telegraph service is badly disorganized in California on account of floods in the Sacramento river.

THE onion set acreage will be increased instead of being diminished, judging from present indications.

IF the weather holds as at present in the seed pea growing regions, unusually early planting will take place this year.

THE rush is for seeds for pickles just now, but White Portugal onion will have an inning before the close of the season.

SEEDING for the coming year's crop of onion sets has commenced at Chicago and a strong demand for seed has developed.

THERE were 269 bags of garden seeds on steamer United States, which sailed from New York for Copenhagen March 13.

THE remaining stock and the plant of the Thompson Seed Co., Albert Lea, Minn., were sold at auction March 23 and the business wound up.

STANDARD varieties of carrot, radish, beets and many other seeds are hard to get hold of, notwithstanding the many surplus offers that are floating around.

APPARENTLY there is no surplus of the canners' varieties of peas. Another spurt is expected in this department of the seed trade when things adjust themselves.

IT is surprising to note what a number and variety of stores in small towns are handling seeds in considerable quantity this season, pushing the business by means of local advertising.

THE far east is offering a small surplus of seed of the Globe varieties of onion. No cut in price is being made and this is taken as an indication that everything is well cleaned up.

THE tomato is one of the important crops of Maryland and the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station has described experiments in tomato growing in a booklet, just out, which will interest every seedsman.

SUMMER-LIKE weather at Chicago has livened things during the past week. Counter trade is reported far ahead of last year at this date and the market gardeners' seed and jobbing trades have beaten all records for March.

ONION sets advanced as much as 75 cents per bushel in less than two hours during Monday of this week. The supply is short, the demand strong and all colors going readily at $3 per bushel. It was feared that the end-up of the season would show a sharp decline in prices, but the unusual call has put that contingency outside the possibilities.

other places. The Cox Seed Co. was one of the oldest concerns on the coast and did a large general horticultural trade in addition to its seed business. C. C. Morse & Co. have only been in San Francisco two years, having taken over the business of the late E. J. Bowen. Previously they had confined themselves to the growing of seeds for the trade, at Santa Clara and vicinity.

It is reported that the committee on legislation of the American Seed Trade Association has received intimations from friendly members of congress that the best way to head off other legislation at the next session will be to have introduced a bill of their own preparation, which will of course safeguard the interests of both planters and seedsmen and therefore be acceptable to congress.

WEATHER AND TRADE.

No matter what the final records show as to the aggregate of sales, the season of 1907 is likely to go down in history as the most strenuous the seed trade ever has known. Spring came all at once. It was the exceptional house that did as much up to the middle of March as was done up to that date in 1906. This is particularly true of eastern houses, for winter lingered in the lap of spring, particularly in New England, until ousted of a sudden by Old Sol and almost midsummer temperatures. Summer came to the southwest ten days ago, and in the last week new records have been made at almost every weather observatory from the Rockies to the Atlantic. Summer temperatures have been general. The result was a deluge of belated mail orders, the season bursting into full bloom almost in a day. Night work has been general for a week. It is the common report that the number of mail orders received on Monday, March 25, broke all records. Not only are the mail order departments working at highest pressure, but counter trade is on in full force and seed stores are crowded beyond the possibility of satisfactory service to all. The seedsman loses, as well as the customer, when the rush is too great to be handled with care—and the worst of it is practically every customer might have bought before the rush but for that trait of human nature which causes us all to put everything off till the last moment. Wholesalers and jobbers are driven with reorders from the ever-increasing army of country retailers of seeds.

The worst feature is that it will be a short season if the weather continues so much warmer than normal.

NEW ILLINOIS FACTORY LAW.

The following account is from a local newspaper at Merner, Ill., near Bloomington, and is of interest in relation to the factory law now pending in the state legislature:

Last Friday evening, while at work at the Funk Bros.' seed house and elevator in the Grove, William Lain met with quite a painful accident. A belt in the machinery slipped, and in trying to adjust it he was caught and thrown among the rapidly revolving wheels, but fortunately escaped with one broken bone of the left arm near the wrist joint. The belt or some part of the machinery also made a clean cut around the arm just at the fracture, but not severing any artery or tendon. The wound required a dozen or more stitches to close it.

The factory law now pending would make it obligatory that the owner immediately report such an accident, with all the circumstances, to the state factory inspector, where it would be a matter of public record. Employers consider that the result of the bill, if it becomes a law, will be to largely increase the number of damage suits.

BEST VARIETY OF MUSA.

Will you please tell me the best kind of Musa Ensete, or Abyssinian banana plant, to grow outdoors? Can they be taken out of the tub or pot and planted in the open ground? How shall we treat them to make fast growth? Is it good to take off all the soil and repot in new, rich soil now? Would it be all right to store them in the cellar over winter at about 40 degrees? How soon had they better be started? We have had them in large wooden tubs for years and there is nothing doing with them.

A. B.

The Abyssinian banana, Musa Ensete, is much the best of the genus for decorative purposes. Plants taken from tubs and pots and planted outdoors in well enriched ground will make splendid growth. They should be given a situation protected as much as possible, free from high winds, which soon lacerate the handsome leaves. Plants carried over winter, if repotted or retubbed now in rich compost and placed in a warm greenhouse, will grow away quickly. The plants are best wintered in a house which does not fall below 50 to 55 degrees at night. They can, however, be kept in any frost-proof cellar, but in such a location would inevitably lose all their foliage. Some growers also adopt the plan of storing the thick, fleshy roots in dry sand over winter and the tops of plants cut back. If placed in a genial heat in spring and given moisture they will soon start to grow. Such plants, however, cannot be expected to fruit.

The easiest to grow and hardiest of the fruiting bananas is Musa Cavendishii, commonly known as the dwarf Chinese banana. If, however, fruiting is desired, the plants should be lifted before frosts come, placed in large tubs and kept in a warm greenhouse until planting out time comes around again.

TROUBLE WITH SWEET PEAS.

I mail you a few roots of sweet peas. The plants in the house, 22x100, grow up to about two feet. Then I notice that they do not do as well. They are starting to turn yellow a little on the bottom now. The house has been kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night, 50 degrees in daytime. As you will notice, there are little white bugs on the roots something like the miller bug. Could you please tell me what I can do to improve them? I have been growing sweet peas in the same house for four seasons with good results. For feeding I use rotted horse manure, and after the chrysanthe-

A. V. B.

From the appearance of the shoots enclosed we think the vines have been too thick in the rows. For best results they should be in a narrow row and two or three inches between each plant. This will cause stronger haulms and the flower stalks will have greater vigor and carry an average of three flowers each. The manuring and other details appear to have been carried out all right and sweet peas ought to do well under just such soil conditions. A temperature of 50 degrees at night should be maintained after the flowers appear, with a rise of 10 or 15 degrees during the day.

We failed to note any of the "bugs" on the roots. Probably, however, it is the same pest which frequently attacks China asters in the fields. We would advise mulching the rows well with fresh tobacco stems. The juice washed down during watering is distasteful to the

If quicker relief is desired, soak a quantity of stems and water with the juice, or, better still, procure some one of the tobacco extracts and, after watering the plants with the clear water, go over them with a watering pot with the diluted tobacco mixture, using a barrel or barrels to mix it in. Club Exhibition.

The Scranton Florists' Club recently held a very successful exhibition in Guernsey hall. No admission fee was charged and the public attended in large numbers. The local papers also devoted much space to the show.

There were a number of out-of-town exhibitors, including the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y.; John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa.; Samuel S. Pennock, Philadelphia; J. L. Dillon estate, of Bloomsburg; Davis Bros., Bloomsburg; Leo Niessen, Philadelphia; W. J. and M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind.; F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.; Yates Floral Co., Canajoharie, N. Among the special exhibits worthy of note were a handsome mantel decoration, the exhibit of Schultheis & Co., and another mantel decoration by T. B. McClintock. G. R. Clark had a table decoration set with handsome china. Near the entrance the Scranton Florists' Supply Co. had an exhibition of baskets, ribbons and other supplies.

The club has monthly exhibitions and at the end of the season will award a silver cup to the member scoring the highest aggregate number of points.

For this purpose a standing board of six judges has been appointed, whose duty it is to pass upon the exhibit of each month. The judges are William

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The weather has been fine; in fact, too warm, 90 degrees in the shade being remarkable for this time of the year. Business among the retailers was only fair: funeral work and a great many decorations of plants for spring openings of downtown stores. This week not much is looked for until the last two days before Easter.

There has been and still is an over-supply of cut flowers in this market. This applies to roses and carnations especially, there being an actual glut of these. This also applies to almost every day of last week and prices can hardly be quoted correctly, as everything was in larger supply than could be disposed of in the regular channels of trade. There is a good deal of speculation as to the Easter supply and prices. The chances are that the large supply will keep up and hold prices low.

As to lilies, there were plenty of Harrisii, longiflorum and callas in the market Monday. All bulbous stock has been a glut. Tulips, Von Sions, Dutch hyacinths and Romans went to waste. The hot weather has brought out loads of violets, which sold as low as $1 per thousand, and it looks now as if they will be scarce for Easter.

Blooming plants of all kinds are selling well. The quality is fine and a great many orders have been placed for Saturday and Sunday delivery.

Various Notes.

Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was a visitor last week, looking after the firm's Easter business.

C. Young & Sons Co. put in a busy week in the seed and plant department.

C. L. Bronson, of Paducah, Ky., spent Saturday visiting the local trade.

The stands in Union Market are alive with blooming plants and good trade is reported.

Our seedsmen all have extra help in their stores and are working overtime to supply the demand.

Fred C. Weber had a pretty window display last week, all yellow, and it was "worth its weight in gold" as an advertisement.

C. A. Kuehn is handling an extra fine lot of potted Lilium longiflorum. The largest portion of them was labeled sold.

W. C. Smith & Co. had a house full of Boston ferns in all sizes last week. The two "Bills" are disposing of them fast to the local trade.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was over March 22 to watch his team of bowlers in the congress tournament. Mr. Guy is a great bowling fan.

Easter trade will be the subject for discussion at the next Florists' Club meeting. The rose show for this meeting promises to be large and attractive.

Henry Berning's shipping trade was quite good last week. Stock of all kinds was abundant.

R. A. McPherson, of the Cottage Greenhouses, Litchfield, Ill., was here March 23 buying supplies for Easter trade.

J. H. Stevens, the Chicago florist bowler, did not stay as long as he first intended. He says the place and the weather were too hot for him and left for home after the third day.

Angermueller's place was hardly large enough to hold the stock that came in last week. Everything was plentiful.

The Pfeiffer-Newman wedding decoration last week, furnished by the Townsend Floral Co., must have been the largest ever furnished in this city. To get the flowers needed is said to have exhausted the supply of all the local wholesalers, as well as calling for many from Chicago and other places.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The last week has been an extremely busy one for the florists. There is little of note going on among society people, but, with a large amount of funeral work to fill in between church and store decorating, all hands were kept out of mischief.

Roses remain well cleaned up; white carnations also. Colored stock is somewhat overplentiful at the present writing. The same can be said about tulips and daffodils. Lilies are none too plentiful. Easter prices went into effect March 25. Roses range from $6 to $15 per hundred; carnations, from $3 to $5 per hundred; lilies, $15 per hundred; valley, $2 to $4.50 per hundred.

The outlook is good for a record-breaking Easter business.

B. Schroeter furnished the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange with over 500 lilies. Aside from lilies, other blooming plants seem plentiful. Most of the growers have found it hard to keep the stock back, as a stretch of unseasonably warm weather last week brought it along too fast.

Club Meeting.

An unusually large number of members were present at the Detroit Florists' Club's last meeting, held March 20. It would be unfair to say that a fine lunch and cigars provided by the club served as a drawing card, as this had not been previously announced.

Although an exhibition of Easter stock had been expected, there was but little on exhibition. A collection of primulas and exceptionally fine Spiraea Gladstone, shown by Fred Miesel, excited much comment. Philip Breitmeyer, vice-president-elect of the American Rose Society, held the floor for a considerable time with an interesting review of his recent eastern trip. Among other things he stated that nowhere did he see a better grown lot of blooming plants than those grown in Detroit. Lilies seem scarce everywhere.

J. F. Sullivan and Robert Unger have promised to favor the club with papers on interesting subjects the evening of the next regular meeting, April 3. Mr. Unger's paper will be on "Plant Bedding and Bedding Stock."

"TELEPHONE YOUR ORDER EARLY AND AVOID THE RUSH"

This is the substance of a notice that a large New York florist is sending to all his customers. He has several telephones in his store and caters to telephone trade.

If you haven't a telephone, order one now before the Easter rush begins.

It pays others, it will pay you.

Various Notes.

Between $500 and $600 has so far been subscribed to the guarantee fund for the national flower show by members of the Detroit Florists' Club and, with the list swelling daily, it is expected that the thousand-dollar mark will be reached ere long. This should serve as an incentive to clubs in other cities.

A destructive fire visited the store of the Lachman Floral Co., George Leadly, manager, Friday night, March 22. The stock of plants, ribbons, etc., was destroyed, either by fire or smoke. Up to present writing no attempt has been made to resume business.

Schroeter's decorating department was kept on the jump last week. Besides several smaller decorations, this firm again had charge of the spring opening decorations for our largest, as well as finest, dry-goods house. About 1,000 Beauties, roses, lilies and carnations, supplied by S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

and Bassett & Washburn, were used; also about seventy-five baskets, made up of a variety of blooming plants. Three vanloads of palms, azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons, etc., were also used.

From thirty per cent to fifty per cent of all the lilies planted in this vicinity are a loss.

The Bemb Floral Co.'s driver came forth with a stunning uniform last week. Business must be good.

Ed Beard, his wife, and their gasoline wagon got stuck in the mud out on West Fort street last Sunday, and right on the car track, too. It was an easy matter for Ed to transfer his wife to the sidewalk, but it remained for a street car to push Mr. Auto out of the mud.
 H. S.

PIERRE, S. D.—As soon as weather is more settled Enoe & Barney will build an addition to their greenhouse. The new building will be 30x90 feet.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The tide of European travel has again set in. It will gather volume as the spring advances and promises to be heavier than ever as summer approaches. Retail florists can add to their business with no greater trouble to themselves than the posting of a list of steamer sailings in the window. Or tell in a neat circular that you have facilities for the delivery of flowers on any outgoing steamer. Then mail or wire the orders to be filled to one of the Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—A big flower show is being planned by the Southern California Horticultural Society for this city for the week beginning May 1. This will be at the time of the conclave of the Mystic Shriners.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Current Comment.

While the forces at the stores are easily disposing of all available stock, the proprietors are preparing for what we hope later to declare the greatest Easter on record. We have not been able to do much "rubbering," but from the fine potted samples on display this week we are convinced that the growers are on an enforced "March" and are apt to fool all of us before April 1.

Our window attractions of late have been of much interest to the public, and originality and novelty are the cause of much comment. Neatness and skill are always commendable and as an incentive to these attributes a prize was offered to the merchants in general by the Hibernian bank for the best display emblematic of St. Patrick's day. This was won by Clarke Bros., who showed the genuine shamrock growing in small pots and various bark arrangements. An amusing incident occurred when an old rancher came into the store to price them and when told that the small pots sold for 25 cents each, exclaimed: "Gosh, darn! You fellers must be making a pile of money down here. All last summer my farm was kivered with that stuff. We call it sheep sorrel up thar." The trimmings were green and there were green carnations; in fact, everything was green, including the prize money, which was paid in greenbacks.

Expansion seems to be the ambition of all this spring. William Martin (formerly Martin & Forbes) tells us he is planning for three new houses.

Morton & Son, who located at Hillsboro last year, need more room for the growth of a healthy trade and will add two new houses.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer's, Philadelphia, was here last week and filled us up with new ideas which we will make practical use of at Easter. And then came Arnold Ringier, of the Barnard Co., Chicago, much delayed on account of washouts between here and Frisco. We cannot imagine two more conscientious workers than these two gentlemen, always interesting and ready for business. They confirm all previous reports of a splendid trade along the coast.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Incessant rain for the last week has put a damper on everything in this vicinity. The total rainfall for the season is twenty-three inches, against seventeen and one-half inches a year ago, and the end is not yet. This, in addition to the fact that Lent still continues, gives the dealers but little to be thankful for at this time. The retail stores are piled high with everything in the flower line and, although the wholesalers and growers have but a small amount of stock to cut, owing to the continued dark weather, there is still more than enough to go around.

There is the usual scarcity, however, of fancy Beauties, but with other roses and all varieties of carnations, there is an abundance. Bulbous stock is at a standstill. Valley is to be had at a lower price than I have seen it in many years. Easter lilies hold their own, however, and, unless we have an improvement in weather in a few days, there may be less on hand than the interested parties anticipate. They are being sold by the growers at from $2 to $3 per dozen for cut stems and potted lilies at from $6 to $9 per dozen.

Violets are plentiful, but they are getting weak of stem and light in color and they will soon end when the weather becomes warmer.

Green stock, with the exception of smilax, is abundant, and the weather favors everything in that line.

Business in all the bay cities is practically at a standstill at present.

Various Notes.

F. Heim, superintendent of the University Nurseries, will plant half a million young redwood trees in the hills back of Berkeley. The trees are from the state forest preserves in Mendocino county.

A large iron boiler-house and packing shed has been erected by Domoto Bros., to replace one of wood recently destroyed by fire at their Central avenue nursery, Elmhurst.

Malcom Lamond, head gardener to the city of Oakland, has a treat for the citizens of that town in the fact that he has the finest show of spring flowering bulbs ever seen in the City Hall park.

getting down into the burned district and locating themselves there. Two stores have been opened on Sixteenth street during the last week.

F. Bioletti, of Berkeley, has issued a pamphlet of great interest to vineyardists, regarding recent experiments performed on phylloxera.

C. C. Morse & Co. have absorbed the Cox Seed Co., including its holdings in San Francisco, Oakland, Livermore and other places. The Cox Seed Co. is one of the oldest concerns on the coast and did a large plant and tree business, in addition to its seed trade. C. C. Morse & Co. are the successors of E. J. Bowen, recently deceased. G.

PROFIT ON BULB STOCK.

This season is what might be termed an off year for bulbs and, although the crop of flowers is not yet entirely harvested, the bulb season in the vicinity of San Francisco is near enough to the end to recapitulate. I eliminate Easter lilies from the list, as it is yet a little too soon to figure out profits on them.

First in importance are the Paper White narcissi. These have not been an especially paying crop, nor were any of the daffodil family, with the exception of Ard Reigh, which netted the growers $5 per hundred, and at the present time Emperor is paying well at $2.50 per hundred. These are the largest prices realized, however, on these articles, and for the ordinary sorts, flowering in between, not over from 50 cents to $1 per hundred was received. These prices, of course, do not pay for the trouble of growing and handling, but they give the correct estimate of the paying quality of these flowers. Many growers have thrown their bulbs out and planted the grounds to something more profitable. Probably, after a few hundred thousands of bulbs are sacrificed in this way, good prices may be had for the balance.

The same fault can be found with Paper Whites. Only those that were artificially watered early in the fall and came into bloom during November and December made money for the growers. Those that came on at the height of the season were a loss to the bulb planter, as not over $5 per thousand was paid by the retailers, on the average.

Valley has been a fair crop for the last season and, although the prices have not been high at any time since Christmas week, there has been a steady demand. At the present writing the growers receive $4 per hundred.

I am inclined to think there will be a great scarcity of Lilium Harrisii for the Easter trade. The available stock at the present time is not over one-quarter of that usually seen, and the retailers are careful in accepting orders for future delivery. Although the growers ordered largely from the various bulb importers a year ago, after our fire many thousands of bulbs were countermanded and, as a result, only a few were planted. The Japanese varieties have not proven to be entirely up to the standard and I have seen but few good results from their handling this season.

Roman hyacinths have not been a paying crop and most of the growers use them only to fill in when other flowers are scarce.

Late flowering tulips have brought good prices so far. Dutch hyacinths have not been used to any extent, as they are not in great favor here.

Calla lilies, owing to the exceptionally mild winter, are plentiful and the price on them has remained low. Enormous quantities will be used in the interior for church decorations. The prevailing price at present is from $1 to $1.50 per hundred.

Freeseas and Narcissus poeticus are abundant and have brought good prices throughout the season. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE Wedge nursery, of Albert Lea, Minn., shipped a carload of American elms to Denver, Colo., last week.

HIRAM McFERON, of the firm of Kelly & McFeron, Columbus, Ind., has purchased his partner's interest in the nursery business.

A LARGE part of the time not devoted to railroads by the state legislature seems to be devoted to nursery legislation. Texas now has a new bill pending.

W. A. HOWELL, El Reno, Okla., says that the demand for ornamental stock already is beginning to be a feature of the nursery business in the southwest.

J. B. MASON, formerly rose propagator with McGregor Bros. Co., Springfield, O., is at Chicago and plans to locate in that vicinity, to establish a nursery for hardy stock and do a landscaping business.

THE unseasonably warm weather is against a record season in the nursery business. Growth has started with a rush and the value of storage cellars as a means of holding stock dormant and prolonging the season is again most forcibly demonstrated.

THE Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., has a landscape department in the Metropolitan building, Madison avenue and Twenty-third street, New York city, where Charles Willis Ward also makes his personal headquarters. Frank W. Smith is in charge of the landscape work.

It is talked at Rochester that at the next session of congress another bill will be introduced looking to the protection of ownership in horticultural novelties. It is the opinion of conservative men that such a bill, unless very carefully drawn and liberal, would operate against the advance of horticulture.

SEASONABLE REMINDERS.

Japanese Maples.

Japanese maples are exceedingly useful and ornamental. They can be used to advantage when in pots or tubs for various forms of decoration, both indoor and outdoor, in the hands of the jobbing gardener or the florist. For the ornamentation of large estates these charming little trees, of endless variety of color and foliage, can be used in great numbers with much effect, in groups or in single specimens here and there. They are also unapproachable for the permanent and continuous brightening up of small suburban gardens, a use to which of late they are being put in increased numbers.

Lombardy Poplar.

The Lombardy poplar is a quick-growing tree, and the astonishing rapidity of its attainment of stateliness makes it much favored and in demand for the creation of imposing effects on new places, such as the lining of both sides of an approach to a dwelling. The Lombardy poplar is also suitable for screening objectionable buildings or other objects, because it goes ahead without a halt to do the work expected of it and does it effectively in short order.

Evergreens.

Arbor-vitae make hedges with little or no prompting or guiding, and, when growing in the form of a hedge, they retain all the characteristics natural and peculiar to the unrestrained plant; and that is more than can be said of most other things used for hedges.

Colorado blue spruce (Picea pungens glauca) is a fine thing in its specimen stage, and it is surprising how rapidly it gets to that stage after a certain period. It is not so much because this variety is still rare that it is still valuable, and very valuable, but because of the increased demand that has to be met by a still somewhat limited supply of certain sizes. Planted when young, they will grow in time to be worth something.

Climbing Roses.

In the list of available roses for the transformation of ugly fences and the bare walls of sheds and other outbuildings into things of beauty, will be found varieties, which, if selected with that end in view, give a long succession of blooms. In connection with such use of roses, should it not strike the commercial man forcibly that one of the best inducements he could offer to purchasers would be the suggestion such an example would be? There are many other ways, akin to the foregoing, by which nurserymen and florists could materially increase their sales.

Herbaceous Stock.

The herbaceous or perennial phlox is in the race to stay; it is used in immense quantities in its cut state, and it is also planted very extensively in herbaceous borders.

Peonies overdone? No such thing! The craze has not yet got to its full height. They are only now making a slow, but sure, reentry after a rather long period of modest retirement, which but fitted them for the strenuous time ahead.

About the easiest thing in the world to handle successfully is the funkia in any variety. If it is desired to increase the stock the plants may be cut up in the spring just as the leaves are beginning

CALIFORNIA PRIVET.

In reply to E. Y. Teas' comment last week with reference to my notes on privet and other cuttings, I would state for Mr. Teas' benefit that those notes applied to the time at which they were written, not to what might have been done four or five months ago. As far as the making of cuttings is concerned, we have no time to bother about the past; the present and a little of the future take up all our time and attention.

Mr. Teas' remarks in regard to the comparative hardiness or otherwise of California privet are, so far as my experience of twenty years counts, against actual facts. Twenty years ago I planted about 4,000 California privets on a place situated many hundreds of miles north of Mason and Dixon's line and in all the years since then the wood was only once killed by frost, and it may be of interest to state that the cause of its being injured then was an early severe freezing. There are thousands of California privet hedges in New England and the greater number of them are not only shapely and handsome, made so by years of careful clipping, rarely retarded by the action of the weather, but they are also distinct features of the grounds they enclose and divide.

Strictly speaking, severe cold does not injuriously affect California privet, but if the weather gets suddenly cold early in the season damage may result. As stated already, there are in New England thousands of beautiful hedges of California privet, but I do not think the same can be said of that part of the country directly south of Mason and Dixon's line. It may be inferred from this that California privet thrives better in the north than in the south. R. R.

THE SILVER MAPLE.

The silver maple grows rapidly, attains a large size, but is rather short-lived. When grown in the open, this tree tends to fork near the ground and form a large, spreading crown with a short main stem. It is among the first trees to come into leaf in the spring, but loses its foliage rather early in the fall. Since the wood is brittle, the branches are easily broken by the wind. In rich alluvial soils the silver maple frequently attains a height of 115 feet and a diameter of from three to five feet.

It is a moisture-loving tree, and thrives best in river bottoms, where the soil is a deep, porous alluvium. In the west it succeeds only where the roots can go down to permanent water. It is moderately tolerant; on good situations it approaches the sugar maple in shade-enduring qualities. It is a rapid-growing tree, and in favorable situations it commonly makes a diameter increase of half an inch a year and occasionally may even double this rate.

Silver maple reproduces by stump sprouts and seed. The seed, which ripens in May or June, should be planted immediately, since it loses its vitality in a short time and will not germinate if once allowed to become dry. It should be sown in drills in rich, moist soil. The drills should be three feet apart for machine cultivation or two feet apart for hand cultivation. Only about an inch of covering is necessary. Thick sowing is advisable, since the percentage of germination is low. The nursery rows should be carefully tilled during the growing season. The seedlings will attain a height growth of from twelve to thirty-six inches during the first season. When one year old the seedlings should be set in the permanent plantation.

LENOX, MASS.

Regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, March 16. F. Heeremans was awarded a cultural certificate for a fine vase of Richmond roses. A. McConnachie won the society's checker tournament, also the medal presented by H. A. Bunyard, of New York. At the next meeting, April 6, John Farquhar, of Boston, will give a lecture, illustrated with stereopticon views, on the gardens of Italy.
